SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS—
WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 300 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert.

PERSONAL—
MADAME BRENNAN
CAN HELP YOU.
PERSONAL FACTS.

75 per cent of the people are in the wrong occupation—misfits. 60 per cent of men and women fail in business from lack of adaptation or because wrongly suited in partnership. 50 per cent or more are mismated in marriage—results, divorce. 90 per cent of men and women don't understand themselves. They are like a ship without a rudder, in danger of wrecking—how about you? 90 per cent of the people who consult Madame Brennan for personal psycho-analysis, vocational guidance, mental, social and personal readjustment, develop stronger and more attractive personalities; become more efficient, successful, prosperous and happy. The other 10 per cent don't count. How about you, reader? Ask yourself if you don't think that you should consult Madame Brennan, the woman who knows her business—who knows you. 726 S. HILL ST. Phone 61435.

WANTED—A REAL SALESMAN can find a real opportunity with
THE BEAVER BOARD COMPANIES.

This man has been selling in the Pacific Coast territory, and is familiar with such lines as lumber, sash and doors, paints, roofing or some other building specialties.

He is a clean-cut energetic fellow between the ages of 25 and 35. He is ambitious to establish his future and realizes the limitations of his present connection.

He is an analytical business man rather than the old-time drummer, he believes in co-operating closely with his dealer; he knows the ethics of the business man and formulates permanent connections with his trade. He has a clean record.

We are the largest manufacturers of our kind in the world, the pioneers of our industry. We are greatly expanding our business, which makes it necessary that we immediately enlarge our sales organization.

If this appeals to you and you have the qualifications write to our San Francisco office, 234 RIALTO BLDG., giving full details of yourself with our assurance that all communications will be strictly confidential. Your letter with full particulars, references and other information, including your telephone number will secure an immediate interview. We have a genuine opportunity for the right man.

EARL A. SHERWOOD. (SEE ME LAST.)
118 WEST PICO STREET.

The following prices will convince you a used car is the best investment:

HAYNES Clover-Leaf Roadster. New cord tires, late model. A very nice car $975.00

7-pass. CADILLAC 8, Model 53, new tires, on rear. Mechanically excellent. Paint and top good. $1,550.00. Others ask $1750.00 for this type of car.

1917 MERCER Sport Roadster. Cord tires. Just overhauled and in first-class condition $1750.00

OAKLAND 6, late model, plate glass top. Will guarantee in every way......$700.00

PACKARD Chummy 12, series 2. Used very little. Really can't tell it from a new car $2750.00

PACKARD, series 1, 5-pass. Cal. top. Wire wheels, paint excellent $2450.00

PEERLESS 8, late model. Good cord tires, plate glass top. $150.00 paint job. Runs perfect $1450.00

STANLEY Steam car. $700.00 Cal. top. The show car of Los Angeles, $3500. Can't be duplicated less than $6000. Come in and see it.

HOLMES Air Cooled (NEW) $1500.00 off list. Be sure and see this.

STUTZ, 4-pass. (NEW CAR.) $3500.00. Extra new cord tire. If you are in the market for a new Stutz there is no sense in paying $4400.00.

1920 OLDSMOBILE 8 Pace Maker. $275.00 worth of extras. Just broke in, better than new $2000.00

1918 STUDEBAKER Roadster. Used very little. $850.00. This car has wire wheels. Original paint not scratched, and CORD TIRES.

CHEVROLET, 4-90 model ....$500.00 Overhauled and mechanically first-class.

GRANT Coupe, $600.00.

RE-NEW-ED CAR DEPARTMENT.

As usual for this sale we have cut the price of every automobile in stock that we have carried over from the month before.

This is done regardless of how good a value the original price represented.

Are you familiar with the way Don Lee handles used cars?

If not you will have to see the cars before you will understand what exceptional values we are offering.

WHY
ARE SOLD.

People buy used automobiles because they don't want to pay the new price for a car of the same make—in short, to save money—an admirable motive.

SEE YOUR CAR IN ITS TRUE CONDITION.

That is—before it has been camouflaged with paint and retread tires.

SEE WHAT A FEW DOLLARS WILL DO.

WANTED—You to know that you can start your pullets and molted hens to laying by feeding DR. HESS'S POULTRY PAN-A-CE-A. It contains tonics that promote a hen's digestion, tonics that tone up the dormant egg organs, so that the proper amount of food goes to egg production and not all to flesh and fat and laziness when it's action and eggs you want. Here's a good suggestion: Provide your hens with a dust-bath, to which add DR. HESS'S INSTANT LOUSE KILLER, say once a week. It keeps down the lice. For roup use DR. HESS'S ROUP REMEDY. All guaranteed. Sold by all dealers in poultry supplies.

A MAGNIFICENT HOME IN WILSHIRE.

As MUCH as we detest using the adjective BARGAIN there is no other way we can convey to you what an opportunity this is if you are looking for a home of this character. This home in the heart of Wilshire on a beautiful street, conveniently located, is quoted at a price that defies comparison.

FIRST FLOOR: Six rooms, finished in ivory on white cedar. Matched hardwood floors, frescoed ceilings, elegant electric fixtures. Living and dining-room, library or den, breakfast-room, kitchen and tiled sink. Maid's room with large tiled bath and toilet. Large cement and latticed portico with fountain.

SECOND FLOOR: Three large bedrooms, two with connecting large tiled bath and built-in shower, one with large tiled bath with three way entrances. Inclosed sleeping porch can be used either as bedroom, sewing or restroom. Open sleeping porch which can be inclosed.

THE INTERIOR finish bespeaks taste and refinement. The built-in features, of which there are a number, are of the best material and workmanship, especially so of the mirrored closet doors and dressing tables in bedrooms.

GARAGE for two cars with man's quarters with toilet and shower. Beautiful garden and lawn with complete underground sprinkler system.

THIS HOME complete in every detail should be seen at once.

Don't pay $200 or $100 or $50 rent. You don't have to. If I show you that you can make your rent for 5-room furnished bungalow cost you less than $25, will you come to see me and do business?

Here it is. Just as far out as Pico and Figueroa or Westlake Park a beautiful Swiss bungalow expensively built with finest outlook in the city, two blocks from yellow car, no smoke, fog or dust, and almost frostless, plainly but comfortably furnished, street work done and paid, small lot, all in lawn good neighborhood and possession within 48 hours after papers are in escrow all for $4000.
$2000 down and balance 5 years at 5 per cent.

I have seen places not so good sell in past month for $10,000 and up. My business keeps me away from the city and I will not rent.

This is a private party and price is net. If agents care to handle, must add commission. Will allow $200 for painting the house. Call 211 N. Broadway today, 12 to 3, or week days 12 to 1, or write this address, but pronto. This deal will not hang around. ED CATHCART or address V, box 229, TIMES OFFICE.

SACRIFICE.
Speculators and Bargain Hunters.
Here is your chance to make some easy money, quick. Open all day Monday for inspection.

If you don't want to miss the chance of your lifetime to get a beautiful home cheap don't fail to see this wonderful place; modern in every particular. Contains 8 large, beautiful, airy rooms, four bedrooms, large music-room, library; very large dining-room, butler's pantry, beautiful kitchen, screen porch, large bathroom, 2 toilets. Fine hot air heating system. Large lot, 52 feet 6 in. wide, 150 ft. deep. Hardwood floors and everything that goes to make home comforts. Immediate possession, as house is unoccupied. Entire house outside and in has been newly painted and decorated throughout. Located 1415 MAGNOLIA. This place is to be sold regardless of value to the first fellow that makes me a decent offer for it. I have got orders to sell it at once. Owner says "Cut it loose," and I am going to do it. Go without your dinner if necessary and look at the place. Some one is going to get a swell home at a big sacrifice. P.S.: All persons who have seen this property and wish to make an offer must do so this week. Many persons have asked me what kind of an offer would buy this property. I want to say to them and to all others that I am going to sell the property to the highest bidder. Now, the thing for you to do is to make an offer what you are willing to give for it. Because you are liable to get it—because I mean business—and I am going to sell it to the highest bidder and no doubt it will go cheap. So get busy and make me an offer. If you don't you may want to kick yourself because you lost the biggest bargain in Los Angeles. I don't expect to get what this property is worth, or anywhere near it, so don't hang back. Make me your proposition and it will be laid before the owner. Don't be afraid to make an offer, because you are dealing with a gentleman and you will be treated with the utmost courtesy, no matter whether your offer is a fair one or a ridiculous one. So don't fail to go and se the property. When I say I sacrifice I mean it. Remember the location, 1415 Magnolia.

ONE OF HOLLYWOOD'S SHOW PLACES.

Situated on high corner lot, 95x190 feet, near foothills. A combination of IMPOSING MANSION and modern comfortable HOME. This out-of-the-ordinary place is constructed only as an Eastern man builds for his own residence—solid, substantial, up-to-date; nothing slighted, nothing overlooked. YOU WILL BE IMPRESSED with the massive walls tinted a soft cream; quaint chimneys; wrought-iron grills, handsome clay tile roof, terraced flower gardens, brick paved patio, vine-covered pergolas, terra cotta seats, vases and bird baths, fountain and lotus pool, and the beautiful landscaping of tropical plants and trees. THERE IS AN AIR OF COSINESS AND COMFORT about the interior seldom attained. The light, sunshiny rooms are tastefully decorated in harmonious colorings, finished in mahogany, natural birch and old ivory; consisting of living room, dining room, breakfast room, four bedrooms, white tile kitchen, three bathrooms, sewing room, finished basement, laundry, large storeroom and fruit cellar. Ruud water heater, thermostatically controlled heating plant, including every innovation for convenience and comfort. Changed business conditions necessitates my sacrificing this HOME WITHOUT A PEER for thousands less than its cost. Price $42,000.00. Terms. FOR SALE—

BUNGALOW COURT.

For sale in Hollywood, just north of Hollywood Blvd., a 4-unit bungalow court. There are 3 cement and 1 frame unit. The cement units are exceedingly well constructed, and will be just as good 10 years hence as now. All the units are beautifully furnished. The lot is 50x190 and has plenty of room on account of its depth for 2 or more units. The income of $330 a month shows a return of over 16 per cent on the price asked. The scale of rents is very low for these times and can be maintained indefinitely. This bungalow court, with its well-built units, its beautiful grounds, its closeness to the car line, promises absolute permanency of income. In these days of inflated rents we consider this a wonderful investment at the price asked—$24,000. For full information ask for MR. NIMMER or MR. PURCELL, at Holly 781.

FOR SALE—BY OWNER.
$35,000.

A residence of Assyrian architecture which stands entirely alone in unique design and artistic value, being a perfect gem in arrangement and interior decoration. Each room is finished by the hand of a European artist, the living-room ceiling being a masterpiece in figures and designs. The domed ceiling and walls of the dining room are elaborately stenciled over a background of gold leaf. The solarium connecting these two rooms has a roof of glass and features a lovely fountain of specially designed tile. Lighting fixtures by the most skillful wrought-iron artisan of Los Angeles. This nine-room residence, completed only last April, is built of hollow tile, and only the best of materials have been used throughout the construction. There are four bedrooms, three baths, electrically controlled gas furnace, instantaneous water heater, garage, sprinkler systems, and many rare tropical fruit trees. The lot, 88x190, is situated in a frostless belt on the northwest corner of Laurel avenue and Fountain street. This home was not built to sell, and is now placed on the market by reason of owner's leaving the city.

FOR SALE—

CARLSBAD-BY-THE-SEA.

Now is the time to secure a tract of frostless, irrigated land at CARLSBAD. Sales are being made almost daily, new homes are being built and shipments of early winter peas have begun. Green peas are bringing our ranchers as high as thirty cents per pound on the eastern market. Three cars of peas were shipped last week. Soon we will be shipping three cars daily. 6000 pounds of peas per acre is the average return. Figure it out. You will find growing green peas and other vegetables and fruits at Carlsbad highly profitable.

And all this in a high class American community, and in a climate that cannot be excelled. 83 miles south of Los Angeles on the main line of the Santa Fe Railway, and State highway, on a high bluff overlooking the sea. Come in and arrange to go out with us and see this district, while crops are in full production. For maps, folders, prices, etc., call on or write

IMPROVED OR UNIMPROVED CITY PROPERTY.

Will trade my 50-acre FROSTLESS Carlsbad ranch, fully water stocked, concrete irrigating system, heavily fertilized. Close to the ocean, paved highway and railway. Ideal living conditions. Most equable climate in California. Am too busy in the city to farm. In spite of this, can show you now the finest WINTER crop you have ever seen. Now harvesting—from November 1 to February 1. When this is finished we grow a second crop in the early spring and summer. TWO CROPS A YEAR. Expect to clear $250 to $400 per acre, net profit, on this winter's crop alone.

If you know anything about California land and climatic conditions, you can see for yourself. I solicit the attention of experienced and successful business men and ranchers. My property all clear. Might assume.

GET THESE FACTS.

If you are looking for real merit lands that are the most substantial investment in Southern California today—if it means anything to you to deal with a reliable corporation, who are selling their own land direct to you—if you want land without hardpan, adobe or alkali, where climate, soil and water are never idle, come to Yucaipa and join the happy, prosperous people here.

YUCAIPA VALLEY

is the most practical proven apple, cherry and deciduous fruit-growing section in Southern California. We have just placed on the market a tract especially adapted to almond and earliest peach growing in the valley, facing paved boulevard and Ocean to Ocean Highway completed, including the best irrigation system. Think of it—no Japanese, Chinese or Hindus to take a lot of joy out of life. If these facts are big enough to interest you, then do yourself the justice and investigate these facts before buying elsewhere. Take a trip with us in our private auto, only three hours from Sixth and Main streets.

No connection with any other land project in the Yucaipa Valley.

Here is the choice of Antelope Valley, consisting of 160 acres all under cultivation: 77 acres alfalfa, 10 acres in buildings, corrals, orchard. Own water system, fully developed and ample supply. Large modern 10-room residence, bunk-house, large barns, sheds and corrals all in keeping. All necessary tools and equipment for a 1st-class going ranch, with small amount of live stock. Within seven miles of good live town and railroad, and 3 hours from Los Angeles on boulevard. Owner must sacrifice. THE BUILDINGS ALONE CANNOT BE DUPLICATED FOR THE PRICE ASKED. This is a rare opportunity and will not last long. Inquire of Frank O. Wells, manager land dept.

FRANK MELINE COMPANY,
Holly 781. 6777 Hollywood Blvd. at Highland.

FOR SALE—
Did you ever have an opportunity to buy land like this before?

640 acres of sandy silt loam at only $60 per acre.

You pay nothing for 5 years but interest at 6 per cent, and then 1-5 each year.

Now, here is the proposition. You will need money enough to put down a well and equip a pumping plant, to put part of the section to trees or vines and the balance to alfalfa and grain.

With a pumping plant this land is worth $200 per acre. In vines or alfalfa it is worth $400 to $600 per acre.

All you require is money enough to get the land to producing, then the land will soon pay for itself and improvements.

One to five sections at the above terms and prices.

FOR SALE—

ATTENTION, OIL SPECULATOR!

160 acres best alfalfa land, all in barley, under best gravity water system in California, canals, side gates, etc., all in; land all smooth and first class. Adjoining this 1-4 section one of the big oil companies of California are now drilling for oil, well 1500 feet, abundance of natural gas and prospects very good for oil. This 160 is worth $200 for agricultural purposes, but can be had for $150; one-fourth cash. If oil is struck where now drilling in the adjoining 1-4 section it will sell for $1000 per acre. Remember, if you buy this 160 you are not speculating in desert oil leases, but in a safe agricultural farm with no chance to lose, and a fortune to win if oil is struck.

Also 40 acres same terms and conditions.

Also 240 acres, 3 miles nearer town, 160 acres first-class bottom land and in barley. Same water system, one flowing well domestic use, half mile paved road and school. Owner orders this sold for $100 per acre if taken by 1st January. Terms, 1-4 cash. This is the best buy in San Joaquin Valley I know about. It also has good oil possibilities.

For Sale.

FOR EXCHANGE—EASTERN FARM.

LOCATION—On main highway from New York City to Albany, 3 miles from city of Newburgh, 3 miles from town of Cornwall-on-Hudson. 55 miles from New York City.

70 ACRES HIGHLY IMPROVED, as follows:

HOUSE—14 rooms, 2 bathrooms, fine cellar, cemented; steam heat, electric light, telephone private wire Newburgh exchange, cement dairy, motor driven separator, churn, etc. Also separate steam plant for dairy.
BARNS—Modern, up-to-date, hollow tile construction, asbestos shingle roof, cement floors, electric light.
COW STABLE—Modern, cement floors, electric light, etc.
HORSE STABLE—Modern, cement floors, electric light, etc.
HOG HOUSE—Modern, cement floors, electric light.
The above buildings supplied with running water.
LARGE MACHINE HOUSE—Cement floor.
ICE HOUSE—Hollow tile, ample in size.
SMOKE HOUSE—Cement floor, built-in fireplace, etc.

All buildings are in excellent repair and are ample in size for the farm.

The garage will accommodate two large cars and there is a CARRIAGE HOUSE and ample storage for wagons, etc.

The WATER SUPPLY is obtained from a never-failing spring and is piped to every field as well as to all the buildings. This spring not only supplies water to this farm but to four adjoining properties and not over 5 per cent of its flow is used.

The land is in A-1 condition and produces excellent crops. Ideally located, one mile to R.R. station. 2 stations within two miles and 4 different lines within 3 miles. Also boat service Newburgh and Cornwall to New York. Beautiful view of the Hudson Highlands.

In addition to the above buildings there is a COMPLETE CHICKEN PLANT, cement floors, running water, etc. A SEVEN-ROOM TENANT HOUSE with electric light, hot and cold water, cement cellar, etc. Apple orchard of 3000 trees, small peach orchard, plum orchard, small fruits. This property would be hard to duplicate for location, quality of soil and buildings.

$45,000 clear; trade for California ranch.

FOR SALE—
CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS.
YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY—In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydminster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. On similar land Seager Wheeler grows the world's prize wheat. Near Lloydminster the world's prize oats have been grown, and butter of the highest quality is made. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district.

These lands can be bought now at an average price of about $18.00 per acre. You pay down 10 per cent. If land is purchased under settlement conditions, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6 per cent. M. E. THORNTON, Supt. of Colonization, Canadian Pacific Railway, 101 Ninth Ave., E. Calgary, Alberta.

FOR SALE—OREGON FRUIT AND FARM LANDS. GOVERNMENT LANDS—

NEVADA VALLEY'S ARTESIAN WATER BELTS.

Men and women! Nevada welcomes you to obtain 640 acres (one mile square) rich agricultural land under the Pittman Act, applying Nevada only, no residence required. Consult your map, select the point in California you desire to adjoin, call and we will advise if available. Thousands of locations already taken, but all are not gone. Quick action is imperative if you would be near a town, railroad or National auto highway. Land grows alfalfa, cotton, corn, potatoes, grapes, all fruits except citrus—everything you see in Southern California, in unsurpassed luxuriance. No better live stock country. No alkali on our locations. Deep, rich soil. Artesian and pumping wells. To our locators a 45 Holt, tractor, complete equipment, plows, etc.; also a water well drilling rig, and many other advantages available practically at cost. Cheap power in future from government dam. Greatest opportunity we have ever known for young pioneers of grit, gumption and "get there." Samples soil, crops, photographs at NEVADA VALLEYS DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION, 223 Los Angeles Investment Bldg., Broadway at Eighth st.

DO YOU WANT 320 acres of fine land where you can raise grain, fruits of nearly every kind, wheat, rye, barley, corn and oats, apples, peaches, figs, pears, grapes and vegetables of all kinds, where your cattle can run on fine range the year round and do well—in fact, a fine climate, near highway, twenty miles of railroad? This land is practically level, good soil, no alkali or hardpan, good roads, thousands of quail and rabbits. If you are an American citizen, with all your rights, would you be interested if a responsible person agreed to assist you in getting possession of 320 acres of this land for five years without interest or taxes, with the assurance of perfect title at the end of term, with nothing more to pay. If this proposition would interest you and you are assured you can acquire all this at once for $500 and have all necessary traveling expense and filing fees paid back out of the $500. If interested, see us at once. W. T. EDWARDS, Secretary, 404 Bradbury Bldg., 3rd and Broadway.

RELINQUISHMENT, Antelope Valley. A bargain. 80 acres level, part has been in crop. Fenced with hog wire, plenty water, engine, tanks, house, windmill, etc. Implements alone worth twice amount asked. FOR SALE—

ORANGE GROVES.

Buy now while the buying is good. As the crop colors and shows much larger the prices will advance—they always do. Nothing pays as well as a good grove. Buy only from real estate men who are themselves owners of groves. They BELIEVE in groves and know about them. Ask to see the BEST. They are the cheapest in the end. Here's an excellent buy, though not yet an income producer. Every tree a pedigreed tree. Get that? Every bud taken from big producing, big-paying trees. It is $1400 an acre now, but it will go to $3000 an acre, then $4000, then $5000. Just as sure as tourists are coming to California. Don't put off till after January 1st. You'll pay more then.

No. 1608—30 acres, 10 navels, 10 Valencias and 10 lemons. $1400 an acre. One-third cash will handle it and long time on balance. Away up in the foothills, on paved boulevard. Has its own water and an extra amount. You'd always be proud of this grove; 6 years old.

No. 1567—10 acres, navels and lemons. $17,000. Double water right. Six-room modern bungalow. Possession at once. $8000 cash and time. On paved road.

No. 1600—20 acres navels. $75,000. Water, water, water! All kinds of water, and water to sell, $20,000 of it. Has been paying about $15,000 a year. Let's look at packing-house records. They don't lie. Beautiful large modern house, gas, electricity and city water. If you have other property, $15,000 will handle it. Let grove pay the rest.

No. 1607—20 acres navels. $45,000. Fine water right and lots of it. Seven-room modern bungalow. Half cash and time, perhaps less.

No. 1597—7 acres, navels and Valencias. $18,000. Splendid water right; small tractor. Five-room house. A big paying grove. In 1918 it paid $10,000. Let's look at packing-house record. $5000 and one-third out of crop till $3750 is paid; balance mortgage.

Have some cheap young groves, low as $5000.

ORANGE GROVES—RIVERSIDE.

10-acre orange grove in one of the best locations in Riverside. All navels, full bearing, deep, rich soil, and an abundance of cheap water. Trees have been pruned and heavily fertilized and in fine condition with good crop, estimated 4500 boxes. This place will need no more expense for one year. This is a wonderful bargain at $17,000.

16 acres, all navels, located in an absolutely frostless section. Was never known to freeze. Fine soil. Plenty of water. Has been pruned and well fertilized. This place can be had for $24,000.

FOR SALE—15 acres, 5 acres 5-year budded walnuts, now commencing to bear nicely. 10 acres solid to 9-year-old Valencia oranges. Fine large trees. Soil and climatic conditions unexcelled. No heaters used. I've been continually selling orange groves for the past seventeen years, and I've seen very heavy orange crops, but if there is a ten-acre orange grove anywhere in better producing condition than this orange grove, or, with a heavier crop of fruit for the age of the trees than this grove now has, I would like to see it. Considerable propping of the limbs will be required later, to prevent them breaking with the heavy load of fruit. When this grove is a few years older, with proper care of the grove, the income therefrom will be prodigious. Finely located on prominent paved boulevard. Good electric pumping plant on the property, belonging thereto, lifting by government test 56 inches of water. Good 5-room plastered house, two large barns, tractor and ranch tools included. The owner of this choice property has present business plans in view, and, for this reason, he has recently placed the property in my hands for sale at a price of $45,000. To the right party, good terms on the major portion of the purchase price will be given. Property clear. Exclusive sale.

FOR SALE—

ANAHEIM BARGAIN.

16 acres Valencias, with few navels scattered over the grove; trees are 7 years old; very uniform.

A crop which is a feast to look at. Very heavy, at least $8000; they will have to begin propping now to keep limbs from breaking off; what a sight they will become when full-sized and colored.

Water very cheap; 1-3 interest in pumping plant, cost about 30c per hour for 100 inches. Piped to each tree row. Double line with K.T. outlets.

Located 2½ miles south and west of Anaheim, on good oiled road and near boulevards. Price $36,000. Terms if desired.

ORANGE, LEMON, WALNUT GROVES—For Sale and Exchange.

For Sale.

FOR SALE—THREE LA VERNE ORANGE GROVES.

PROSPECTIVE ORANGE GROVE BUYERS, BUY ORANGE GROVES NOW. At present orange grove prices, if you expect the crop included, you must soon get busy. The Navel orange crop is now rapidly coloring, and maturing, and orange grove prices are bound to be higher shortly. At this particular time in the orange crop season, orange grove prices invariably tend upward. As regards immunity from damaging frosts, the La Verne citrus district is one of the safest, and best in Southern California. Good income orange groves in the La Verne section sell at from $3000 to $5000 the acre. I here offer for quick sale, three recently listed, recently inspected orange groves. I consider these properties excellent value. No buildings on either property, but each grove is finely located, with ideal home building site.

No. 1.—10 acres, 2-3 Valencias, 1-3 Navels, 12 years old. Fine large trees, in absolutely first-class condition. A high-class orange grove. Heavily fertilized and fumigated. Excellent soil and water right. Crop very heavy, estimate 7000 boxes. On a conservative estimate, this crop should bring at least $10,000. Price, including crop, $36,000. Terms, cash $21,000, no less; remainder $15,000, three years' time.

No. 2.—Ten acres, ¾ Valencias, ¼ Navels, 10 years old. Recently fertilized, and now being fumigated. Water right appurtenant valued at $3000. Owing to failure to fumigate this grove last winter for the eradication of scale, the crop now on the trees is very light, possibly 1000 field boxes. With a full normal crop, this grove should readily sell for $30,000. The owner now requires money to complete payment on a recent investment, and has cut the price to $21,000. No less money will buy it. Buyer can assume present loan mortgage of $9500, the remainder, $11,500 must be cash. The La Verne orange packing-house will certify that the returns from the grove for the past four seasons, total $20,729.82. This is certainly a big record for a ten-acre orange grove, only ten years old. Here is the La Verne packing-house record: 1916-17, $5751.65; 1917-18, $3961.45; 1918-19, $6386.89; 1919-20, $4629.83. Total for the past four seasons, $20,729.82, or an annual average of $5182.45.

No. 3.—10½ acres, 9-year Navels. Fairly good crop, about 3000 boxes. Well fertilized, fumigated, good condition. Price $22,000. $18,000 can be paid in installments of $1000 or more annually. J. A. FITCH, 8 Brady Bldg., Pomona. Phones, office, 102; Res. 77.

FOR SALE—ORANGE GROVE BARGAINS.

Five acres, a fine home place, 3½ acres in oranges, balance in all kinds of fruit and garden. Splendid buildings, which would cost as much as the purchase price today. Yours for $8000.

Fifteen acres, ½ large Navels, ½ Valencias, all well fertilized and in fine condition. Crop worth $7500. One-half mile from railroad and packing house. Price $21,000, easy terms.

Thirteen and two-thirds acres of very large Navels, with a crop worth $8500. As frostless as can be found. The 1912-1913 crop on this place was harvested. Fine soil and the best water right in California. $2000 per acre.

Ten acres of very large Navel trees, and five acres of Valencias, with a $10,000 crop almost ready to harvest. One of the finest 8-room houses in Riverside. It would cost over $15,000 to put up the buildings now on the grove. Owner is sick in the East and must sell. Price $30,000. This place is worth $50,000.

Twenty-three acres on boulevard, with gas, light and telephone lines. Eighteen acres set to full bearing Navels and Valencias with an $8000 crop. Fine building site with large and beautiful shade trees. Price $20,000, terms $7500 cash, and balance $500 per year.

MINES AND MINING.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

Don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill small diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machines ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write for particulars and circulars.

PARTY controlling one developed and 5 undeveloped silver mines in Sonora, Mex., all in proven district and close to and adjoining one of the world's big mines, with electric power and transportation at hand, wants a partner with some capital and a lot of energy to assist in the promotion or marketing of the properties. Prefer a man with the ability to take care of the business end and leave the mining and field work to me. This property acquired cheaply from the Mexican government through forfeiture of original owner. Hence the margin of profits will be large. Can furnish best of references and will expect same from party answering. P.O. BOX 853, Douglas, Ariz.

OWNER wants you to put up the money to help him do the assessment work on a group of good silver, gold, copper claims. A good deal of work done. Has water and timber. Will give liberal interest. You can't afford to miss this for what it will cost you. T. F. MOORE, 405 Grant Bldg.

PARTNERSHIP
AUTO REPAIR SHOP.
Do you like mechanical work? If you do here is your opportunity to purchase an equal half interest in an auto repair shop that is jammed to the doors with work. All the owner requires of you is that you be a willing worker and if you are he will teach you the business for he is an expert auto mechanic. He is clearing $450 monthly working alone and is turning away work because he cannot handle all that is brought to him. With a man who is not afraid of work the profits can be quickly doubled. The price for equal half interest is $750.

GROCERY.
Clearing better than $450 monthly and it's in good West Side location near a large public school with a 5-room flat above the store. Owner will invoice the stock and the price for stock and fixtures will be about $4500.

PARTNERSHIP SPECIAL.
Partnership offered to a person who can furnish references in a business that is now clearing from $800 to $900 monthly. Owner prefers a man with an auto but if you show him you are a live wire he will consider you if you haven't got one. It's an interesting line of work that has grown very rapidly and is still continuing to grow. There is more work than can be taken care of by one man and it's a business that can be handled more efficiently by partners than by hired help. The price for equal half includes a half interest in building and furniture, and is only $950.

RESTAURANT.
A downtown restaurant positively clearing from $500 to $600 at present; with a 3-year lease at $200 monthly and with fixtures and stock that will invoice $3500. The price is $4000. This restaurant is located right in the heart of the business section where leases are almost impossible to get.

CONFECTIONERY.
Doing an average business of $40 daily and in good downtown location. There is a very heavy stock, large fountain and backbar and swell fixtures throughout. Good living quarters can be arranged if desired. The price is $2000 and value in sight for every dollar.

PARTNERSHIP.
POOL, CIGARS AND SOFT DRINKS.
Partnership offered in the largest pool, cigar and soft drink hall in large near-by city. Has a 5-year lease on principal downtown corner and the finest equipment that can be purchased. You should have no trouble in clearing $500 monthly for yourself in this business. No experience is required as it is a line of work that is easily learned and owner will teach you. The price for equal half interest is $3000.

GARAGE AND REPAIRS.
A 40-car capacity Hollywood garage with a very large repair dept. that employs several mechanics all the time. There is a 4-year lease at $100 monthly. The price is $7000 and the stock, tools, and equipment will invoice nearly that amount.

CONFECTIONERY AND GROCERY.
A dandy little buy at only $800. There are good living quarters, heavy stock and nice fixtures. A live wire in this location can easily clear $200 monthly. There is value here for every dollar you invest.

PARTNERSHIP.
TAILORING, PRESSING AND CLEANING.
Your chance to learn the tailoring, pressing and cleaning business and make $300 a month while learning. The owner has been at same location for 7 years and has a well-established trade, fully equipped shop, and heavy stock of materials on hand. He requires a wide-awake partner and will teach you the trade if you are not afraid of work. The price for equal half interest is $850 and it is easily worth that price for it will invoice double that amount.

GROCERY.
Doing a straight cash and carry business of $125 daily. There is a 5-room flat above the store, very good fixtures and owner will invoice the stock. The price for stock and fixtures will be about $3100.

PARTNERSHIP.
AUTO TRIMMING AND TOP SHOP.
In good location and with a well established trade that is clearing the owner $400 monthly at present and he is working alone. There is a very heavy stock of material on hand, a complete equipment in every way and a 2-year lease. There is more work coming into the shop than owner can do alone and he would rather have an energetic partner than hired help. He will teach you the business from A to Z but expects you to work for there is plenty of work to be done. The price for equal half interest is $650.

OIL STATION.
Located at the corner of two principal West Side streets and positively selling 350 gals. of gas daily. You can have a trial to prove it. There is a heavy stock of accessories on hand and a complete equipment in every way. Carries a large line of tires, has a long lease. The price is $4500 and you can have very reasonable terms.

PARTNERSHIP.
GARAGE AND REPAIRS.
The owner of this garage is a hustler and is outside a great deal bringing in business. He employs 2 mechanics at present and finds that they are not working all the time while he is out. He wants a partner that he can depend upon to see that the business is properly handled in his absence. He is positively clearing $750 monthly at present. There is an 8-year lease and $4500 worth of stock and equipment on hand. Has large storage capacity and experience is not required as your duties will be to look after the storage end of the business. The price for equal half interest is $2800.

CIGAR STAND.
You can have a week's trial to prove that this business is averaging better than $30 daily. It's located right in the heart of the city with a 2½-year lease, very heavy stock and swell fixtures. The price is $1500 and you get value for every dollar you invest.

GROCERY.
A dandy little grocery located on busy West Side street and doing an average all-cash no-delivery business of $50 daily. The stock and fixtures will easily invoice the price asked. The price is $1850.

REALTORS GETTING READY FOR DECEMBER MEETING.

Expect a Record-Breaking Attendance; Officers of the National Body Will be Here.

Invitations to attend the annual convention of the California Real Estate Association, to be held here during the three days of December 9 to 11, inclusive, were sent out yesterday by S. Ross Fenner, secretary of the Los Angeles Realty Board, to members of the organization throughout the State. A record-breaking attendance is expected this year by Mr. Fenner, who estimates that fully 500 members, out of a total membership of 700 in the State association, will assemble in Los Angeles for the convention.

Plans for the entertainment of the visitors are now being whipped into shape, and the final program, it is expected, will be ready for distribution early next week. The business program is being arranged by Fred E. Reed, president of the State association, and when his plans have been completed and forwarded to the local Realty Board the entertainment program will be definitely worked out.

Included in the program of entertainment, however, will be a tea, a theater party, a midnight supper, and a dinner at the Los Angeles Country Club for the wives of the realtors who attend the convention, while for the men there will be a stag smoker, boxing and wrestling matches, vaudeville acts, and an automobile drive around Los Angeles and the surrounding country. The convention will be concluded with a banquet to be held on Saturday evening, December 11, at the Alexandria Hotel.

BUSINESS SESSIONS.

The business sessions will be scattered through the three days of the convention. A series of luncheons are to be held, at which there will be one or two well-known speakers present to discuss matters of interest to the realty men. Arrangements are now being made to get a number of prominent men here during the convention to discuss some of the vital questions which have a bearing on the real estate business. A telegram was received yesterday from Tom Ingersoll, secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, stating that he would be in Los Angeles for at least part of the convention, and that he hoped to be able to spend the entire three days here. F. E. Taylor of Portland, Or., president of the national organization, will also attend.

Among the subjects which will be taken under discussion will be the taxation of real estate, irrigation district projects, reclamation projects, such as that of the Colorado River, the present real estate license law and needed amendments, and the control of colonization projects. Particular effort will be paid to a discussion of the latter, since the need is felt by members of the organization, of some means of controlling and putting out of existence fraudulent colonization schemes.

Reservations for those who attend the convention are to be made at the Alexandria Hotel, and it is hoped that accommodations can be found for all of the visitors to the convention.

Reservations for those who attend the meeting are to be made at the Alexandria Hotel, preliminary arrangements having already been made for their accommodation. All business sessions will be held in the ballroom of the Alexandria, which is to be the hub of the activities of the realty men during the three days of the convention. While the groundwork for the convention is all completed, as far as possible until the business program is received from Mr. Reed, a meeting of the general committee will be held tomorrow to work out further details of entertainment.

The general committee, which has charge of all arrangements, is composed of Elmer E. Cole, general chairman; Frank Ryan and O. A. Vickrey. The executive heads of other committees are as follows: H. H. Culver, smoker committee; J. W. Wilkinson, banquet committee; H. L. Cornish, transportation and automobile drives; William H. Akin, hotel and registration; O. G. Wildey, badges and decorations; William A. Ryon, baggage and transfer; Harold Janss, program committee; C. C. C. Tatum, finance committee, and Mrs. W. I. Hollingsworth, ladies' committee.

St. John's Will Build New Home on West Adams.

Plans for a new building for St. John's Episcopal Church, to cost between $200,000 and $300,000, are now being prepared in New York, according to Rev. George Davidson, pastor of the church. Bertrand Goodyear of New York, one of the foremost church architects in the country, has been commissioned to prepare the plans for the new structure, which will be one of the finest buildings of its kind in the city. It is expected that these plans will be finished about the first of the year, when they will be submitted to the vestry of the church for approval.

In preparation for the new structure, three additional lots, adjoining the present church property on West Adams street, have been purchased. These lots, facing on West Twenty-seventh street, give the church property a frontage on three streets, the church site now owning 108 feet on Figueroa street, 287 on West Adams street, and 160 feet on Twenty-seventh street. The new church will be built to front on the West Adams-street side of the property. A campaign is now under way to raise money for the new structure.

HOLLYWOOD STORE LEASED TO BAKERY.

The Chatterton System of Bakeries will open a Hollywood store in the one-story building at 7024 Hollywood Boulevard, upon which a ten-year lease has been taken for a total rental of approximately $50,000. A tile floor and tile store front, together with a modern lunchroom, will be installed, these improvements to be made at a cost of $17,000. The building is at present occupied by the Oakland Automobile agency. The lease was transacted through E. W. Ross of W. W. Mines & Co. Mr. Ross also reports the leasing of the second floor of the building to be erected at Seventh and Francisco streets by the Assets Realization Company to Carl F. Horn for a total rental of $190,000. Arrangements are now being made for the leasing of the first-floor stores of the new building.

GROWERS OF COTTON ARE OPTIMISTIC.

Imperial Valley Farmers Express Confidence Despite Low Market.

That a spirit of optimism prevails in Imperial Valley is indicated by correspondence received at the Los Angeles office of the Imperial Valley Farm Lands Association and by reports of recent visitors to the valley.

Cotton growers do not seem at all downhearted because of the temporary market slump, it is asserted. The belief prevails that, as a result of the tariff protection assured by the Republican administration, gradual improvement in the cotton situation will be manifested and this year's bumper crop marketed at a good profit.

M. J. Martinsen, proprietor of Fortuna farm and one of the most successful ranchers in the Calipatria-Niland district, reports that he now has one of the finest long-staple cotton crops ever raised in the valley, which, it is believed, will average over three-quarters of a bale to the acre. Mr. Martinsen estimates, in a recent letter, that his yield from forty-five acres will amount to over thirty bales.

John Simonds, a New Orleans cotton dealer, who recently visited the Imperial Valley in the course of a vacation trip to Southern California, states that he was impressed with the difference in the attitude of the cotton growers of Imperial Valley and those of the regular cotton belt of the South.

FARMERS CONFIDENT.

"In spite of efforts to bring about diversified farming in the South," stated Mr. Simonds, "most of it is, in reality, a one-crop district, and when anything happens to the cotton market consternation prevails. In Imperial Valley, however, I found the farmers confident in the knowledge that they can secure quick and satisfactory returns from alfalfa, grain and other staple crops, with the added advantage of being able to produce first-grade cotton when the market conditions are favorable.

"I do not think that your farmers really appreciate their tremendous advantage. If some of them could visit certain parts of the South they would return, to place a much higher valuation upon their Imperial Valley land."

RUSH IMPROVEMENTS.

Improvements in Wilshire Crest, the new tract, which has been placed on the market by David Barry & Co., and William F. Young, are being rushed to completion as rapidly as possible. These improvements will include macadamized and paved streets, cement curbs and sidewalks, parkings, sewer, gas, water and electricity. A feature of the new tract will be the sunken gardens, for which purpose the arroyo, running along the west side of the property, will be utilized. Workmen are at present engaged in laying out the sunken gardens, building dams at regular intervals so as to provide shallow lakes and pools, which will be supplied by an artificial stream of water.

TO PASS RECORD OF LAST MONTH.

Although the number of building permits issued during the first three weeks of November is slightly lower than for the corresponding period in October, the valuation is considerably greater, and the November record will exceed that of last month by a liberal margin, according to C. V. Welch, chief clerk of the building department. During the first three weeks of October 2108 permits, with a total valuation of $4,071,811, were taken out, while during the first three weeks of September there were 1876 permits, with a valuation of $5,137,011, issued by the building inspector. The slight decrease in the number of permits is attributed to the approach of the holiday season and the fact that many contractors are unable to take any new jobs until those upon which they are now working are completed.

TO REBUILD SOON.

Coast Envelope Company Buys Site for New Factory.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Coast Envelope Company of the purchase of a site for a new factory building at the northeast corner of Santa Fe avenue and Jesse street. The lot has a frontage of 160 feet on Santa Fe avenue, with a depth of 140 feet, and is provided with a spur track. The sale was handled through Mr. Elsner of the J. W. Lewis Company.

According to tentative plans which have been prepared, the new building will be a two-story class A structure of reinforced concrete, with windows on all sides of the building to provide a maximum of daylight. The factory of the Coast Envelope Company, pioneer manufacturers of envelopes in Los Angeles, was recently destroyed by fire. At the time of the fire, however, the company had a number of envelope-making machines en route to Los Angeles, and these have been housed in a temporary building to carry on production until the new factory is completed. Temporary offices have been established by the company in the Higgins Building. It is expected that the new factory will be ready for occupancy early next spring.

NEW BRANCHES OPENED.

Edwards & Wildey Company, realty brokers, announce the opening of three new branch offices. An office has been established at 544 South Western avenue, through which the firm will specialize in Wilshire district property of all classes. A branch has also been established at 7601 Sunset Boulevard to handle Hollywood properties, and a third branch has been opened at 4775 Santa Monica Boulevard. Offices will also be maintained at Eagle Rock and Glendale.

TO START WORK ON NEW THEATER

Junior Orpheum to Cost Million and Half.

General Contracts Awarded to Local Firms.

Other Improvements Planned for Hill and Olive.

Plans for the new Orpheum Theater, to be erected at the southwest corner of Eighth and Hill streets, have been completed, the general contracts for the work have been awarded and the construction of the building will be started in the near future, according to a statement made yesterday by G. Albert Landsburgh of San Francisco, architect for the structure, who is in Los Angeles for the purpose of submitting the working drawings to J. J. Backus, city building inspector, preparatory to taking out a permit for the building. The general plans, said Mr. Landsburgh, have already been approved by Mr. Backus, and the details of construction are now under consideration.

The Hill-street Theater, as it will be called, will cost in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. It will be an eight-story office and loft building of class A construction, and the arrangement of the upper floors will be planned so as to suit the convenience of the tenants. On the first floor there will be ten stores, five on the Hill-street frontage, and five on Eighth street, and the main lobby will be accessible from the corner, at the base of the tower. This lobby, 40x80 feet, and finished in polychrome terra cotta, will lead to an interior foyer, through which access will be had to the auditorium and to the mezzanine floor, which will contain the ladies' parlors, children's playroom, smoking rooms and other conveniences for the use of patrons.

MODERN EQUIPMENT.

The auditorium, stated Mr. Lansburgh, will be finished in a novel manner, the entire architectural plan, both exterior and interior, following the Spanish plateresque style. A modern air-cooling and heating system will be installed, and a fine pipe organ has been ordered by Martin Beck, president of the Orpheum circuit, for installation as soon as the building is completed.

The general contract for the building has been awarded to McDonald and Kahn, and the contract for the steel has been let to the Llewellyn Iron Works. All of the other materials to be used in the construction of the building will be purchased from local dealers, it is stated. W. W. Mines & Co. will act as agents for the building upon its completion.

The property, purchased several months ago by Martin Beck and associates, has a frontage of 175 feet on Hill street and 159 feet on Eighth street. The site was purchased from E. S. Rowley, Mrs. Gus Knecht, Philo Lindley, Kenneth Pruess and Mrs. Carrie Schumacher, through W. M. Garland and W. W. Mines, who acted as joint agents in the transaction.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

Other properties in the vicinity of the new Orpheum Theater have been leased by Mr. Beck, and improvements are now being planned for these sites. From the Higgins estate a ninety-nine-year lease has been obtained on Olive street, immediately adjoining the rear of the Hill-street property. The rear of the new theater will face on this lot, which has a frontage of 125 feet on Olive street. Plans are now being prepared for improving the Olive-street frontage with a modern building, but these plans are still in tentative form, and the type of build-

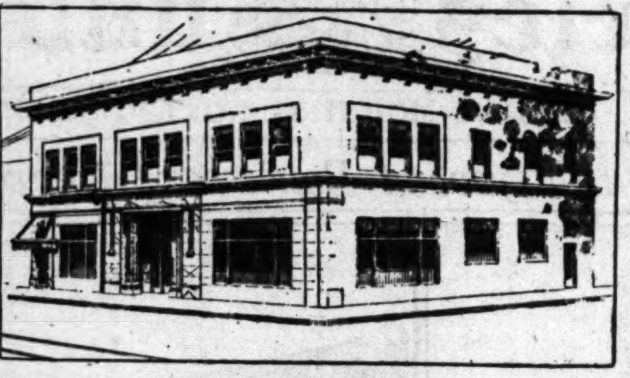
Glendale Branch Bank.



Building on Brand Boulevard to be occupied by Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank when alterations, now being made by the Remington Company, are completed.

Branch Bank to be Established at Glendale.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, Nov. 20.—The ground floor of the building owned by George Hull and John L. Bishop on Brand Boulevard has been leased by the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, and a new branch is to be established here. The owners of the property are remodeling the upper floors of the building, now occupied by the American Legion, into offices for professional men, incorporating all modern conveniences required by physicians, dentists and attorneys.

The bank will put a marble front on the building, and the entire interior of the first floor is to be remodeled. The banking rooms will have a marble floor, a complete system of indirect lighting, and fixtures of gray marble. New vaults of reinforced concrete are being installed for safe deposit purposes. They will be equipped with massive vault doors, electrical alarm systems, and modern safe deposit boxes and filing cases. This work is being fabricated at the factory of the Remington Company of Los Angeles, which also has the contract for the remodeling of the building. Plans also include an escrow department, private offices for customers, coupon booths, and a ladies' room in connection with the safe deposit department.

RENTERS TELL WHY RATES ARE LOFTY.

APARTMENT AND FLAT OWNERS SAY THEIR OWN EXPENSES ARE UP.

Most of the hotel, flat and apartment-house owners and lessees whose rates for rentals to their guests have been criticised as excessive place the blame for the lofty figures on the fact that their own expenses of upkeep have increased from two to three times what they were under normal conditions. Recent purchasers of such income property say the high price they paid makes the high rents they charge really represent no more than a fair return on the investment.

Miss Mary B. McCarthy of 4203 West Third street has a five-room flat at that address for which she asks $225 a month rent furnished. In 1916 and 1917 she says it brought $150 a month, denying that it was ever in the $70 to $90 class, as was stated in a recent article in The Times on the subject of high rents. She says she has been informed by competent realty men that the present figure is not excessive, in view of prices charged for unfurnished flats in the same neighborhood.

The rise in price of her flat, she says, is accounted for by the fact that rugs, furniture, linen and China have trebled in price. Insurance and agents' commissions, plus depreciation, she also cites as evidence that it is not all velvet for the landlord. As to children, she says she had $200 damage done in two months by one child, for which the parents refused to pay. She adds that for the most part landlords are not able to take advantage of lowering prices because their capital was laid out on the old scale.

REPORT MANY SALES.

E. A. Weber, sales manager of W. I. Hollingsworth Company, reports that $100,000 worth of lots in the new South Wilshire Heights tract, which was placed on the market by that company about a week ago, have already been sold. The construction of a number of new houses will be under way in the near future, it is stated.

Tells Method of Building Adobe Homes.

"Modern Homes of Adobe" is the title of an interesting pamphlet which Victor Girard, subdivider of Walnut Park, has just prepared and issued in explanation of the method of building modernized adobe dwellings at that near-by suburb. Mr. Girard has briefly sketched the history of adobe, showing it to have been used in house construction in the early stages of history, and makes the statement that of all the building materials none is more enduring than adobe and none more adaptable to artistic treatment, if properly prepared. The first home of modernized adobe was constructed at Walnut Park more than two years ago following exhaustive tests of this material as compared with other fire-resisting materials. When this dwelling, an artistic Spanish style bungalow, was shown to be resistent to atmospheric changes and moisture, others were constructed by Mr. Girard's company. These homes are built in a variety of architectural styles. Others are now going up.

"Our method of constructing these modernized adobe houses naturally is of interest to home builders," says Mr. Girard. "Moreover, we are glad to give this information—based upon our actual experience—in view of the increasing vogue of this material for both city and country dwellings. The modernized adobe homes at Walnut Park have won wide commendation because they embody two fundamentals in successful house construction—lasting quality and opportunity for the expression of individual taste in arrangement and decoration."

ing to be erected has not yet been determined by the owners. The ground lease on this property, which was handled through W. W. Mines & Co., calls for a total rental of $1,265,000

Martin Beck has also obtained from Mrs. Margaret Cunningham and children a long-term lease on the west side of Hill street, adjoining the building now occupied by Lyon-McKinney-Smith Company on the south, through the same agents, and extensive improvements will be made on the property, it is stated. This lease, to run for a period of fifty years, was sold for a total ground rental of $1,630,000.

LEASE ON REDLANDS HOTEL TRANSFERRED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 20.—The Nichewaug Hotel, formerly the Casa Loma Hotel, and one of the best known tourist hotels in Southern California, will be taken over on December 1 by Harry C. Hervey, who has purchased a five-year lease on the property from H. H. Fiske for a total rental of more than $50,000. The Nichewaug, which contains about 125 rooms, has been owned by Mr. Hervey for the past three years, and under his management, considerable money has been spent in modernizing and improving the building. Mr. Hervey has been identified with the hotel business in Southern California for a number of years. For several years Mr. Hervey, together with his brother, C. B. Hervey, operated the Palms Hotel on Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets, Los Angeles. The sale of the Nichewaug Hotel was made through E. W. Cason, Associated Hotel Brokers of Los Angeles.

Fact and Comment.

held out by the realty men to get investors to buy income properties, and while such practices continue unchecked, there can be no hope of bringing about permanent relief. The realty broker cannot induce a man to buy a flat or apartment building on the ground that by doing so he will get 30 per cent or more on his investment, and then turn around and support the Realty Board in prosecuting the purchaser of the property as a profiteer. It won't work. Either the Realty Board must be supported in its efforts to stamp out the evil, or realty men should frankly come forward with the statement that they do not believe that 30 per cent is an exorbitant charge.

Impending Legislation.

"Swat the rent profiteer" is the slogan of the Tenants' Protective Association, a body organized a year ago which has again sprung into action, goaded by the situation which has developed during recent months. Just now the association is busily engaged in obtaining sufficient signatures to an initiative petition for presentation to the City Council, a petition which will call upon that body to enact ordinances to curb the activities of the rent profiteer. This petition expresses the belief that 11 per cent is a fair profit for the landlord. Apparently the organization will get the required number of signatures, for over half of the necessary number, it is reported, have been already obtained.

Legislation upon this subject has been tried by other communities, and while it served to restrict the operations of the profiteer in many cases, it has not proved to be the most desirable method of bringing about a solution of the problem. In the present case, while it may prevent a recurrence of the practices which have been prevalent during the past year, the immediate situation will not be relieved. It will take several months for an initiative petition to be passed upon, and placed upon the statute books in the form of a law, and meanwhile the situation requires urgent attention.

Also, it has been pointed out that when it comes to legislation on this matter we should make haste slowly. No good end will be served by passing hasty or ill-advised laws which may hamper the normal course of real estate transactions. Before a definite percentage of profit is determined by legislation, careful consideration should be given to the matter. It should be determined whether 11 per cent, or any other arbitrary figure, will allow for the increased cost of operation, taxes, depreciation, and other items which must be figured in the investment.

The thing to be done now, therefore, seems to be to give adequate the wholehearted support to the Realty Board, the American Legion, and other organizations which are fighting the evil. If these bodies are unable to bring the desired result, after a fair trial, legislation will be the next logical step to be taken.

SAN FERNANDO ACRES.

The Janss Investment Company reports recent sales in San Fernando Acres as follows: to C. E. Lewis, thirty acres; John H. Lewis, eleven acres, R. W. Carr, ten acres; J. Ruiz, ten acres; R. F. Hilf, sixteen acres; Mrs. E. Hamlin, five acres; B. E. Sullivan, ten acres; Henry F. Knowles, five acres; O. F. Carver, five acres.

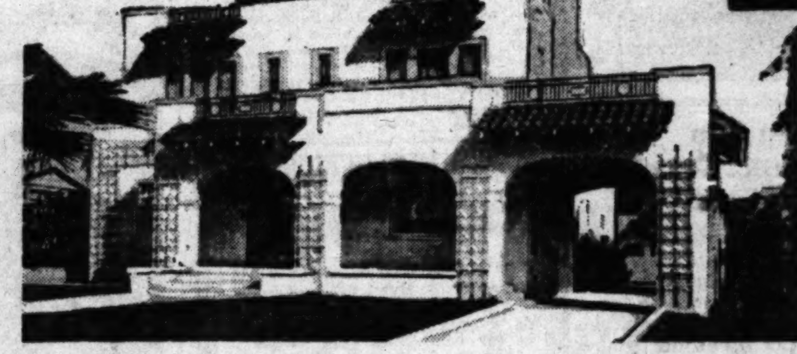
—you'll have to see this Spanish type bungalow, inside and out, to get an idea of its charm; its convenient arrangement—its general air of comfort and convenience. Has five rooms. At 1260 Sweetzer ave., West Hollywood, right near the fine homes of Wallace Reid, William Desmond, William S. Hart and other prominent screen stars.

High ground, beautiful view. Because the owner is anxious to sell quickly, he offers it at cost, $10,000. No protfieering. Open for inspection today between 2 and 4 p.m. For particulars telephone Mr. Knox, Holly 781.



There's nothing cramped nor commonplace about this 11-room house, close to the foothills, in Hollywood.

Five bedrooms, two tile baths, basement and furnace, and all the many features that go into a well-built present-day home. Double garage. For further information call Hollywood 781. Mr. Strange.

Here's a Hollywood bungalow court that shows the splendid return of $330 per month—over 16%—and with rentals so low that a steady income can be counted on—that is important.

Of four units, three of cement and one of frame. The cement units excellently constructed—just as good ten years from today as now. As the lot is 50 by 190 ft., there's plenty of room for two or more units.

All the units are fully and beautifully furnished.

This bungalow court, with its beauty of grounds; closeness to car line; its permanency of income because free from inflated rents is, in our opinion an exceptionally good buy at the price asked, $24,000. Full information by calling Mr. Nimmer or Mr. Purcell, Holly 781.

Hollywood Man Pays Large Sum for Terra Bella Orange Grove.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TERRA BELLA, Nov. 20.—Report of the sale of the Sunlark orange grove by the F. C. Ensign Company for a cash consideration of $45,000 to Dr. and Mrs. M. L. McClure, of Hollywood, represents the highest price paid for improved property in this district. The Sunlark grove comprising twenty-one acres, is situated in the Grand View Heights colony, one of the best locations in the district. There are ten acres of Valencias, ten years old, and ten acres of Washington navels, six acres of which are six years old, the remainder five years old. The Valencia grove has been carrying a heavy crop each year since it came into bearing, and the navel grove is carrying a substantial crop this season.

The new owners expect to move from Hollywood in December. Dr. McClure has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood for some time, and will retire to ranch life, taking personal charge of his new grove.

George W. Carroll has purchased a lot west of the A. J. Sallady property, where he will build a home. J. J. Buckley of South San Francisco, has arrived and will begin the development of his property in the Terra Bella irrigation district. Mr. Buckley will plant his acreage in fig trees and vines.

ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Huge Sum Invested in Southern California Hotel Properties.

The annual meeting of the Southern California Hotel Men's Association yesterday revealed the fact that this industry is now on a better business basis than ever before in its history. A survey of the field indicated that there are more than $300,000,000 invested in hotel properties owned, controlled or operated by members of the association. Officers for the coming year were elected. F. M. Dimmick of the Hotel Clark, Los Angeles, was made president, and Dwight Hart of the Rosslyn was elected first vice-president. Other officers are as follows: C. B. Hamilton of the Hamilton Hotel Company, operating several houses in Bakersfield, Riverside and other points, second vice-president; George M. Burbank of the Virginia, Long Beach, third vice-president; A. W. Stowell of the Hotel Stowell, treasurer, and H. M. Nickerson of the Maryland, Pasadena, assistant treasurer.

E. W. Cason was re-elected secretary for the thirteenth consecutive year, and W. J. Colopy of the Baltimore, assistant secretary. The executive committee selected for the ensuing year includes Walter L. Smith of the King Edward, Ben Weingart of the Westminster, Lee Halladay of the Gates, George Hart of the Rosslyn, Vernon Goodwin of the Ambassador system, W. W. Whitecotton of the Lankershim, W. B. Clark of the Lee; H. C. Fryman of the Hayward and W. C. Brode of the Shoreham, Los Angeles; A. L. Richmond of the Arlington, Santa Barbara; Stanley S. Anderson, the Beverley Hills Hotel; W. A. Turquand, Hotel del Coronado, Coronado, and Charles E. W. Moore of the Vista del Arroyo, Pasadena.

BUILDING PROJECT NEARS COMPLETION.

The last of the eleven flat buildings, erected by Wright and Hogan on Vermont avenue, between Hollywood and Sunset Boulevards, is nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy in the near future. This project, launched several months ago, represents a total investment of $250,000. Each building comprises four flats of four rooms each, with tile baths, tile sinks, all other modern features of house construction. The exteriors of the buildings are finished in white cement. New offices, to house both the realty and the contracting departments, have been established by Wright and Hogan at Vermont avenue and Hollywood Boulevard.

GLENDALE SALES.

Edwards & Wildey, through their Glendale office, report the following sales of Glendale property: J. H. March to J. B. Rohrer, lot on Myrtle street; W. E. Evans to Edward M. Lawson, three lots on Brand Boulevard; A. A. Doolittle to Mrs. D. Brown, four lots on Milford street; A. C. Wood to G. W. Holmes, five-room bungalow at 439 West Patterson street; C. Johnson to W. L. Wade, bungalow at 540 West Oak street; H. Somers to J. Doose, lot on Alexander street; C. Stanford to Alice Evans, bungalow at 316 Pine street; George Parsons to A. Nay, lot in Glendale Home tract; J. H. Marks to K. M. Brown, two lots in Palm Place; Smith & Sutherland to T. Q. Trotter, two lots on Lexington street; J. Sauter to H. Michel, lot on Burchett street; F. Orlamond to N. Traver, lot on Burchett street; J. Bullard to Van Steinberg, lot on Patterson street; C. Whitlock to H. Savage, lot on Myrtle street; H. A. Haines, bungalow at Pacific and Pioneer streets; R. H. Doose to J. C. Hall, lot on Patterson street; H. Powers to J. C. Hall, lot on Patterson street.

HOTEL LEASE BRINGS QUARTER OF MILLION.

The furniture and lease of the Engstrum Apartments, located at 623 West Fifth street, have been purchased by T. Lester Waite and Adeline V. Waite from W. W. Paden, the former owner. The total consideration for the furniture was $75,000, and a ten-year lease on the property calls for a rental of $230,000. The Engstrum Apartment is a fireproof structure containing 200 rooms, and was erected by the Engstrum Construction Company about ten years ago. The sale was made through E. W. Cason & Co., Associated Hotel Brokers.

REALTORS TO MEET AT LUNCHEON WEDNESDAY

The Los Angeles Realty Board will hold its regular monthly meeting at a luncheon in the blue room of the Los Angeles Athletic Club at 12:15 Wednesday. While the program has not been definitely decided upon, a representative of the better business bureau of the Advertising Club will be among the speakers of the day. Other matters to be taken under discussion will be the convention to be held here in December, and the matter of new membership.

TO VIEW ALL OF HARBOR.

Every nook and corner of Los Angeles Harbor will be carefully inspected Tuesday afternoon by members of the special Congressional Coast Defense Committee, who will arrive here Tuesday morning on their nation-wide harbor defense investigation tour.

When the commission arrives at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning it will be met at the Southern Pacific station by a special committee named by Mayor Snyder, and the Chamber of Commerce will also be represented by the Committee on Military and Naval Affairs.

The party will be escorted to the Alexandria and after breakfast the commission will be conducted to the harbor. A government boat will carry the party to every portion of the harbor, Submarine Base and surrounding districts. The return trip to the city will be made after luncheon and in the evening the visiting members will be entertained at a theater party at the Orpheum.

An automobile ride through Los Angeles and a trip to the cinema studios has been planned for the guests by the chamber on Wednesday morning, with a luncheon afterwards at the Beverley Hills Hotel. March Field will be inspected Wednesday afternoon. The party will remain overnight in Riverside.

Members of the special commission are: Senators Ball of Delaware, Keyes of New Hampshire, Pittman of Nevada and Walsh of Montana, and Congressmen Britten of Illinois, Hicks of New York, Padgett of Tennessee, Riordan of New York and Stephens of Ohio. Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations; Rear-Admiral Parks, chief of the bureau of yards and docks; Rear-Admiral Caps, member of the commission of navy yards and naval stations; Lieut.-Commander Hill, Aide to Admiral Coontz, and secretaries W. M. Coffin, T. E. Peeney and M. J. Bunke.

Ladies in the party include Mrs. L. H. Ball, Miss Mary Steele, Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. Charles Peach, Miss Elizabeth Britten and Mrs. T. E. Peeney.

PAPER FROM KELP.

Plant to be Built at Santa Barbara to Test New Process.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 20.—A plant for the manufacture of wall board, heavy paper, roofing and cardboard, all from kelp, is to be erected at Summerland. The Occidental Chemical Company, which manufactured potash from kelp during the war, is to erect the plant. For some time experiments in the making of paper products from kelp have been in progress, and now are declared to be successful. Representatives of the Occidental say one of the largest paper companies in the country has been following the experiments and may take over all the Occidental's interests.

It is said that the success of the venture will do much to solve the country's paper shortage, as the immense beds of kelp along the Santa Barbara coast and around the channel islands, beds that are perpetually renewed, will afford an inexhaustible supply of paper-making material, while fuel oil for operating the plant is obtainable from the ocean bed at Summerland.

NEW OFFICE BUILDING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, Nov. 20. — Building operations amounting to nearly $500,000 in which the California Peach Growers are interested were announced here yesterday by J. F. Niswander, vice-president and general manager of the company. This total includes the joint construction of a $200,000 office building with the California Associated Raisin Company. The two associations are to occupy a three-story building at the corner of East and Hamilton avenues, near the site of the present raisin company plant and adjacent to the new peach plant.

SOON TO ERECT NEW HOLLYWOOD STORES.

A two-story and office building is to be erected at 5540 Hollywood Boulevard, near Western avenue, by G. M. Benethun of Freeport, Ill. The building will have a frontage of sixty feet on the boulevard, running back to a depth of 100 feet. The first floor will contain two stores, while the second floor will have nine office rooms and four apartments. The structure completed will represent an investment of about $75,000. Plans for the building were prepared by Frank Meline, designer and builder. A ten-year lease on the entire building has been taken by Klett Brothers, who will install a high-class furniture store in one of the storerooms. Klett Brothers are also operating a furniture store in Detroit, Mich.

NEW BULL PEN INN TO BE OPENED TUESDAY.

The completion of the fine new building at 63½ South Hope street to be occupied by Ye Bull Pen Inn, one of Los Angeles' leading cafes, will be celebrated next Tuesday evening at a diner to which a group of prominent business men and their wives have been invited. Fred De Long and Charles Matzig, proprietors of the inn, will be the hosts. This building is similar in architecture and interior decoration to the other inns conducted by Messrs. De Long and Matzig in northern cities of the State. The property and building here represents an expenditure of approximately $150,000.

REDLANDS PLANNING ON COMMUNITY PLAY.

SENDS COMMITTEE TO VIEW SUCCESS OF PASADENA ASSOCIATION.

To get a first-hand idea of how the Pasadena plan of community playhouse association works, a Redlands committee attended the premiere of "She Stoops to Conquer" in the Crown City last week. The visitors were Jackson Rigby, Walter McIntosh, Philip Goodman and Prof. E. Ray Nichols, who have been authorized to work out the plan for the Redlands Community Playhouse.

Dr. Richard Burton, one of the drama authorities, recently said in an article in an eastern publication that the Pasadena Community Players had evolved a model organization that might be worked out in any average city or town. Since then, requests have been received from Utica, N. Y.; Portland, Or.; Dallas, Tex.; Des Moines, Iowa, Wilson, N. C., and other points asking for information about the Pasadena Community Association.

"I only wish we might have been able to bring all Redlands to see 'She Stoops to Conquer,'" said Prof. Nichols. "I never saw a better first-night anywhere. The results obtained by these nonprofessionals are an inspiration to those interested in furnishing plays for the people and by the people. Redlands is going to do its best to follow in the path marked out by Pasadena and its Monrovia, Santa Ana and San Diego offspring."

TROUBLE SHOOTERS WORK TO BE EASIER.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

MEEKER (Colo.) Nov. 12.—Telephone trouble-shooters will have easier work in Rabbit Ear Pass this year, where snows often times bury poles and wires under several feet of snow. This year the poles are being replaced by forty-foot poles in place of those thirty-five feet long.

If the forty-foot poles aren't long enough, still longer poles will be used next winter.

The telephone trouble-shooter's job is none too easy at the best. Rabbit Ear Pass is one of the latest of the high mountain passes to be opened to travel each year. Snow covers the pass to a depth of more than thirty-five feet frequently and the trouble-shooters must dig down to restore telephone service.

TAXES NOT ALL FOR TEACHERS.

"School Journal" Writer Says Blame is Misplaced.

Major Portion of Increases Not Used for Salaries.

Charges Rent Advances Take Most of Higher Pay.

BY WILLIS NEWTON,

Of the Lafayette Junior High School, in the Los Angeles School Journal of November 6.

Statements appearing in the papers recently from the supervisors concerning the increase in taxes during the current year convey the impression that the major portion of the tax increase is due to the increase in salaries of teachers. That this impression is erroneous will be easily seen from a comparison of certain figures.

It is [illegible] that the school budget carries an increase in the tax levy of $0.485, and that this represents 59 per cent of the total increase. This means an increase of 41 per cent in the total school levy.

INCREASED ONE-FIFTH.

But the average increase in teachers' salaries for the current year was less than 20 per cent. If the school budget had been increased by only 20 per cent, the proportion in which salaries were raised, the increase in the tax levy would have amounted to only $0.237 instead of $0.485. Such an increase in the school levy, added to the increases actually made in other budgets, would have made a tax rate of only $3.862 instead of $4.11, the rate actually fixed.

Or, to put it in another way, if the school budget had been increased only in proportion as teachers' salaries had been raised, the per cent of increase in the total tax rate would have been 13.6 per cent instead of the actual 20.9 per cent.

Some teachers, noticing that the increase in the tax levy is only 20.9 per cent, are wondering how it happens that their own tax bills have increased 50 to 100 per cent.

HOME OWNERS HARD HIT.

A canvass of home owners among the faculty of Lafayette Junior High School shows an average increased of taxes over last year of 65 per cent, the figures ranging from 40 per cent to as high as 92 per cent. Are not these home owners bearing a larger burden than their just share, when their increases are so much larger in proportion than the general tax rate?

Other teachers, whose low salaries heretofore have prevented them from buying their own homes, look at their increased rent bills and find thir little 20 per cent raise in salary entirely consumed in higher rent.

One teacher, for instance, whose increase in salary amounted to $300 per year, or $25 per calendar month, has a rental to pay this year of $55 a month, as compared with $22 last year—actually $96 more a year than his salary increase. Surely, in the light of these facts, no thinking person will blame the increase in the tax levy to the increase in teachers' salaries.

PLANS BENEFIT DANCE.

Auxiliary Will Raise Funds for Home for Aged Hebrews Here.

In order to help swell the building fund which will erect an addition to the Hebrew Sheltering and Home for Aged, the junior auxiliary of the Jewish Social Center will give benefit dance Tuesday night at Sixteenth and Flower streets.

Special jazz music has been engaged for the affair and the services of Hawaiian entertainers have been arranged for. During the evening a popularity contest will be held to determine who is the most popular young woman present. The winner will receive a $50 cash prize.

WILL GET TRAINING.

More ex-Service Men Here Passed by Vocational Board.

The following ex-service men have been approved by the Federal Board for Vocational Education for training under the Rehabilitation Act, according to an announcement made yesterday, and should get in touch at once with the Los Angeles office of the board, in the Wilcox Building, annex, Second street and Spring.

Anderson, Oscar; Boyd, Lawrence Herbert; Dudgeon, Lee Elmer; Jordon, Charles Frank; Kennedy, Chelton G., Serpa, Alvin; Sweet, Kyle S. Turner, Frank B. Wilnerd, Stewart.

One Hundred
Investment Bargains
in Railroad Bonds

In a circular prepared by one of the greatest bond authorities in this country, which we have just had printed, the bond situation is not only thoroughly covered but there is a list of one hundred bargains in high grade railroad bonds yielding as high as

Ten Per Cent

Among this list are many unusual investment opportunities, and inasmuch as underlying factors are now favorable to rising bond prices, a selection of these bonds would unquestionably result in excellent market profits, in addition to an attractive income return.

The circular will be sent without obligation, together with a booklet describing a convenient method of purchasing the bonds.

CITY HONORED AT CONVENTION.

Park-to-Park Highway Board Gives Weaver Office.

Represents Los Angeles at Big Denver Conclave.

Congress Asked for Funds to Aid New Roads Plan.

Los Angeles and Southern California are to be adequately represented in the Park-to-Park Highway Association, which has just elected officers at a general conference held in Denver. Sylvester L. Weaver, vice-president of the Chambr of Commerce, is vice-president, representing the biggest good roads boosting section of the country. L. A. Naras of Fresno was chosen to represent this State on the board of directors from eleven Western States through which the proposed national park-to-park highways will pass.

The Denver conference came as a climax to the campaign launched by the trail blazers who recently came to Los Angeles and returned again over 5590 miles of roads, connecting Sequoia, Roosevelt and other California national parks with those in Utah, Nevada and Colorado. Los Angeles was officially represented at the meeting by Mr. Weaver, Frank V. Owen of the Chamber of Commerce and Charles H. Benton.

CARRIES GREETINGS.

Mr. Weaver was asked to confer with the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce and address a meeting of 200 afterward. Again in Denver he carried Los Angeles greetings to the Civic and Commercial Association, outlining Los Angeles' record in the good roads movement and adding its indorsement of any good roads plan that will bring greater military safety to the country, add to its commercial interests and bring thousands of tourists every year into the forests and camps on government lands.

"Los Angeles took active part in the Denver meeting and its interests in this greatest new national movement were well represented. As the city is famed for its entertainment of tourists and its pioneer position as builder of good roads, its representatives were listened to carefully when measures came up for discussion," Mr. Weaver said yesterday on his return to Los Angeles.

ASKS CONGRESS TO ACT.

The conference urges Congress in the next session to appropriate sufficient funds to build and maintain modern roadbeds to connect its national playgrounds, to enact laws that will protect its streams and forests from commercial interests and careless camping parties, and to make roads of material capable of standing heavy traffic so that in case of invasion Army trucks and transports could traverse the western States.

Los Angeles is to the front in support of the new park-to-park system because of its peculiar situation as keystone to numerous national parks in California with routes running directly toward other western parks.

Y.W.C.A. WANTS TO EDUCATE PUBLIC ON SCOPE OF NEW PROGRAM.

In the plan of giving the public a greater and more general knowledge of the Y.W.C.A. and the humanitarian program of work which it is fulfilling, the association through its Publicity Committee is preparing to launch a program of parlor meetings. Mrs. William J. Chichester, who was recently appointed permanent chairman of the Los Angeles Y.W.C.A. Publicity Committee, will be in charge.

Prominent women of the city are being enlisted to aid in the proposed new educational program. They will invite to their homes groups of friends and acquaintances and before these different groups the Y.W.C.A. will present facts on its work and purposes.

It is planned also to form a speakers' bureau, each department and branch of the Y.W.C.A. furnishing two or three qualified speakers. These women will assist in the parlor meetings, and also will be prepared to go before clubs and into churches as special speakers.

FRESNO TERM NEARLY OVER.

It is the expectation that U. S. District Judge Trippet will close his term of court in Frenso tomorrow. If he does so he will be on the bench in his department here Tuesday morning. The calendars in both departments will be called tomorrow morning by U. S. District Judge Bledsoe. Sentences are to be imposed in several cases for harboring and concealing aliens.

ASKS SUPPORT FOR SEWER BOND ISSUE.

CITY ENGINEER SAYS THREE YEARS IS LIMIT FOR PRESENT SYSTEM.

Appeal for support for a $12,000,000 bond issue to be presented to the voters next spring with which to build a new thirty-mile outfall sewer from the city to the ocean was made yesterday at the City Club's noon luncheon by City Engineer Griffin, Willis T. Knowlton, engineer of city sewers, and G. Gordon Whitnall, secretary of the City Planning Commission. The speakers declared that the present sewer will be outgrown and will be a menace to public safety within three years, and that the sewer proposed will be adequate to serve a population of from 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 people.

Rev. Louis Agassiz Gould will deliver a stereopticon lecture at next Wednesday's noon luncheon of the club on the subject "The Pilgrims the Puritans and the First Thanksgiving," in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims. The Alpine section of the club will hike to the mountains again next Saturday. One week from tomorrow evening "Fair Prices" will be the subject of the City Club forum.

WILL DISCUSS WAR MINERALS RELIEF.

AMERICAN MINING CONGRESS ALSO WILL STUDY QUESTION OF PROTECTIVE TARIFF.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER (Colo.) Nov. 12.—Action taken by the War Minerals Relief Commission on claims submitted to it will be one of the principal topics of discussion at the twenty-third annual convention of the American Mining Congress in Denver, November 15 to 19, according to officials of the congress.

Congress officials declare that the War Minerals Relief Act contained an appropriation of $8,500,000 to reimburse those who responded to the request of the government and produced manganese, chrome, pyrites and tungsten at loss to themselves between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918. They say that about 1200 claims for compensation have been filed and 1065 have been adjudicated. Of these, however, they assert, only 300 have been allowed. On those allowed, more than $2,000,000 have been paid, they declared.

The production of war minerals in future also is to be considered by the congress. Officials of the congress declare that at present American producers cannot compete with foreign producers. Among means of remedying this situation which will be discussed, they say, is a protective tariff slightly greater than the advantage now enjoyed by the foreign producer.

PACIFIC COAST industries will grow with the development of coastwise and trans-Pacific shipping.

GOBBLER ON INVITATIONS.

Members of the Blue Triangle Club have issued invitations for their annual Thanksgiving dinner to be held in the clubrooms in the Brack-Shops. Tiny golden-colored pumpkins and a miniature turkey gobbler ornament the buff-toned cards which announce the dinner for Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock.

NORTH-END BUSINESS BLOCK CHANGES HANDS

The Ducommon Block, a three-story brick building at 300-304 Main street, one of the old landmarks of the north end, has been sold to J. Giacone, a prominent hotel man and banker of Ontario, for $55,000. The building was purchased by Mr. Giacone as an investment. It is stated that the building may be occupied by a banking institution in the near future. The Stern Realty Company acted for the seller, while the purchaser was represented by Herman H. Goldschmidt.

POMONA GROVE SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Nov. 20.—J. E. Aumen of Los Angeles has sold his orange grove, situated on the west side of Garey avenue, near La Verne Boulevard, to a local investor for $34,000 cash. The grove comprises seventeen acres planted to Washington navels nine years old. The trees now contain a heavy crop of oranges. The property carries with it an interest in an excellent pumping plant. The sale was handled by J. A. Fitch, local realty broker.

REDLANDS TO HAVE BIG SWIMMING POOL.

PLANS FOR COMMUNITY PLUNGE TO BE SUBMITTED SOON TO STATE HEALTH BOARD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 20.—P. E. Hicks, draughtsman of the City Engineer's department, is putting the finishing touches on the drawings for the outdoor plunge which is to be built by the city of Redlands in Sylvan Park, south of Sylvan Boulevard. Mr. Hicks has designed the plunge carefully, and as soon as all of the drawings are complete, they will be sent to Sacramento to be examined by the State Board of Health. Upon the approval of the plans by the Board of Health, the actual construction work will be started immediately.

The plunge as designed is to be one of the largest in Southern California. It is to be built entirely of reinforced concrete, with a special water surface. According to the present plans, it will be 100 feet long by sixty feet wide. One end is to be partitioned off for the use of small children, this portion to be sixty by twenty feet. The main plunge depth is to be graduated from two feet to nine feet in the deepest part. The dressing rooms will be built around three sides of the plunge, leaving the east side open. There will be 120 dressing-rooms, for the use of which a nominal sum will be charged. In addition, there will be two large public dressing rooms for children where no charge will be made.

There is great building activities in the communities surrounding Redlands. At Yucaipa there are twelve new houses just being completed or under construction. They will average in cost about $4000 each. At Loma Linda about thirty new homes have been erected in the past six months. This community, composed of Seventh Day Adventists attracted there by the college and sanatorium, is growing rapidly. To take care of the school increase, there is a fine new building being erected on Loma Linda avenue, near Colton. At Bryn Mawr and Mentone there have been several new homes built during the fall months.

COLLEGE BUILDINGS TO BE STARTED SOON.

Robert H. Orr, local architect, has been commissioned to prepare plans and working drawings for the first units of the new School of Christianity, to be built at a cost of approximately $1,000,000, on Vermont avenue, between Monroe and Marathon streets. The first units to be erected will be dormitory buildings for men and women. Construction of these units will begin early next year, and other buildings will be started soon afterward.

WEST ADAMS SALES.

Carlin G. Smith, realty broker, reports the following sales of lots in West Adams Tract, which is now being marketed: To A. Dunkle, Smiley Drive, $650; Kate Goring, Geer avenue, $725; J. McElvaine, Carlin avenue $800; J. Desmond, Geer avenue, $695; Henry C. Price, Smiley Drive, two lots, $1300; Clyde A. Garner, Smiley Drive, $600; Grace Elliott, Blackwelder avenue, $625; Rilpey M. Spencer, Geer avenue, $700; Lou and Elsie Wickersheim, Blackwelder avenue, $625; George W. Reynolds, Geer avenue, $695; Erna Lohr, Geer avenue, $695; Carrie E. Hall, Carlin avenue, two lots, $1450.

BIG VALLEY TRACT.

Local Realty Firms Made Agents for Land Near Bakersfield.

The sale of the Alameda Farms, located on the State Highway, ten miles south of Bakersfield, has been taken over by the McCarthy Company and the H. B. Eshleman Realty Company from the Houghton Estate Company, former agents for the property. The two local companies will act as joint agents in the sale of this property. The Alameda Farms comprises a total of 3490 acres, including the home place, which is highly improved, and two adjoining improved tracts of 620 and 320 acres each. It is planned to subdivide the property at once, and to market it in tracts of forty, eighty, 160 and 320 acres each.

These properties carry with them the first water rights of the Kern Island Irrigating Company, while some of the outlying tracts have both the water rights and wells. A portion of the tract lies in the Gooselake Slough district west of Bakersfield. The land is adapted to the cultivation of cotton, corn, alfalfa and other crops. Offices for the sale of these properties will be maintained by the Eshleman Company at 345 South Hill street, and by the McCarthy Company in the Union Oil Building. In addition, a branch office will be established on the Alameda Farms unit of the tract, and another will be opened in Bakersfield.

PREPARING PLANS FOR NEW CHURCH BUILDINGS

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

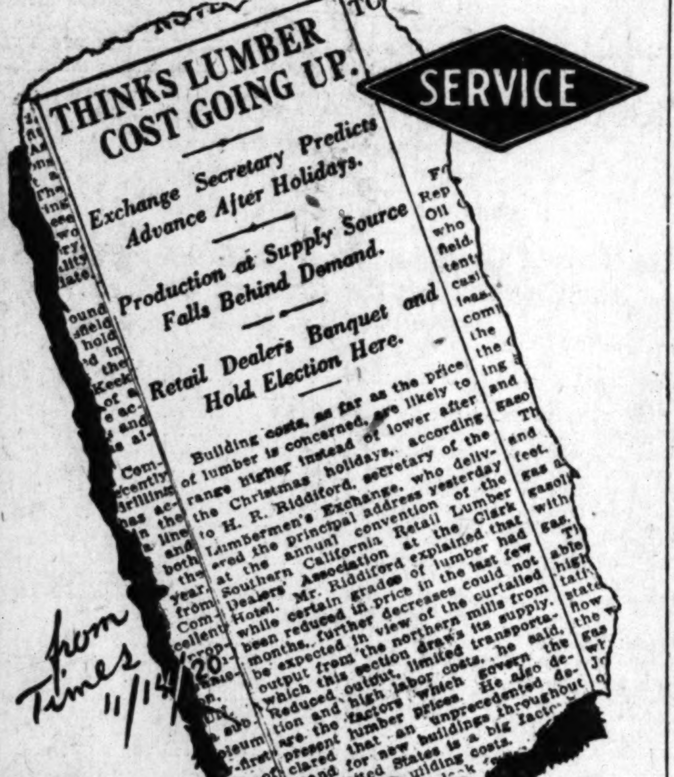
BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 20.—Plans for the new First Christian Church of Bakersfield, to be erected at a cost of $100,000, are now being prepared by Robert H. Orr, architect of Los Angeles. Preliminary drawings, submitted by Mr. Orr, have been approved and accepted, and the working drawings are now being made. Construction of the building, which will be a brick class C structure, will be started early next year, according to present plans.

FINE APARTMENT TO BE ERECTED.

Tentative plans have been made for the construction of a fine apartment-house to be erected at the northwest corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Orchid avenue, opposite the Hotel Hollywood. This property was purchased about a year ago by D. J. Grauman, Sid Grauman and Mart Lasky. The site of the apartment has a frontage of 250 feet on Hollywood Boulevard, with a depth of 140 feet. Plans for the new building are still in the preliminary stages, according to a statement made yesterday by Sid Grauman, and no definite action will be taken until after the first of next year, in all probability.

BIG LUMBER ORDER.

In the belief that there is little likelihood of a decline in the price of pine, the first of three complete shiploads of this kind of lumber has been contracted for by the Pacific Portable Construction Company. The first big shipment which is to be delivered within the next sixty days includes a little over 1,000,000 feet of choice pine and will be brought to San Pedro by a chartered boat from a port in Washington. An additional 2,000,000 feet is to be shipped to the local manufacturers of ready-cut homes within ninety days.



THINKS LUMBER COST GOING UP.

Exchange Secretary Predicts Advance After Holidays.

Production at Supply Source Falls Behind Demand.

Retail Dealers Banquet and Hold Election Here.

Building costs, as far as the price of lumber is concerned, are likely to range higher instead of lower after the Christmas holidays, according to H. R. Riddiford, secretary of the Lumbermen's Exchange, who delivered the principal address yesterday at the annual convention of the Southern California Retail Lumber Dealers' Association at the Clark Hotel. Mr. Riddiford explained that while certain grades of lumber had been reduced in price in the last few months, further decreases could not be expected in view of the curtailed output from the northern mills from which this section draws its supply. Reduced output, limited transportation and high labor costs, he said, are the factors which govern the present lumber prices. He also declared that an unprecedented demand for new buildings throughout the United States is a big factor in building costs.

from Times 11/14/20

Build Now

Like lumber other building materials show greater indications of an increase than for a reduction in price.

You can save money and make a better profit by building now. The demand for homes far exceeds the supply.

3 Piece Bathroom Set

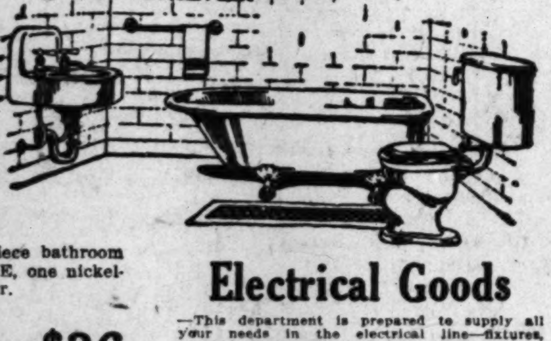
ALL COMPLETE TO ROUGH PLUMBING

—A complete bathroom outfit, just like the picture below. A splendid set for a cozy bungalow bathroom. It includes your choice of a 4-ft., 4½-ft., or 5-ft. porcelain enameled cast iron bath tub, wide apron porcelain enameled lavatory; all factory "seconds," but all equipped with high-grade solid brass fittings, complete for hot and cold water; low-down style of toilet, with white porcelain enameled cast iron tank and vitreous china bowl and all necessary fittings; oak seat. Everything complete to the rough plumbing, ready to install, for $100.



FREE This Week

—With every purchase of one of these 3-piece bathroom sets at $100 this week we will include FREE, one nickel-plated towel bar and one toilet paper holder.

Water Heaters $36

—A limited lot of Combination Gas Water Heaters—tank and heater in one unit similar to the picture. These are absolutely No. 1 grade heaters, perfect in every way. Fittings and trim are not included.

Ready Roofing

—Still time to get your roof fixed up before the rains. Old roofs can be easily re-covered with ready roofing and certainly there is no better roofing for a new building.

—In stock now we have a complete stock of our famous King Roofing in 1-ply, 2-ply and 3-ply, in rolls of 110 sq. ft., sufficient to cover 100 sq. ft. of roof, with all nails and cement to lay.

WE CLOSE SATURDAYS AT 1 P. M.

Electrical Goods

—This department is prepared to supply all your needs in the electrical line—fixtures, wire, insulators, irons, heaters, etc.

$10 Irons $7.50

—The well-known "White Cross" Irons that have such a splendid reputation for long life and quick heating.

Electric Warming Pads $9

—An ideal gift particularly to an invalid.

BARLEY CONTINUES SHARP DOWN TREND.

Liquidation set in during the early part of the call on the local grain market yesterday, and prices again slumped to a low closing level. No support was offered, and in view of the continued weakness of the outside markets, barley and milo declined steadily. At the close of the call, transit barley was $1.75 to $2 per ton lower, while the December shipment had dropped to the extent of $1.75 per ton, with sales recorded at $1.90 and $1.92½, as compared with $2 of the preceding day. Milo received little attention, but the near-by shipments, in which there was limited activity, were $150 to $2 lower. No. 1 white club wheat was sold for $3.55.

Ask Your Broker This Question:

"Which Richfield Stock is held most tightly?"

He Will Tell You Richfield Union

Because: There is none of it floating around at bargain prices. Every broker is holding on to any "Richfield Union" that he has, expecting the cry of "another Richfield gusher" soon to be heard.

"Richfield Union" dollar stock is almost all gone. Only a handful left. This week may see it cleaned up. Take our advice: "Get down quick while you can." The big jump will come with the cry of "another Richfield gusher."

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; Chinese Consortium Explained; National Bank Call.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Activities of an interesting business week included a sharply declining stock market, a strong bond market, an improving credit situation, and a disturbed economic outlook.

Price problems have held the attention of the average man and woman whether he happened to be short of the stock market or a potential buyer of necessary commodities.

Columns have been published telling of falling prices, and some of these stories have found mild confirmation in Los Angeles trade circles.

The 3 per cent decline in food prices for October, most of it confined to a comparatively few articles is all right as a beginning, but must be followed by much more radical cuts before the public will be satisfied that a permanent lower level is really an accomplished fact.

So far as it is practicable to check against the October prices it looks as though a further decline of from 3 to 5 per cent would be recorded in November, and for a wider range of supplies.

SOME REAL CUTS.

In commodities some very real reductions have been made, and these coming in the beginning of the Christmas shopping season should have the effect of stimulating trade. Men's clothing, shoes, cotton and silk are the leaders in the decline.

Speaking of Christmas shopping, that form of exercise remains coy. There has been, during the week, a marked improvement in retail trade, which, as a matter of fact, is running ahead of last year, but not quite up to the expectations of some of the merchants.

The public is very slow in getting started this year, doubtless because of the uncertainty over prices, and the hope that further cuts may be made if they wait long enough.

Trade Talk is told that the present level is likely to represent the stopping place, at least until after the first of the year, although individual sales may be promoted in cases where it is necessary to realize some cash in order to swing new shipments.

There has been a peculiar hesitancy on the part of many retailers to let go. This hesitancy has been out of tune with the best thought in other sections of the country, where the persistence of the idea that high prices would return has been less costly because not carried to extremes. Liquidation which should have been accomplished last summer is only now being put under way. This produces the mercantile anomaly of bargain sales during the holiday season.

FINANCIALLY SOUND.

Financially Los Angeles continues to occupy a strategic position as witness the national bank call made yesterday by the Comptroller of the Treasury. Deposits have increased, and in every department of banking a healthy condition is evident.

A visit to the employment agencies creates the impression of a stagnant labor market, but delving a little beneath the surface one finds that while there are many more applicants for work than was the case a few weeks or months ago, there is still work for nearly all.

The difficulty lies in the fact that the applicants have so far refused to accommodate themselves to the somewhat lower wage scale being offered for unskilled labor, and because the workers are still in possession of a portion of the surplus earned during the peak era they affect more or less hateur and scorn the proffered jobs. This is a condition which will right itself before long. The best estimates place the employment level where it was a week ago, at 90 per cent. This is one of the most satisfactory showings made by any city in the United States

BUILDING GOES ON.

Building of homes is proceeding with only slight diminution from the highest level and hundreds of new roof trees are added every week to the available supply. The lower rent propaganda is said to be having some effect, but victims of the high prices look upon this improvement as relative and theoretical.

Tourists continue to arrive as fast as steam and gasoline can bring them, and in spite of the improved housing conditions and months of steady building the problem will be with us again this season.

Collections are fair with deferred payments gaining popularity. Los Angeles is assimilating the readjustment requirements with common sense and determination, and because of this fact the general local situation—financial, commercial and economic—may be put down as satisfactory.

CONSORTIUM EXPLAINED.

Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, and David Blankenhorn, president of the Blankenhorn-Hunter-Dulin Company, have been in San Francisco to attend a meeting of financial leaders entertained at a Palace Hotel luncheon by Mr. Blankenhorn. The guest of honor was Frederick W. Stevens of J. P. Morgan & Co., who is the representative of the American group in the Chinese consortium, and who is on his way to the Orient.

Because of the widespread interest in this plan which may eventually solve many of China's financial and political problems, and because prominent banks and bankers in Los Angeles are actively associated with the proposition, the following outline which was presented by Mr. Stevens at the luncheon will serve to explain the idea, of which we are destined to hear a great deal, in succinct form:

The American group, which Mr. Stevens represents in the proposed consortium, consists of thirty-seven banks and banking firms of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland,

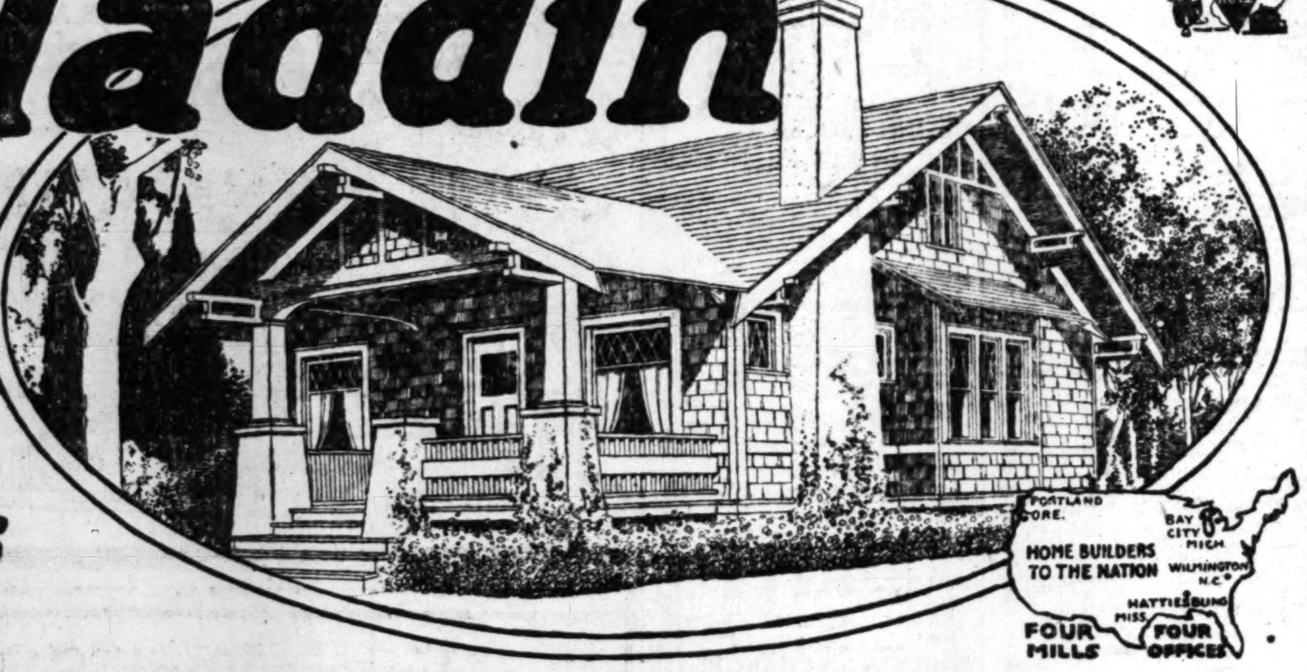
Aladdin

Readi-Cut Homes



Built for $900 Less

This is the satisfying experience of John J. Snellenberger; of Red Lion, Pa., who, in a letter dated October 10th, 1920, says: "Everything described in the Aladdin Book of Homes is true to the smallest detail. All pieces fit properly and there was plenty of everything. In regard to perfect lumber, it could not be cleaner of knots no matter what price you might pay. It simply was perfect, and it is with pride that I take callers almost daily through the house, which is just being painted at this time. It is the first home of its kind to be erected in this immediate community and numerous people watched in amazement the speed the workmen made in erecting my home. I am sure I saved at least $400 on material and $500 more than that on the cost of erecting, the latter being due largely to all lumber being sawed absolutely to fit. I am sure you cannot be disappointed in building the Aladdin way."

combines the advantages of a detached house with all the valuable features of apartment conveniences. There are many different architectural designs of Aladdinettes—something to please each individual requirement of size, style and price. The amount that you would have to pay for rent this year and next, will more than pay for an Aladdinette. It is a complete home, scientifically economized to reduce the material used, without sacrificing convenience or losing one iota of space where it is essentially needed. By the installation of a modern kitchenette, special dining-room space is eliminated. By the use of Murphy wall beds, floor space serves double purposes. It is a permanent, substantial, attractive and comfortable home. We have prepared a special illustrated booklet, showing many designs of Aladdinettes, which we will be glad to send upon application. Be sure and ask for Aladdinette Book No. 1143.

Immediate Delivery from Our Pacific Mills at Portland Oregon

Aladdin service includes quick delivery, as we are prepared to make you immediate shipment from our Pacific Coast Mills at Portland, Oregon. Think of what it means to have all material necessary for your home sent to you in one complete shipment, in a sealed box car, and what is more—sent to you promptly. No annoyances—no delays—no parts or material missing just at the time you may need them the most. And this is just a part of Aladdin "Golden Rule Service" that protects and insures you satisfaction in every way.

All Material Cut-to-Fit Homes Quickly Erected

The lumber for all Aladdin Readi-cut houses is all cut-to-fit according to standardized methods. This eliminates the wastage of odd pieces that ordinarily would occur where the sawing is done on the site of the building. The saving amounts to 18% on the cost of the lumber and, in addition, you have the satisfaction of knowing that your house will be finished and ready for occupancy in practically half the time it would take to complete it by any other method of construction.

30% Saved On Labor

It doesn't take near as long to nail a cut-to-fit piece of lumber in place as it does to measure, saw and then nail it. There you have the difference between the Aladdin System and the old fashioned System of construction. It's not surprising that our customers make savings of $300, $425, $675 up to $1000. A carpenter's time is valuable. You can't expect to cut down your building cost if you waste his time. One man will do in six days, with Aladdin materials, what it requires ten days to accomplish without Aladdin's System. You can save 30% on the cost of the labor when you build the Aladdin way.

Send for Illustrated Book

Beautiful Aladdin Homes shown in the 100-page Book No. 1443, have a charm for everyone desiring a home. Bungalows of 4 rooms to 10 and 12 rooms, in shingled walls, heavy siding or stucco, are well represented in this book. Dwellings of one and two stories, Colonial types and cottages to suit the desire of every builder. Many illustrations in actual colors. Exterior and interior illustrations made direct from actual photographs of each Aladdin Home as it is now built and occupied in many parts of the country portray the most popular designs of home today.

FINANCIAL AND TRADE REVIEW.

Seattle and other important cities in the United States. The group was formed at the request of the United States government to work with similar groups of British, French and Japanese banks under the name of the "Chinese Consortium."

If political and other conditions at the time permit, it is proposed to offer to China an opportunity to borrow large sums of money, on fair terms, without concessions and without encroachments on Chinese political integrity, which have characterized some loans to China in the past.

As to the purposes for which the consortium proposes to advance money, China's position in the matter, and other details, Stevens said in part:

"The money loaned is to be used to build railroads and to provide other public utilities to be owned by China and to be for the benefit of the Chinese people.

"Loans to private industrial concerns or for merely current governmental purposes are not contemplated.

"No loan has yet been arranged for. The Chinese government is not a party to the consortium agreement and is under no legal or moral obligation to borrow money from the consortium. If it wishes to deal with the consortium, then the terms and conditions of each loan are to be negotiated.

"The Chinese bonds to be taken by the American group must, of course, be marketable in the American investment market, and for a time, pending further recovery of Europe from the war, it is likely that the American group will take the British and French portions.

"To make the bonds salable here, is it considered necessary to insure the expenditure of the loan proceeds as intended—that is to say, in the building of railroads or the rehabilitation of the Grand Canal, or whatever may be the public purpose agreed upon.

"American investors who are asked to buy the Chinese bonds will want to know that the money borrowed is really to be used to benefit the Chinese people. It is also necessary to obtain suitable security for payment of the interest and principal and the security must be safeguarded.

"These requirements involve effective supervision over the subjects mentioned, and the negotiation of an agreement upon them may take considerable time.

"Although China has an area greater than that of all the United States and a population several times as great, yet she has practically no highways in our sense of the term, and only about 6000 miles of railroad, to be compared with our millions of miles of highways and our 265,000 miles of railroad. Despite China's vast productive provinces, millions of her people have barely enough food to maintain life.

"If the negotiations result successfully, transportation facilities on a large scale will be provided for, as a means of developing China's vast natural resources."

LOS ANGELES STOCKS.

After a week of persistent and heavy declines the market rallied yesterday and closed stronger than it has been at any time during the period. This was partly in response to better news from New York where the bottom appeared to have been reached, and partly because liquidation was so thoroughly complete. The upturn was not sensational, but it was evidential of a better understanding and forecasted the probability of increased firmness next week.

The oil stocks which are popular here were fairly active. This was especially true of Delaware Union which was exceedingly active around 23, closing strong at that figure. Union, of California proved an exception to the rule and sold down to 173, a net loss of one point over Friday. A little Mascot sold at 1.75 and Republic Petroleum held its own around 32½, some sales being recorded a quarter higher. United was a big trader at 50 cents, closing at 50½.

Goodyear stocks continued to dominate the industrial list and trading in tire and rubber was heavy at 67 and 67¼. Textile changed hands at 67. Edison, common, again pursued the even tenor of its way and sold at 88, a slight improvement over the preceding day. Delta Farms was in good demand at 39½.

Mines were inactive, a few shares of United Eastern moving at 2.55, representing a two-point decline. There was a brisk trade in United American at 40 cents. There was no change in government bonds, and trading was light. The market as a whole showed improvement and closed strong.

NATIONAL BANK CALL.

In the face of a bear market, falling commodity prices and a readjustment period of wide scope the national banks of Los Angeles show a remarkable condition of virility, growth and development in spite of every retarding circumstance.

As a result of the call of the comptroller of the currency the ten national banks in Los Angeles presented statements yesterday highly complimentary to the financial and economic situation in this city.

Since September 8, the date of the preceding call deposits have increased $9,519,677.16; available cash nearly $24,000,000, and loans and discounts, $2,480,000.

In contemplating these remarkable figures it should be borne in mind that at this season of the year all of the banks are piling up large sums for tax purposes, a circumstance which may throw the present totals somewhat out of proportion for comparative purposes when the next call is made. Just what this percentage may be is difficult to estimate, but the proximity of tax-paying time is bound to find reflection in the total deposits, which, for all of the Los Angeles national banks are $158,856,823.09; available cash, $49,338,754.79; loans and discounts, $116,557,252.70.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Drake, Riley & Thomas announce the appointment of J. W. Dunham to be sales manager for that concern. The appointment follows a two-year association in stepping-stone capacities.

ZELLERBACH EXTENSION.

In an effort to help meet the serious newsprint shortage, Zellerbach Paper Company are reported to have invested $1,500,000 in the Washington Pulp and Paper Corporation, of Port Angeles, Wash. The wood pulp plant is already in operation and the paper mill will be in a few weeks. It will have an annual capacity of 16,500 tons of newsprint annually, and the entire output for 1921 is said to be sold.

BIDS REJECTED.

Bids for $500,000 Imperial Irrigation District, 5½ per cent bonds, due 1925-34, have been rejected. A $500,000 block of the same issue was sold last spring on a 5¼ basis.

BANK DEPOSITS.

National bank deposits on September 8, amounted to $16,751,956,000, a reduction of $403,465,000 compared with the June 30 statement, but an increase of $70,349,000 over Sept. 12, 1919. California is sixth among the States showing largest increase in deposits, with $10,000,000.

OVERSUBSCRIBED.

The recent offering of treasury certificates of indebtedness resulted in a big oversubscription throughout the country. The Twelfth Reserve District of which Los Angeles is a part ranked third among the twelve districts in percentage of subscription with $22,750,000. The allotment to the district is $17,605,000.

CHEAPER GASOLINE?

Eastern publications persist in printing reports of impending gasoline price reduction, but producers and dealers in Los Angeles deny that anything of the kind is likely to happen in this market and point to the statistics to back them up. On the face of these we would seem to be burning our gasoline candle at both ends. Also consumers on the Pacific Coast do not have the long quiet season of the other side of the country due to climatic conditions.

TYPEWRITER OUTPUT.

United States will produce 80 per cent of the world's supply of typewriters in 1920 when 850,000 will have been manufactured and sold. Two-thirds of the world's total and five-sixths of the country's output is said to be controlled by the Underwood, Royal and Remington companies.

RICHFIELD CONSOLIDATED.

The Richfield Consolidated Company's well No. 2, which struck the oil sands Wednesday at 2810 feet, has been cemented off and will be allowed to stand for the required period.

For this second well the casing was set at 2803 feet. Well No. 2 reached the oil sand at a depth seventy-three feet shallower than that at which the company's initial well struck the oil-bearing sand. From this fact it is believed that Well No. 2 is located upon or close to the dome and it is confidently expected that the new producer will be a big one.

Well No. 1 continues to hold up, although something better is expected of it in the future, when plans to deepen the hole are put into effect. Oil experts are of the opinion that the initial well through sanding and clogging is not producing to its full capacity.

Making California's Fields Productive

The essential difference between California today and California twenty years ago, from an agricultural standpoint, is irrigation.

Particularly in Southern California has irrigation transformed desert wastes and barren acreage into the most profitably productive sections of the State.

Hydro-electricity plays a big part in watering California's fields. Entire sections depend wholly upon pumped water and our hydro-electric companies are being called upon more and more for electric energy for agricultural purposes.

The agricultural demand for power assures stable, consistent business for our hydro-electric companies. But the most important consideration for investors is that money invested in these companies is not only safely invested, but returns a manifold advantage in the development of agricultural California.

Send today for "CALIFORNIA HYDRO-ELECTRIC SECURITIES," containing a full discussion of this subject.

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—The generous rainfall throughout the Central California citrus belt put a damper on early shipments and railroad reports show only a total of 61 cars out to date. The rain had the effect of lowering the sugar content and picking was stopped in all but a few favored districts. Some growers report the groves so wet it is impossible to get in to haul the fruit. The packing houses are working on Thompson Improved navels only, but unless further rains set in the coming week, picking of Washington navels will be resumed again Monday.

As a result of the setback caused by the rains, there will be but few cars of early navels arrive in eastern markets in time for the Thanksgiving trade. Valencias are cleaning up rapidly and it looks as if Florida will be called upon to fill the wants of the eastern consumers for Thanksgiving oranges.

Quotations continue on a basis of $5 to $5.50 cash for shipment this week and $4 to $4.50 for next week shipment. Because of the slow movement of fruit there is a tendency toward stiffer prices.

There is nothing new in the situation on Southern California navels. A few of the earliest districts are showing good color, but the size situation is the drawback and growers prefer to wait and let the fruit size up.

Up to November 6 Florida had only shipped 666 cars oranges, but the movement is now showing a better volume. There has been a somewhat general reduction in shipping point prices. Growers are generally asking $1.75 to $2 a field box. Averages in eastern auction markets range from $4 to $4.65 per box.

LEMONS.

The market on California lemons continues lifeless. New York and Boston markets report a little better feeling as a result of the markets cleaning up on storage stock. Shipments for the past two weeks have been light and under existing market conditions promise to continue so.

Central California districts were a month late in starting shipments and are now holding back because of the demoralized condition of the market.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $2 to $2.50 per box.

There are 20,000 boxes of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days.

PRICES FOR LETTUCE BREAK TO LOW LEVEL.

MARKET SLUMPS 50 CENTS PER CRATE; SHIPPING MARKET ALSO WEAKER.

With the exception of a sharp decline in the price of lettuce, fruits and vegetables held firm on the local produce market yesterday, and there were practically no price changes recorded. Supplies were limited, the most of the good stock moved readily at the level of the preceding day. Wholesale prices for lettuce yesterday were down to 50 and 75 cents per crate, as compared with $1 to $1.25 of the preceding day, a slump of 50 cents. The decline was ascribed partly to the fact that supplies are very liberal, and the quality of the stock is only fair, but the slump was principally due to the fact that the shipping market was weaker, with demand and movement dull.

Cauliflower and cabbage held steady on the wholesale market, but the former commodity displayed a downward tendency in the shipping market, where prices were about 10 cents per crate lower for all grades. The movement of tomatoes is practically over. Few quotations were given yesterday, and there was a very light wire inquiry from the eastern markets. Prices, however, remained firm at the previous level. In the carlot market, potatoes were strong and higher, making an advance of about 10 cents per sack during the day. Good stock selling at $2.25 to $2.50 per hundredweight, while the poorer offerings ruled around $2.10.

ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL CO.
(Standard Oil Subsidiary)

Income yield on Anglo is 5¼% at $20 per share, but as in eight past years it has averaged 25% cash dividend and 150% in stock and rights, the owners of the stock who received these had both their principal and income compounded several times and are receiving what may be termed "compound" income on their investment, as the dividend applies on top of stock received as dividend and rights as well as on stocks originally purchased, and is paying a larger rate of dividend now than was paid originally.

OIL PRODUCERS
Offer

A limited number of shares of their issue, THE LOUISIANA STEPHENS OIL CORPORATION at $15.00 per share.

This company has paid dividends at the rate of 44% this year from their one producing well in the Breckenridge field.

They have now drilling on proven acreage in this field, (which to date has more than a thousand producing wells and not one dry hole) two wells which will be completed within the next 20 days. Their fourth well was spudded in last week.

Shrewd Investors

will realize that the completion of the drilling wells of this company early in December will increase the value of this stock many times. Gauged by its earnings from its one well this company should earn next year between 400 and 500%.

We can make immediate delivery for a few days only a limited number of shares at $15.00 per share.

We, ourselves, are Stockholders, and will be pleased to furnish details.

The Security Behind the $140,000
Glendora Independent Water Company First Closed Mortgage 7% Bonds

—is, in addition to the physical value of the plant and property, an indirect lien upon all the property dependent on the company for water and virtual existence.

The formation of a mutual company, such as the Glendora Independent Water Company, is recognized as the best and most efficient method of securing an adequate supply of water, which is absolutely essential to the grower.

The consumer, or stockholder, will necessarily protect his interests in his water company to the exclusion of everything, except taxes. In the event he has borrowed money on his land the holder of the mortgage, in order to maintain his equity in the property, would have to pay the charges for water in case of default by the owner.

We have in this bond, therefore, practically a first charge on all the property served by the company having an estimated market value of over $2,000,000.

National Security Shares to be withdrawn from market

The demand for stock of the National Security Oil Company has been such that the present offering of stock has been rapidly subscribed. Additional subscriptions by stockholders, and purchases by investors who have studied the opportunity for profit in National Security Oil Company have almost exhausted the shares available at 50c.

First issue heavily oversubscribed—
Present issue cannot last long.

The initial offering of National Security shares was taken up in a very short time, and was heavily oversubscribed. The present offering at 50c (half par value) will be withdrawn from the market on December 1st. We cannot guarantee, however, that all available stock will not have been taken up before that date. Immediate purchase will assure your receiving YOUR block of National Security shares.

Produce In Spare Hours

As the speculative spasm wanes, legitimate investments that yield steady fixed returns will become popular and much sought after.

An established bond house desires a few middle-aged men and women who have spare time and desire additional income. To such is offered an interesting plan that promises education and profit along conservative financial lines.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Today's brief session of the stock market began with fresh unsettlement, due to renewed liquidation and professional pressure among leaders of the steel, equipment and oil groups.

Crucible Steel extended yesterday's heavy loss by almost five points to the year's low of 85 and Baldwin Locomotive and Mexican Petroleum joined the many minimum quotations for the last twelve months. Sundry specialties continued to ease on what seemed like belated selling of pool holdings.

These adverse factors were balanced by the firmness of rails and shippings, but buying was mainly for short covering to close contracts. Sales, 575,000 shares.

Advices and general developments were more encouraging. A leading commercial authority reported "more life in several branches of trade" and remittances to London and Paris strengthened.

Bonds were dull and uncertain, although several Liberty issues and the Victory notes closed at moderate advances.

Total sales, par value, $7,175,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call for the week.

Clearinghouse statement disclosed a surprisingly moderate decrease of actual loans and discounts, considering the week's drastic liquidation of stocks. Reserves of members at the Federal bank decreased about $24,400,000 and excess reserves fell to slightly less than $12,500,000, against the prevous week's total of $32,200,000.

Notice
regarding Oil Affidavit

In an affidavit published in Los Angeles newspapers on Sunday, November 14, I referred to the No. 5 well of the Standard Oil Co. in the Huntington Beach field.

In order to avoid any possible misunderstanding, it should be understood that this well is that now drilling approximately 1500 feet east of Standard Oil Company's producing Well No. 2.

This is the fifth well being drilled by the Standard Oil Company at Huntington Beach, but is officially known as No. 4.

Gusher wells point straight to TEXCAL

NOTE that Standard wells Numbers 2 and 3 determine the width of the oil pool beneath the Huntington Beach field. Number 2, a 1000-barrel gusher, and Number 3, which, although not yet brought in a gusher, has secured equal showings, have absolutely PROVEN the extent of the oil sands!

Then, in direct line with Texcal's well lies the Standard's 5000 to 10,000-barrel Bolsa Chica, pointing the direction of the oil pool!

The above view gives an accurate idea of conditions at the field. Don't YOU share our confidence that our well will be brought in a gusher equal to those of the Standard? Remember that we have secured oil showings fully as heavy as those of the Bolsa Chica! Remember, too, that our well should be standing cemented off just above the gusher within a very few hours from the time this announcement appears.

Figure for yourself what dividends one such well can pay to fortunate Texcal stockholders—and act AT ONCE to share in such profits. Only a very few shares remain to be sold at par value, $1.00. Reserve YOURS now—this minute!

OIL NOTICE IMPORTANT

I give notice that the following companies, The Southern Counties Oil Company at Delano, The Arcadia Oil Company at Montebello, and the Mereno Hill Company of Riverside, are now drilling or preparing to drill on leases where, more or less, valuable streaks were discovered by me.

These lands were not recommended for oil operations, prior to my investigation.

I now give notice that I have not staked the positions of these test wells; and should the first results prove wells of no commercial value, I disclaim all responsibility whatsoever for the aforesaid reason.

OL. XXXIX. SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 21, 1920. IN THE VAN | First in All Automobiles. First in Sporting News.

IRTEEN PILOTS WAIT THE DROP OF THE FLAG.

nksgiving Day Championship Speedway Race and Aero Show Looks More Than Interesting.

grand Thanksgiving Day is but four days off, of America's greatest already for the 250-mile for the title of 1920 champion and a purse of Chief interest really centhe dash for the title befirst-class plumber or can pick up thirty thouin the course of a few whereas the title of 1920 champion is something acafter long and constant race settles the argument Gaston Chevrolet, Tommy Jimmy Murphy and Ralph as to who is the prize of the year. This little matsettled annually by a point and patented by the which bosses the automobile activities of the country awarded to each big race to be divided among according to their places having the largest numat the end of the seadeclared champion. drivers come into the final of the season with four of Chevrolet, Milton, Murphy, Palma, so closely bunched of them may find himself champion for the year, by the Turkey Day race. The champion is a mighty nice hang on your name, and the large gobs of kale for the men who place in come in very handy in the monthly bills, presented the grocerymen, and of this age of fast

MANY CIRCUITS.

250 miles on the Los Speedway it is neces200 laps of the big mile bowl. This enormous arrangements for taking 80,000 people, is not only plant of its kind in the likewise the fastest world. The advance promises that the cahuge plant will be utmost by the crowd. will also be interesting of the fact that this is appearance of the cubic inch racing cars. their American debut in May. These engines no bigger than in a regulation ruttaping sardine can built Ford, but by scientific to racing requirements engines have been develpoint where they can to 100 horsepower and little cars along at better miles an hour.

TINY ENGINES.

there will be many atthe turkey day races who disappointed if Jimmy present 250-mile world's the rate of 103.6 miles per utterly and completely realizing that it was a car boasting almost horse power of the little cars. The breaking of the record, however, is not at all impossible, as the little cars are capable of about 104 or 105 miles an hour, and the winner will probably go through without a stop.

Favorites for winning the race are Jimmy Murphy and Tommy Milton, because of their consistent winning throughout the season. Their cars are as fast as any in the race, and they have nothing to handicap them. Gaston Chevrolet, who leads in the championship standings by virtue of his victory in the international 500-mile race at Indianapolis in May, is more or less of a dark horse, because nobody knows just how fast his car is, the general suspicion being that it is a second or so slower to the lap than the Duesenbergs, although this remains to be demonstrated.

RALPH MISSING.

Ralph De Palma would be a strong favorite if he had been out on the track at all, but up to Friday he hadn't even been seen, much less put in any practice on the speedway. He has entered a Ballot, and at Indianapolis and Elgin he showed that his little car was as fast as anything of the 183-inch variety on wheels, but the fact that he has not showed up in his mount for Thanksgiving Day makes him the darkest kind of a dark horse, nobody knowing whether he will appear in the old Ballot or a new one.

There are several "outsiders" as far as the championship is concerned who have more than a good chance of winning the race, thereby upsetting all the frijoles and grabbing off much of the money. Eddie O'Donnell has been showing all of his old-time form in practice, and looks mighty good, as do Roscoe Sarles, Eddie Hearne, Joe Thomas and several others. It would not be a terrible shock to have one of these young men dash in and snatch off the first dig into the purse.

THE LAP PRIZE.

One feature that is certain to add spice and interest to the race is the lap prize feature, inaugurated at Indianapolis and tried here for the first time on Thanksgiving Day. This consists of a large sum of money contributed by business men to be divided into 200 separate prizes and given to the leaders at the end of each lap. This makes the drivers keep the throttle nailed to the floor all the time and speeds matters up to beat the band.

Officials for the big event began pouring into Los Angeles early in the week and more of them will be in during the next couple of days. Eddie Rickenbacker, American ace of aces, who is to referee the race, will fly down from Oakland Tuesday, arriving at De Mille Field about 1 o'clock if not before. He is going to try to break the record between the two cities in an Americanized Fokker scout plane equipped with a Hall-Scott supercompressed engine.

OFFICIALS HERE.

Stan Mitchell of the Automobile Club of Southern California and Charles P. Root of the Chicago Motor Club, who will act as honorary referees, are already on the ground and Fred Wagner, starter, and Barney Oldfield, pacemaker, arrived

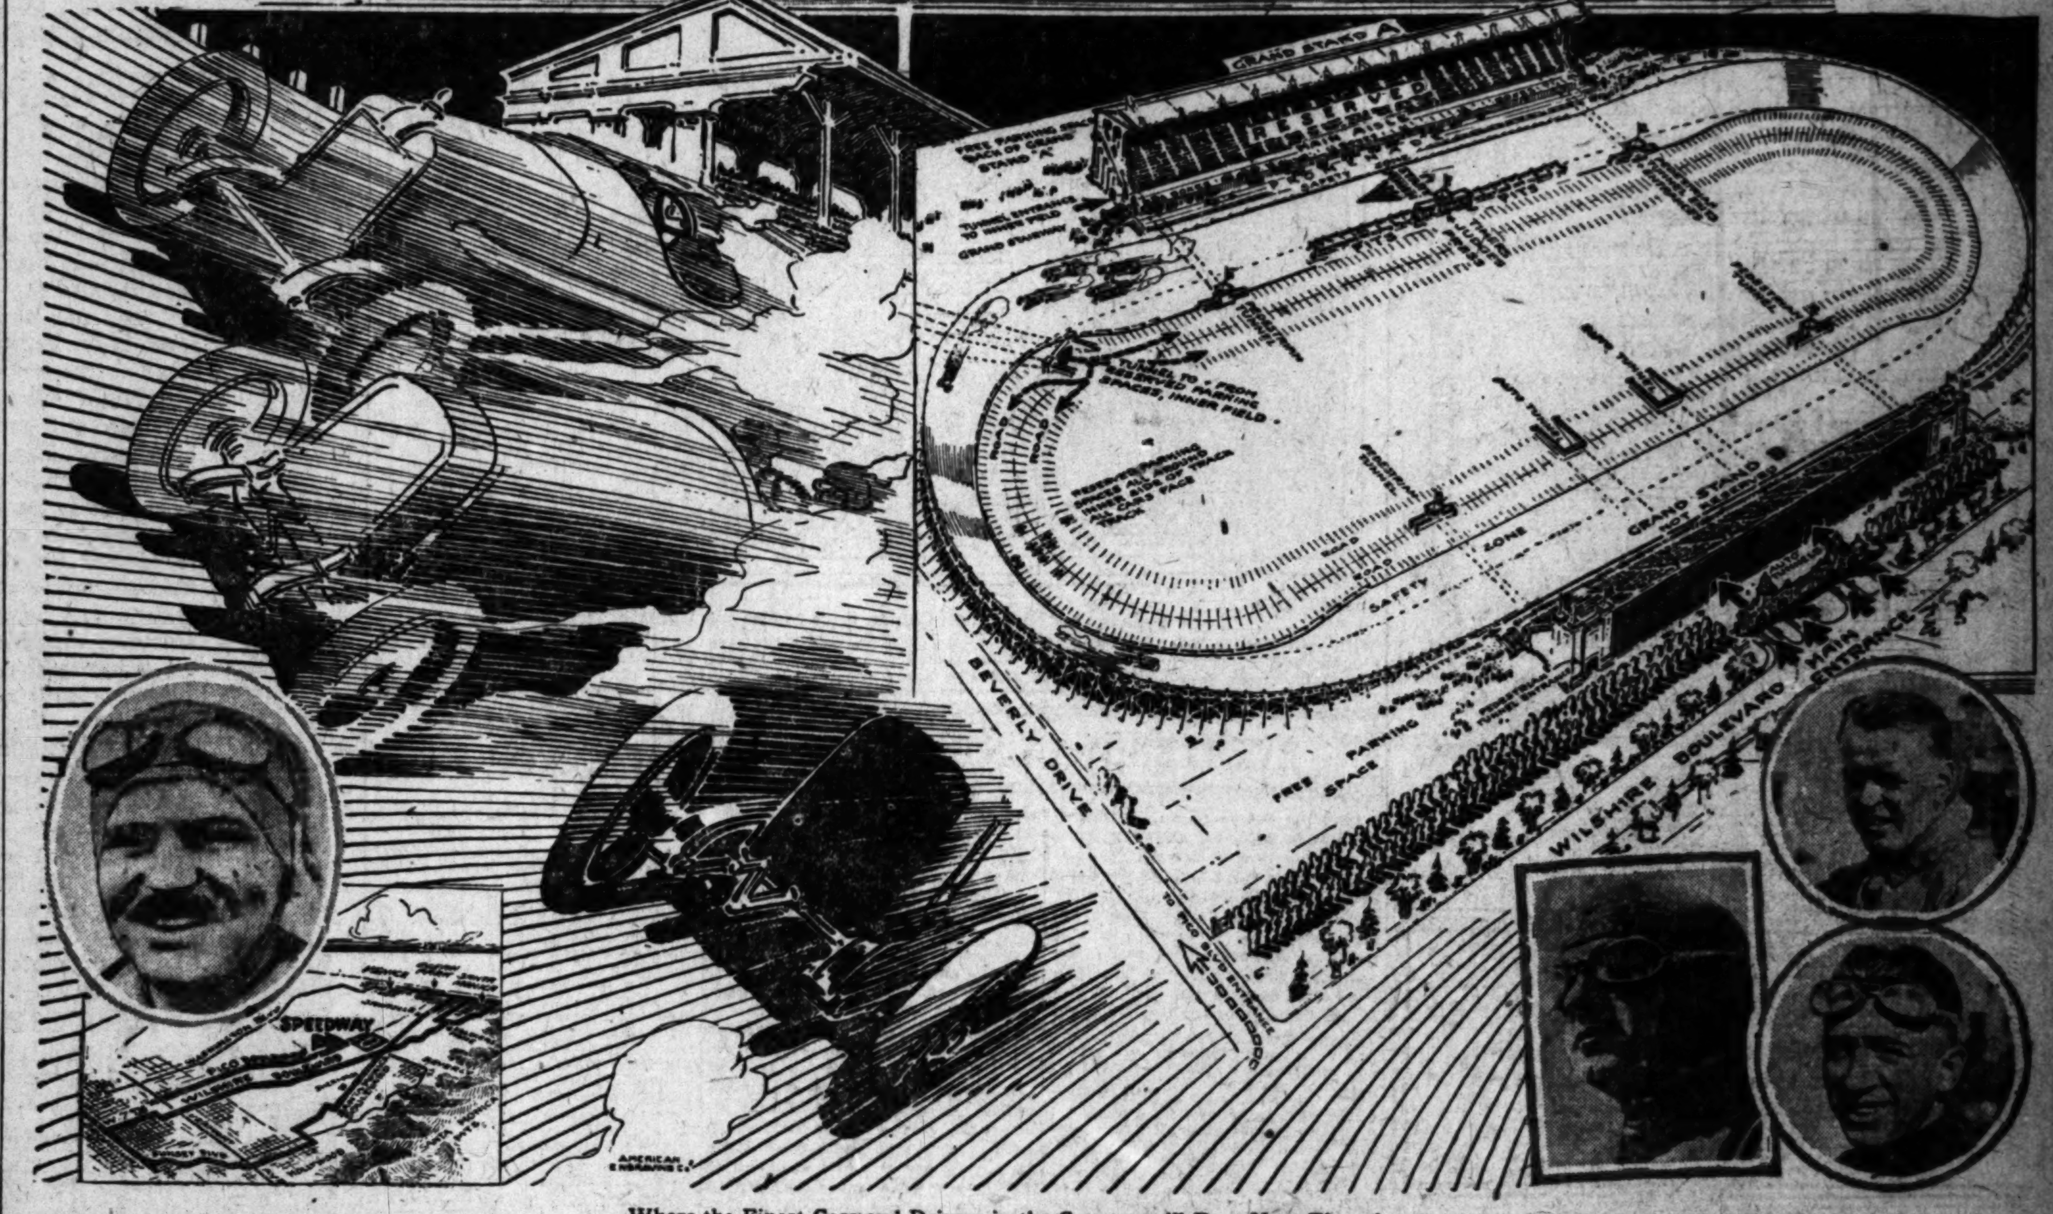
America's Finest and Fastest Racing Plant Ready for Enormous Thanksgiving Day Crowd.



Where the Finest Cars and Drivers in the Country will Race Next Thursday.

The wonderful million-dollar plant of the Los Angeles Speedway is all groomed and ready for the 250-mile championship event Thanksgiving Day. This drawing, by Charles H. Owens, graphically portrays the scene as it will appear. The four speed kings whose photographs are inset are the four leading contenders for the championship.

STANDINGS OF THE DRIVERS.

Points in the championship standings are arbitrarily awarded by the American Automobile Association to certain races on certain tracks and the Los Angeles Speedway is the only track in the country which has been awarded two championship races. The total number of points awarded the Los Angeles Speedway is equal to the total awarded for the famous international 500-mile race at Indianapolis. Add the points shown below to the present standings of the drivers as shown elsewhere and you will have the final championship standings for the 1920 season. Chevrolet, Milton, Murphy and Ralph De Palma still have a chance for the title. Following are the points to be awarded in the Thanksgiving Day 250-mile race:

First	500
Second	260
Third	140
Fourth	80
Fifth	50
Sixth	35
Seventh	25
Eighth	15
Ninth	10
Tenth	5

To date there have been four championship races, the 250-mile event on the Los Angeles Speedway Thanksgiving Day being the fifth and final event of the 1920 season for which championship points are awarded. The standings of the drivers at the present time follow:

Gaston Chevrolet	1030
Tommy Milton	930
Jimmie Murphy	805
Ralph De Palma	605
Rene Thomas (France)	520
Ralph Mulford	350
Joe Thomas	301
Eddie Hearne	205
Ira Vail	140
Eddie O'Donnel	110
Ken Goodson	61
Art Klein	60
Jean Chassagne (France)	50
Roscoe Sarles	40

Joe Ford	35
John De Palma	10

Many to Motor Del Monteward Over Holidays.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DEL MONTE, Nov. 20.—Del Monte is going to be the objectional point for many motor parties over the Thanksgiving holidays, a trip down the peninsula and over the San Juan grade—paved boulevard all the way—has always been popular with motorists.

The big attraction this coming Thanksgiving, however, will be the making of the Monte Carlo movie picture scene at Point Lobos. Arrangements have already been made to have 200 society folks from San Francisco, and the San Mateo peninsula to appear in the picture. Point Lobos is located eight miles from the Hotel Del Monte and the only means of reaching it is by automobile. The machines will, accordingly, play quite a part in the making of the picture. In all liklihood there will be a gathering of several thousand automobiles at Point Lobos on Sunday, November 28.

Cheaper Cars to Save Lives of Builders.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20.—The low-priced car which many manufacturers have of late added to their high-priced line may pull them into the lead during the coming year, trades people believe. The conviction has grown that the anticipated revival of the automobile business may be delayed as regards the more expensive lines well into the coming year. Export trade revival is much impeded under present unfavorable and uncertain exchange conditions and the outlook prior to more certain international arrangements is not regarded as gratifying.

But while the foreign adjustment is being made the "bread and butter car" is being pushed forward by large producers in the apparent belief that the low-priced car will be selling at normal rates before the higher-priced cars regain their stride. Notable examples of the supplementary line are the Packard with its $6000 twin-six and $2975 single six, the Chandler at $1895 with the Cleveland at $1435; the Hudson at $2400 with the Essex at $1595; the Studebaker big six at $2150 with the light six at $1485; the Nash six at $1695 with the four at $1395; the Chalmers at $1795 with the Maxwell at $995; the Paige Lakewood at $2795 with the Glenbrook at $1770; the Overland Knight, $2195 with the four at $895.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY

AUTOMOBILES. The climax of the 1920 speedway racing season, the 250-mile event to be held Thanksgiving Day on the Los Angeles Speedway, carefully outlined and all the facts and figures presented for the speed fans.

Gossip of the week from the motor-car dealers located in the San Francisco Bay region; their doings and their plans.

Motor-car manufacturers are up in arms over proposal by Secretary Houston to double the present sales tax on passenger cars and increase the truck sales tax to four times its present rate.

Gigantic Monte Carlo scenes to be taken near Del Monte about Thanksgiving are certain to draw enormous crowd of motorists to see the actors on gigantic set.

WANTS TO TAX AUTOS HIGHER.

Secretary Houston Proposes Huge Increase.

Evidently Classifies Motor Cars as Luxury.

Manufacturers Let Out Wild Yell for Help.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Nov. 18.—Secretary Houston's proposed plan to increase the Federal sales tax on passenger cars from 5 per cent, the present rate, to 10 per cent and the tax on trucks from 2 to 8 per cent, has drawn a storm of protests from Detroit automobile and truck manufacturers.

"Absurd," ruinous," "grand stand play," "insane," were some of the expressions emitted when word of the Secretary's proposal was received by leaders of the automotive industry.

Loudest among the protest were the motor car makers. It is proposed to boost their tax to 5 times its present figure.

"Just how Secretary Houston figures the automobile truck is a luxury, I don't know," said James Heaslett, president of the Signal Motor Truck Company. "Evidently it is three times as much of a luxury as a passenger car, at least the proposed increase in taxation is three times as much. America has an enormous potential market for trucks at present, to say nothing of the export market. But with tightened credit, we cannot help out industry with this necessary equipment. We did our best, cut our prices and accepted losses. Now comes this proposition to add to our losses an enormous burden of taxation. It can't be done, that's all."

VERY SERIOUS.

"The proposition would be funny if it were not so serious," said W. C. Rowley, vice-president of the Federal Motor Truck Company. "Sales are the goose that lays the golden eggs of government income. Such taxation at this critical time would kill the goose. Tire, steel and part makers immediately would feel the effect as prices rose and sales descended. It would be a fine recipe for a panic."

"The proposition carries no indorsement by the party really in power, and is ridiculous on its face," said Killiam T. Nash, secretary-treasurer of the Lincoln Motors Corporation. "No sane man would put through such a measure, fraught with dangers, at such a time. Two million Americans will testify that the automobile is no such luxury as should be prohibitively taxed, and an equal number would rise with wrath at a measure which would take away their bread of butter."

KINGS CITY BRIDGE OPEN.

The California Highway Commission has accepted as satisfactorily completed the Kings city bridge across the Salinas River, which was constructed under a contract between the State and the Healy-Tibbitts Construction Company of San Francisco. This bridge has now been thrown open to public use and is a notable addition to the highway system of California.

Grand Canyon Trip is Well Worth Trouble.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Dwight C. Lefferts have returned to Redlands from an automobile trip to the Grand Canyon in Arizona. They had a most interesting trip, driving the car as far as Kingman, Ariz., and leaving it there while they continued the trip to the canyon on the train. Returning to Kingman they drove back to Redlands. In the mountains of Arizona there was a heavy snow storm and this caused them to abandon their plan to drive the entire distance.

GREAT SIGHT.

"The Grand Canyon is wonderful at this time of the year," said Mr. Lefferts. "The automobile road there is in good shape most of the time, we were told, but we were glad later that we left the machine at Kingman."

"I was interested in the heavy automobile traffic across country from the East to California," he continued. "We met two to three cars every hour on the way. Most of them were light cars, Fords, Dodges and Chevrolets, and the people driving them had complete camping outfits. Being an orange packer I was interested in knowing whether these people intended to remain in California. I learned that most of them were coming here to make their homes, expecting to work in the fruit industries during the year. I took this for a fine omen, that there will be no shortage of labor."

LITTLE TROUBLE.

Mr. Lefferts says that the drivers of these automobiles had all made the trip across country in good time. The roads are in fairly good condition considering the amount of traffic over them.

WILL BUILD ROAD AT SANTA BARBARA.

The California Highway Commission has authorized advertisement for proposals for reconstructing the pavement in Santa Barbara county originally built by the county of Santa Barbara, near Goleta, for a distance, of about two miles in length, the reconstruction work to consist of the placing of a concrete base twenty-feet wide and six inches thick, reinforced with lateral bars with the addition of steel mesh, the pavement to be laid one-half width at a time so as to impede traffic as little as possible.

CONTRACTOR'S BID FAILS TO CONNECT.

The California Highway Commission has rejected the bid of Guy F. Atkinson of Portland, Or., being the only bid received for the construction of a section of State Highway in Fresno county, between Huron Road and the easterly county boundary, a distance of about 8.1 miles. The engineer's estimate for this work, including the furnishing of materials by the contractor, was $216,042.50, while Mr. Atkinson's bid was $258,620.84.

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING.

National Survey Shows Motor Industry Is Not the Hardest Hit.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Nov. 20.—"The automobile trade has not been hit as hard as other lines of industry, in the present depression; it is already picking up, and all concerned are conservatively optimistic."

This opinion of the present condition of the automobile industry was given Thursday by Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Reeves has just completed a canvass of the principal sales agents of the United States. He came to Detroit to address the motor truck sales managers' convention, in the Hotel Statler, Thursday night, and the Detroit Auto Dealers' Association, Friday night.

WILL IMPROVE.

"Christmas trade will stimulate the flow of money, and therefore the sale of cars," said Mr. Reeves. "The closed-car business gives signs of a very good season—perhaps not as good as the winter of 1919-20, which was phenomenal, but undoubtedly better than any other year. When the dealers close their books for the present year they will have made a very creditable showing," said Mr. Reeves.

"A canvass of twenty-seven di-

UPON these two qualities of motor car performance depend your satisfaction and your safety. When you compare motor cars, be sure you accurately compare these two vital features.

Your only certain way is by keeping a Marmon score card. It is the new and easy way of making comparisons. Marmon welcomes it, and no dealer should hesitate in accepting this basis of demonstration.

Insist upon it. Beware of any car that is not subject to demonstration. It is the only basis of buying now—the only way to safeguard your investment.

WESTINGHOUSE AIR SPRINGS

"Make the Best Car Better"

FROM a standpoint of comfort, Westinghouse Air Springs excel because they prevent road shocks from entering the body of the car.

They also cushion the vital parts of the car from severe jar and vibration — which means economy.

Their actual value is demonstrated by the great many repeat orders received.

This is One Place You Can be Sure to Get the Limit of Holly.

With everybody trying to find holly to help decorate the house and give the baby something nice to choke on, there is a decided scarcity of the little red-berried bushes. But up in Santa Ana Canyon a party in a Maibohm Six found plenty to pick and take home.

EVERYBODY HUNTS HOLLY.

"Getting the jump on Christmas" has apparently become the great outdoor sport with Los Angeles motorists. It is something on the order of "Do your shopping early" in the matter of decorations. Which observations are prompted by the never-ending procession to be encountered any day now on the highways leading into the city of machines loaded down with freshly cut holly sprigs.

A party in a Maibohm six, which the distributors, House & Meyer, sent out to scout for locations in which the best holly is to be found, returned with word that a drive into the hills and mountains in almost any direction would enable motorists to get "tons if they need it."

In Santa Ana Canyon about midway between Peralta and the eastern terminus of the paved canyon road, the hills are literally covered with the flame-topped holiday greenery. Hardly a minute elapses during daylight that a motoring party does not stop somewhere along the stretch to cut holly.

From Santa Ana Canyon the Maibohm party darted up to Cajon Pass, where the crowd of holly-cutting motorists was even larger. All the way up the pass machines were encountered, the occupants of which were bent on getting a supply while the getting was good.

WILD RUMOR ABOUT ADDITION TO LINE.

Last week it was rumored that a new model would be added to the line of the Tulsa Manufacturing Company and was substantiated to some extent by a hurried trip by Wallace W. Gogel of the Guarantee Motor Company to San Francisco, where he held a secret conference with factory men there from Tulsa, Okla. On his arrival back here he would not state specifically as to what the new car would be, or if it was a new model that the Tulsa factory was contemplating adding to their present line of four-cylinder automobiles. Mr. Gogel stated that if there was any addition to the line the public would be given ample notice through announcements in the newspapers.

last week from the East. Likewise Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the contest committee of the A.A.A., who is to the racing game what Foch was to the Allied army.

The big race will start at 1:30 sharp as a concession to the gentlemen who eat their turkey early in the day and will be over by 4:30 at the latest out of regard to those who want to eat afterwards. The big track will be heaved open to the public at 9 o'clock in the morning and a big exhibit of military airplanes and some commercial models, including two big German Junker all-metal monoplanes, will be on view in the infield for those who want to gaze on them.

At noon, Barr's flying circus, said to be an aggregation of wild-eyed young men with no regard for their own health, will take the air and attempt to make the birds ashamed of themselves. These young men will float hither and yon for an hour and a half and at 1:30 sharp Barney Oldfield will lead the racers around the track in the preliminary lap of the great race for the Speedway championship of 1920.

AN IDLE TRUCK SWALLOWS YOUR PROFITS

Every experienced truck operator knows that.

He knows from sad experience that the usefulness of a motor truck, its efficiency as a utility and a moneymaker, is in inverse proportion to the time taken out for repairs, and the cost of those repairs.

A truck continually laid up in the shop, or on the road, being repaired, or waiting for the shipment of necessary parts not quickly available, is a losing proposition.

Highly developed mechanically as trucks are today, they are still mechanical and subject to wear, tear and breakage. Highly skilled as are the truck drivers they are still human and subject to human frailties. Careful as they may be, accidents will happen.

The only solution is to honestly face, recognize these facts and be guided by them. Choose the truck you know is made of the best materials by the best of workmen, aided by the best of machinery, under the best of working conditions.

Choose the truck made by a firm of long, successful experience and high business standing.

Choose the truck for which you can secure needed parts and skilled service with the least possible delay.

That is the Moreland. At the Moreland factory in Burbank and its nine direct factory branches and numerous dealers are constantly kept in stock over $1,000,000 worth of spare parts. Nowhere in the territory served by the Morland should there be over a few hours delay at the most securing any part.

Just think in terms of dollars and cents what saved time represents to you as a business man.

The Lowest Priced Six WITH CORD TIRES In the World

Here is a SIX, with cord tires, at the price of a FOUR

You have this opportunity TODAY. It never happened before—may never happen again. There is every indication that this NEW LOW PRICE can not last. Buy now—before the price advances. Think of it—a Velie Six with cord tires all 'round at only $1660—Delivered—War tax paid.

We have searched all records and fail to find another cord tire equipped six-cylinder car whose price delivered is as low as the Velie Six at $1660. Make your own comparisons. You will be astonished at the remarkable Velie Six values given for $1660. And remember, the Velie bond protects you on this low price.

THE CUT of the Velie Six to $1660, with a guarantee of cash rebate should the car go lower, is the sensation of the car market. The announcement has brought a flood of demand. Experienced motorists see in this price situation an astounding opportunity—but only a temporary opportunity.

The Velie Six with cord tires all around—at the price of a Four! It is the chance of a lifetime that must be grasped before it vanishes all too soon. The very volume of orders will make the car difficult to get. Here is an extraordinary Six value. The same car that sold at $1875 a few weeks ago, and even then with fabric tires.

A Clean Saving of $300

The new low price and full cord tire equipment means an actual cash saving of nearly $300 money in the pocket, to purchasers who act today.

You cannot realize to the full what you get for $1660 until you see the car. Here is the power of the silent, velvety, responsive motor that won the Dyas Yosemite cup—that outstripped higher-priced cars at Pike's Peak—that has the enthusiastic testimony of hundreds of owners to its amazing fuel economy.

Here is the Velie construction all through—the standard that has kept Velie cars on the road for ten years with the world's low upkeep record on service above 100,000 miles.

Genuine Leather Upholstery

Here is the beautiful Velie body—long, roomy, the very latest creation of the famous Velie body builders with deep-plaited genuine leather upholstery—restful seats—every feature of equipment and refinement that you find on high-priced cars.

FRENCH AFTER RACING HONOR.

Expect to Retrieve Laurels at Indianapolis.

Laying Great Stress on New Light Speedsters.

Tremendous Interest Shown in Grand Prix.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 19. — The announcement that smaller racing cars of the type, introduced at the sensational 500-mile dash for gold and glory held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last May, will be the pattern of eligible entries in the French Grand Prix, the first big postwar speed contest to be held in Europe, may be an indication that racing fans will see the largest field of crack foreign drivers ever exhibited in America roll to the tape for the start of the next 500-mile race, which will be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Monday, May 30, 1921.

MADE BIG HIT.

Autos of the 183-cubic inch piston displacement, 1650 pounds minimum weight class, which were the sensation of the season because of their marvelous speed and durability in the gruelling dash over the bricks of the Indianapolis track will also be required in other European races.

The foreigners at Indianapolis last May looked on with amazement when Gaston Chevrolet in an American-made car, designed and built by his brother, Louis, was the first to nod an assent to the checkered flag as he thundered under the wire, a winner, with 125,000 howling spectators looking on.

The speed merchants from overseas could not believe their eyes. With a new type motor which bids fair to revolutionize the automotive industry, but which was untried and declaimed as impossible before the Indianapolis race, America conquered.

HISTORY REPEATS.

It was the first time since 1912 when Joe Dawson, in a National, drove in first, that a Yankee-made car with an American citizen at the helm returned a winner. It was a bitter pill for the motor builders from across the sea to swallow

But they said "We'll be back next year," and they said it with an air of determination that impressed their listeners and now comes the news that the small cars, proven practical because the management of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway demanded that a forward step be made in building cars for the race run under its supervision, will be the racing vogue of Europe.

According to the wiseacres of racing it means that they are already laying plans to wipe out this year's American victory with a foreign win in the next classic.

Dispatches from France state that Ernst Ballot, whose cars were the object of thousands of admiring eyes at Indianapolis last May, and which placed second, fifth and seventh, with Rene Thomas, Ralph De Palma and Jean Chassagne as pilots, has entered four cars in the French Grand Prix. Other European manufacturers looked upon as contenders in the French race are Peugeot, Delage, Bignan, Fiat, Gregoire, Sunbeam, Darracq, Talbot, Voisin, Rolland, Pilain and Minerva.

Since the date of the French race is being arranged so that the participants in the Indianapolis classic, May 30, will have plenty of time to make the trip to the race scene and revamp their cars, if necessary, it is only logical to surmise that the majority of the French Grand Prix entrants will battle with the pick of America in the next annual 500-mile race at Indianapolis.

It will provide a setting for a wonderful race.

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING.

tricts in the country brings reports of four where automobile sales are falling back, six where there is little gain or loss, and seventeen where the trade is picking up. The South is the district showing a decline, while Massachusetts records 100,000 car sales for October," he said.

WILL BE SLOW.

"The depression is not over. Sales will be slow until after the January shows, then, the consensus of opinion is, the trade gradually will build up to slightly better than a normal level.

"We are coming to realize that the automobile business is almost a quasi-public utility. Everyone is interested in it. It gets more publicity than any other line. And when there is a general depression of industry, the incidental depression of the automobile business, occasions much comment.

"We have had three periods of depression in the automobile trade before, in 1907, 1914 and 1919. Not one of them lasted more than ninety days. The present slump bids fair to run true to form."

NOT AFFECTED.

The Reo Motor Car Company, the Dort Motor Car Company and the Federal Motor Truck Company maintain that their business has not been affected by the slump in the automobile vehicle industry. An official of the Federal Company says that the company has been working diligently the past two months with a view of meeting just such a condition as confronts the industry at present.

"This campaign," he says, "we have been told by sales experts is one of the most complete that has ever been utilized in any industry, and we can truthfully say at this time that the campaign, only fifteen days old, is selling trucks at the present time at the rate of 300 per month for us, even in the face of present conditions. We have refused to accept the idea that business is going to be poor for any length of time. We have persuaded our entire sales organization that there is no need for them to stop working at this time, and they have been going harder than ever, and the results are telling in the orders."

MUST IMPROVE.

"We are not only confident, but we are sure that the truck transportation line is going to be good for 1921, for it's pretty good already."

Several days ago the Federal Company began work on an addition to its plants which will increase its floor space by 60,000 square feet. This will give the plant a total of 330,000 square feet.

Several weeks ago the Reo Motor Car Company announced officially it was enjoying the biggest production period in its history, and employing the largest number of workers. Now it is reported that this condition has continued, the company having orders for a long time to come. At the same time the Reo Company has started one of the most extensive national advertising campaigns in its career.

IS DOING WELL.

The Dort Motor Car Company, another big producer of passenger cars, is said to be doing an excellent business. Several of its dealers and distributors have declared that sales have been the best they ever had. Of course, this does not apply to all parts of the country. In the South, for instance, reports are current that sales of automobiles have decreased materially during the past month.

Signs of reviving production continue to appear at other Michigan plants. The Republic Truck Company at Alma is reported as producing 100 trucks a month, and disposing of about 200 vehicles heretofore carried in stock. It is said that the Liberty Motor Company would resume full production this week. General Motors Truck Company and the Oakland Motor Car Company at Pontiac will operate on 100 per cent basis on December 1. The Packard Motor Car Company announces that it will shortly add materially to its forces of production of the new single six.

SERVICE IS MAIN PART OF BUSINESS.

TIRE CONCERN FINDS THAT IT PAYS TO HELP OUT CUSTOMERS.

After the purchaser of a tire leaves the dealer's store, the duty of the latter just begins if the opinion of C. J. Reynolds, who boosts for Hartford cord tires amounts to anything.

"For eight years the firm of Nelson & Price, Inc., has been selling tires in Los Angeles and then giving service that would back up these tires says Reynolds. It has cost us a lot of money, but every cent spent on service has come back to us tenfold in the good will of our customers.

"We maintain a fleet of service vehicles that would compare favorably with the fire departments of some cities. They are primed to go at a moments call at any time. They are not limited to districts, they travel everywhere. When a customer buys a tire from us, he buys service. The tire that is delivered to him is just the first step in rendering this service. We are here to see that every user of a Hartford tire gets mileage service. To keep his car rolling on Hartford tires with air in them is our business."

INSULATION REPAIR.

When on the road it is found that wiring insulation is broken, with all its attendant troubles, the injured insulation may be quickly and easily repaired by using a small quantity of the tar, which is to be found on top of the battery. Melt the tar, and while it is hot spread it over the break in the insulation and cover the whole job with a piece of cloth. Of course, if electrician's tape is at hand this may be used to repair the break; indeed, this is precisely the sort of service for which the tape is intended.

Studebaker

IT IS HERE!

You are especially invited to attend the initial showing of the new Studebaker "Light Six" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

Three years ago the Studebaker Corporation set out to design and perfect a super-fine, small, six-cylinder car. The eager desire on the part of the motoring public for the vibrationless power plant of the six in a car that was light enough and to give the maximum economy and yet luxurious was unmistakable.

The first car built was driven across the continent eighteen months ago, and was tested in the mountains and valley of our own California. Eight months later a hundred cars were built, partly by hand, and sent to various parts of the country for a final checking up. Three were delivered here in Los Angeles—one to So. Cal. Edison Co., one to Stillwell Car & Supply and the third to M. H. Lewellyn, assistant service supervisor of Don Lee.

The precaution taken and the expense incurred in making sure that the new car lived up to the reputation of the Studebaker engineers, can be easily understood in the light of the fact that $20,000,000 was being invested in plants and special machinery at South Bend, Ind., to produce this car when finally passed.

The first hundred cars wrote a new chapter in motor car history. By reason of their performance alone, without advertising or sales effort, a countrywide demand was created of sufficient volume to absorb the factory production. And now this fine small car is ready for your inspection. It is a fitting mate for the Studebaker "Special Six" and "Big Six," which have made "This a Studebaker Year."

CALIFORNIA TOP HAS POPULARITY.

THEY ARE RAPIDLY GROWING IN FAVOR THROUGHOUT THE EAST THESE DAYS.

"The efforts and tendencies on the part of manufacturers to produce semiinclosed cars to fill the gap between the complete inclosed machine and the touring car has produced a veritable fad for the California top in the East as well as here," says Robert Thompson, of the Robert Thompson Company, body builders.

"With this style of top it is possible to buy a moderately priced car and at the same time enjoy all the comforts of the higher-priced inclosed job by placing one of these all-weather tops on the body of the open job. There have been some very striking improvements made on the California top during the last year which make ot possible to have a complete inclosed car at will, and in more moderate weather an open job.

LUBRICATION NOW HAS NO FAVORITES.

As an impartial rooter, the gentleman of famous memory who sat on the roof and yelled, "Go it, wife. Go it, bear," will have nothing on C. A. Roesch of the Alemite Lubricator Company when he encourages the drivers in the big Turkey Day speed event at Beverly. With but a single exception, all of the drivers who compete in the race have equipped their cars with the Alemite lubricating system, and their chassis lubrication will be accomplished by the high-pressure Alemite route.

NEW HOME WILL SOON BE READY.

RUSH OF BUSINESS MAKES IT MOST IMPORTANT TO GET LOCATED.

D. F. Poyer & Son, distributors of the Transport truck, are already making preparations to move to their new home at Sixth and St. Julian streets, which is nearing completion so rapidly that it will be ready for occupancy in about ten days, according to Lester P. Poyer.

"Situated as we have been, in cramped quarters for some time, we have been handicapped in showing the several Transport models as we will be able to now, and we have also suffered from a lack of storage and service space. All this will be obviated in our new quarters," he stated.

This concern started distributing the Transport truck in Southern California about fourteen months ago and in that time it has almost 100 of these trucks in service in the hands of owners, said Poyer. Several of the city's thriving and fast-growing business houses have standardized with this truck and have the nucleus of larger fleets.

DEALER AND OWNER HAVE NIFTY PARTY.

For the first time in the history of the automotive industry of this city, a very entertaining and instructive "get-together" meeting of the dealer, the owner and the driver was held in the salesroom of the William L. Hughson Company, distributor of Federal motor trucks, at Tenth and Olive, Friday evening, November 12.

OF SAN BERNARDINO FILLED WITH FOREIGN CARS.

San Bernardino and drive busy streets of that city have some first-hand knowledge of the swarms of transcontinental tourists who are daily rolling into Southern California, is the declaration of W. F. Lloyd, superintendent of the shop and service departments of Smith Bros., Peerless distributors. "It will be a revelation," he asserted.

"Last Sunday we drove to San Bernardino and everyone in the party was astounded at the 'foreign cars' that lined the curbs and were to be seen driving about the streets and on the boulevard. By the 'foreign' registration plates, the desert dust on the cars and the loads of camp equipage and luggage, it was an easy matter to pick out the incoming tourists," said he: "We counted this class of cars in several blocks and they seemed to be equal to about 35 or 40 per cent of those to be seen. In the past week there have been more arrivals of Peerless owners from the Middle West and the East. Advices received by Smith Bros. indicate that more owners will arrive here after the holidays, following their cars that have already been sent by freight.

FIND LAIR OF BOLD BURGLAR.

Tiburcio Vasquez Was Surely One Tough Guy.

Would Hold Up Travelers on El Camino Real.

Evidence of His Work Found by Motorists.

Every motorist who has been to Camp Curry no doubt remembers Wallace Curtis's famous song about the "burglar bold." Few motorists, however, have undergone the undoubtedly exciting, but otherwise unpleasant, experience of being held up by one of these gentlemen of the road.

A BAD PLACE.

If motoring had been the fashion in the good old days of the miners and other less scrupulous forty-niners, hold-ups would have been about as frequent as cylinder explosions in at least one portion of the King's Highway.

Those who have traveled on El Camino Real to Monterey have passed the scenes of many as thrilling a "stand-and-deliver" job as those of the modern movies. An Oldsmobile party from the J. W. Leavitt headquarters visited this historic region last week and ran across fresh evidences of the exciting hold-ups of early California history.

A HARD EGG.

It seems that one debonair villain by the name of Tiburcio Vasquez managed a handsome revenue with the aid of the wayfarers of that not-yet-forgotten era. He had an uncanny way of turning up when least expected, behind the business end of some very business-looking Spanish pistols. But no matter how quickly the posses comitatus or vigilantes of the district got under way in pursuit, Tiburcio could never be located.

The popular impression was that he had a hiding place in the rugged pinnacle country east of Soledad, but such was not the case, although he did make use of this rockbound region when hard pressed on several memorable occasions. The discoveries reported by the Oldsmobile party prove that Tiburcio's haven of security was in the famous painted caves to the north of the San Antonio de Padua mission on the Milpitas rancho near Mission Creek.

FINDS WEAPONS.

E. J. Dutton of Jolon, pioneer of this section, found Tiburcio's formidable weapons — a brace of now rusty cap pistols of antiquated design—together with the leather holster that swung over the pommel of the bandit's saddle. Close by were letters — documentary evidence o fTiburcio's presence.

As Dutton explained the story to the Olds tourists, the pursuers would be hot on the trail of the daring highwayman, when suddenly he would disappear as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up.

COMBINES MANY GOOD QUALITIES.

ADVANTAGES OF THIN AND THE THICK PLATES ARE PUT IN ONE.

"One important feature in the construction of the Westinghouse battery," says Harry W. Harrison. Southern California and Arizona distributor for this product, "is the way its creators have taken advantage of the best points of both the thin and thick plate batteries now on the market.

"For many years both types have had their champions, and while one type has had a distinct advantage in one way, the other had equally important ones in another, which offset the claims of superiority for either one. It has remained for the famous Westinghouse research laboratories to embody the good features of both in one battery."

According to Mr. Harrison, he has recently ordered an additional carload of Westinghouse batteries from the factory for Los Angeles distribution, due to the unprecedented demand for the new battery from the motoring public, from the first announcements that the batteries were ready for distribution.

REAR AXLE OID LEAKAGE.

The first step in determining the cause of oil leakage onto the brake bands is to see whether or not the level of oil in the differential housing is correct. There need be no more oil than is necessary to give the ring a gear dip of about an inch. If however, there is much more than this amount of lubricant, the excess will work its way to the brake bands and cause slipping. Sometimes, of course, the leakage is due to worn washers in the tube ends.

SLEEVE VALVES DO WORK.

Signal triumphs were gained by Knight-motored cars in the two recent motor contests of first importance in France, according to advices received last week by W. B. Conditt, Southern California distributor for the R. & V. Knight six. Motor contests have been virtually nonexistent in France since 1914, and the fact that Knight-motored cars were victorious in both these events is good evidence, according to Conditt, that no war-time development of the poppet-valve type has surpassed the efficiency of the sleeve-valve motor.

"The Gaillon hill climb, the oldest event of its type in France was won recently by a Voisin-Knight," said Conditt last week. "The climb consists of one kilometer of 10 per cent grade, and the contestants are given a flying start. Nearly 100 touring cars competed in the event this year, and the Voisin-Knight won over this big field by covering the kilometer at the rate of 60.3 miles per hour.

"The other event was the big fuel competition test at LeMans, which brought together eighty contestants. This was likewise won by a Voisin-Knight, this time a sedan, which covered 136 miles on 4.8 American gallons of gasoline. This is an average of over 29 miles per gallon, which is phenomenal, in view of the fact that the car in question weighed 5321 pounds. French fuel contests are run on a somewhat different basis than ours. Each machine is given a stated amount of gasoline, based upon the weight of the car and its engine size, and the car covering the greatest distance wins.

SLANG TELLS THE STORY.

"What is torque?' Despite the fact that this word is one of the most frequently used in the entire automobile vocabulary, its meaning is not well understood," says Fred Rutledge, of the Rutledge Motor Company, distributor of the National sextet.

"And the more the word is explained technically, and scientifically, the more confused does its meaning become, in the mind of the average automobile owner."

"Thus when it is explained that torque means the foot pounds of energy developed by an engine at any given speed, the average motor fan may assume an air of intelligence, but the chances are that his mind is registering a blank.

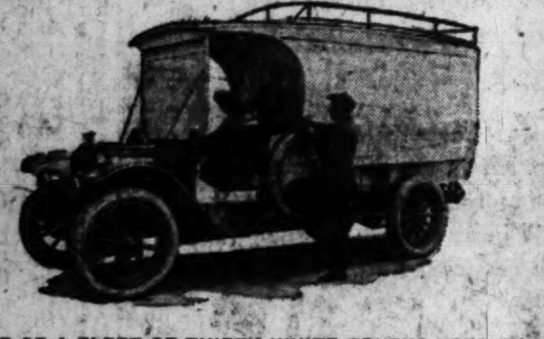
Likewise, when he is told that torque means the turning effort exerted by an engine, as distinct from its power, which is turning effort multiplied by speed, he is as a rule just as much enlightened as he was before.

American slang, lucid and expressive, is due a vote of thanks from the motoring public for finally interpreting the meaning of torque so that the layman can understand.

The definition given to torque by the garage mechanic is vigorous and illuminating.

The torque of an engine, says the garage expert, is its "kick." That's all there is to it.

A six-cylinder, high-efficiency engine like that used in the National sextet, for instance, will have more "kick" than an engine of some other type, giving it a faster pick-up and more power at various engine speeds.



ONE OF A FLEET OF THIRTY WHITE TRUCKS USED BY A LOCAL BAKING CO.

SERVICE AT LOWEST COST

In the service of the leading bakers of Los Angeles, White Trucks are daily proving their superiority.

The constant wear and tear of stops, starts, hard pulls and long fast grinds under full load have proved that White Trucks render service at the least cost by their low upkeep and constant utility.

Seven local baking concerns rely on White Trucks to assist in the distribution of their products, using in all fifty-five Whites, many of which have run more than 100,000 miles.

THE RACE BY VIGOR,
NOT BY VAUNTS, IS WON

WHETHER it be the race of life itself, or of a runner on the road, or of motor cars, victory comes to courage, strength and endurance.

Here at the Peerless factory we have tried to avoid a boasting and vaunting spirit. Driven by certain ideals of accomplishment, we have dug deep into the realms of mechanics, of chemistry, of physics, so that we might bring together in a motor car the qualities of vigor.

These lines of Lowell's:

"Endurance is the crowning quality.

And patience all the passion of great hearts."

Great, then, the heart of a motor car if into it have been built the gentleness of patience and the ruggedness of courage and fighting power.

Many years of work and waiting produced the Peerless Two-power-range Eight—too many years, indeed, to risk the disaster that comes from superlative talk, however warranted it may be in our own minds.

We believe in the Peerless Car. That others believe in it, also, is shown by the large percentage of owners who return to us for new cars and are glad to find that in the past five years we have not seen fit to change the fundamental principle upon which the first Two-power-range Eight was built.

These are the real rewards we have worked for. They are the real measure of our accomplishment.

Illo, proprietor of the People's Auto Market, who has bought and sold over 11,000 motor cars during the past few years and has noted the performance of practically every make. Mr. Illo bought one of the new Studebaker Light Six sedans from the Paul G. Hoffman Company recently, after investigating everything else in its class. With the announcement of this Light Six model the Paul G. Hoffman Company, local Studebaker distributors, is arranging a special display for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

LIKESCOAST BUSINESS.

…ing a rapid personal survey …e automobile market west of … Rockies, S. E. Ackerman, sales …ger of the Franklin Automobile …any of Syracuse, N. Y., paid …ern California a brief three-… visit last week. In company … Ralph Hamlin, Franklin dis…tor for Southern California, he …d the Hamlin branches in San … and in Pasadena, and ex…ed himself as highly pleased … Franklin sales conditions here, … Hamlin an especial compliment on his October business, which set a new high record for Franklin sales for one month.

"Franklin business all over the United States showed a phenomenal increase in response to the radical decrease in Franklin prices," Mr. Ackerman told Hamlin. "The Southern California business has been especially gratifying, however.

"In order to keep Franklin prices from increasing, however, it is vitally necessary that our output of cars be kept at top-notch. The present price levels of Franklin cars were set upon the assumption that they would produce a demand that would keep our production at the highest possible pitch. That has been true so far, but a slackening of demand will mean an inevitable increase of Franklin prices for it is only volume production that keeps the overhead per car down, and makes possible our present Franklin prices."

Mr. Ackerman also complimented Hamlin warmly on the branch establishments he maintains in San Diego and Pasadena. "Your Pasadena building would be regarded in most eastern cities as a worthy establishment for a distributor's headquarters instead of merely a branch," he told Hamlin.

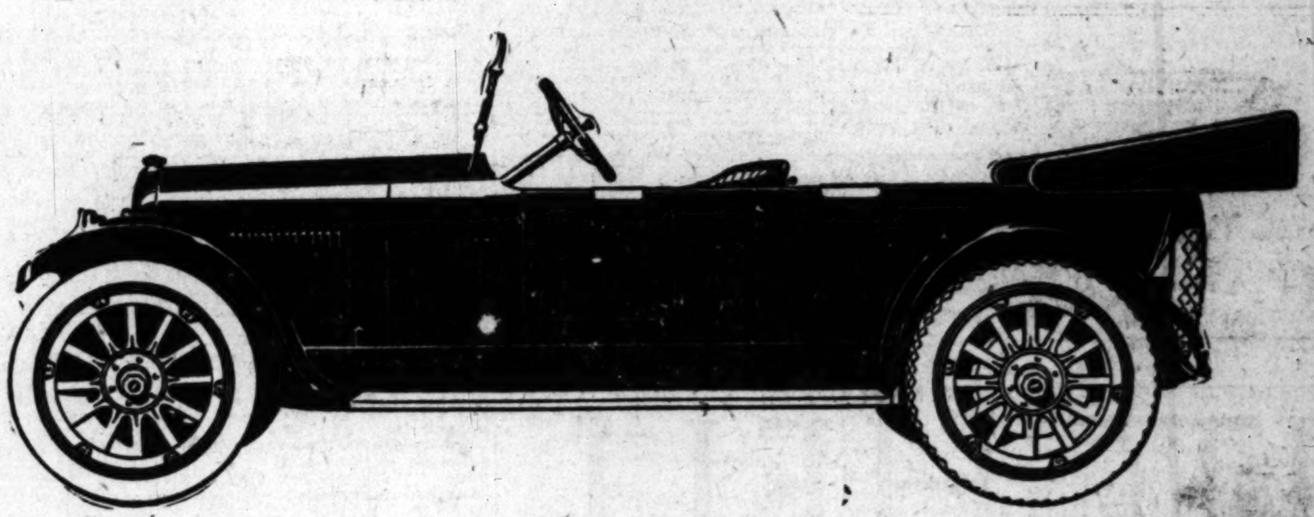
THE NASH FOUR



Announcing

THE NASH FOUR

$1665 with Cord Tires
F.O.B. PACIFIC COAST POINTS.

The new Nash Four, a product of expert engineering and expert manufacture, is now shown for your inspection.

It is a quality motor car, light in weight but strongly and finely built to endure the hardest service.

Like the Nash Six, it has two conspicuous and outstanding features—unusual power, due to its Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor and really exceptional beauty of design and finish.

Notable, too, is the low operating cost of this car.

Tests covering many thousands of miles have demonstrated that the Nash Four is unusually saving of gasoline, oil and tires.

The character of the Nash Four may be judged not only by sturdy excellence of construction but in the fineness of the many important details which make for superior comfort and convenience.

It will be produced in a new Nash factory at Milwaukee, a plant specially constructed and equipped to produce this car.

When operating at full capacity, this new plant will equal in volume of output the present big Nash factory at Kenosha, where 50,000 Nash Sixes are being built this year.

We will welcome the opportunity to show you the Nash Four at your earliest convenience.

ASK FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Northern Auto Club Demands More Officers.

Proposes Charging Sum for Driving Licenses.

Will Urge Plan at Coming Conference.

The California State Automobile Association yesterday announced its determination to obtain an adequate corps of State inspectors to insure proper enforcement of the State motor-vehicle laws.

TO CHARGE FEE.

The association proposes that the State charge a nominal fee for operator's licenses and that funds derived from this source be used to employ not less than 100 State inspectors. With such a State patrol, President Percy E. Towne of the association pointed out yesterday, it will be possible not only to enforce the State laws, but to punish habitual violators.

Under the present system a motorist may be arrested for dangerous driving five times in the course of a month in various cities. There is available no complete record of his infractions of the law and in consequence, President Towne points out, he appears as a first offender in each court. With State enforcement a record of each violation would be available.

SUCH AS THESE.

The evils of glaring headlights, cutting in and reckless driving, officials of the automobile association believe will be reduced to a minimum through proper enforcement without discrimination.

The legislative committee of the association has outlined a program for presentation to the legislative conference in Sacramento, November 22. This conference is called by Supt. Charles Chenu of the State motor vehicle department and all interests have been invited to send representatives.

URGE ADOPTION.

It is the intention of the association to urge the conference to approve its plan for State inspectors, whose jurisdiction will be limited exclusively to regulation of motor-vehicle traffic.

PRUDENTIAL STORAGE & MOVING

This Business has Boomed Through the Use of Trucks.

Here we have the fleet of Moreland trucks operated by the Prudential Storage and Moving Company, which has made a phenomenal growth.

BROKEN BATTERY JARS.

The rubber jars in the storage battery may become cracked if the battery is not properly supported. The clamps which hold the battery in place must always be kept tight; otherwise the battery will bounce up and down with the result that some of the jars will be cracked and the electrolyte will leak away. This latter condition leads to short circuiting and possible complete destruction of the battery.

TRUCKS HELPED BUSINESS.

"We attribute our success to service and courtesy," remarked Mr. Blakemore of the Prudential Storage and Moving Company. "Yes," added his partner, Mr. Castang, "and that service means the best equipment that mone can buy and that equipment, so far as haulage is concerned, means Moreland trucks."

This Los Angeles company has had a spectacular growth in the short two years in which they have been in business. Starting in a small picture house, they now have three houses with over 30,000 feet of storage space and have just contracted for a fine new fireproof structure, which will furnished 50,000 square feet more.

A year ago they bought their first Moreland truck chassis. Upon this was mounted a van body built by the Moreland company along lines originated by the purchasers. This van body has attracted wide attention over the whole sweep of the Coast and many compliments from eastern visitors.

This truck has never missed a day nor an hour, running regular on its job until two weeks ago, when it was put into the shop on account of a pump leak, which was fixed in forty minutes At the same time the valves were ground for the first time. It has averaged to carry anywhere from two to four tons. Recently it carried 9081 pounds in the rain to La Jolla without a slip. On one occasion, with a deceptive load of batteries, the scales showed seven tons for the load. It has been up and down the coast to San Francisco, Santa Barbara, San Diego and other distant points and never once has faltered. From that one Moreland has grown a fleet, a new two-and-one-half and a one-ond-a-half-ton being the latest additions.

DOINGS OF THE AUTOMOBILE DEALERS ALONG BAY CITY'S GASOLINE THOROUGHFARES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—Plans for the San Francisco Automobile Show are progressing rapidly now that the opening date has been set by the committee in charge of the annual local automobile salon. The San Francisco show will open on February 19, next, and from the preliminary plans made public by Manager George Wahlgreen, the coming show will outshine all previous ones in point of artistic decoration and in amount of space taken for the display of automobiles, trucks, tractors and accessories.

In addition to the auditorium proper, an enormous tent, 400 feet ong by 100 feet wide, will be erected on Grove street, extending from Larkin to Polk, where the trucks and trailers will be on display. The passenger cars will, as in years past, be shown on the main floor of the Civic Auditorium. The second, third and fourth floors will be devoted to the largest display of accessories ever shown west of Chicago. The basement, heretofore used by trucks, will be turned over to the tractor men and a big tractor showing is assured. In every way, the San Francisco show is expected to set new standards of excellence, and the local Dealers' Association, through Wahlgreen, is working for national recognition to put the salon here in the same grouping as the New York and Chicago shows.

Preparations for the Oakland Automobile Show are also being pushed forward. The yearly display of new models in the East Bay city will take place in the Oakland Auditorium during the week from January 31 to February 6. Robert Martland, secretary of both the California Automobile Trade Association and of the Alameda County Automobile Trade Association, will again manage the Oakland Auto Show. The same show committee that served last year will also officiate again. The members are: William Weber, chairman; Ed Wells, Harold D. Knudson, H. B. Rector, Charles Hebrank and J. Charles Nagle.

C. R. Norton and George Neill, Hare's Motor, Inc., executives for Pacific Coast territory, spent the greater part of last week in San Francisco, in conference with the local Locomobile branch heads and with the forces of C. D. Rand & Co., Mercer distributors in Northern California. Norton is Pacific Coast manager for Hare's motors, while Neill is chief of advertising and sales promotional work on the Coast.

Lou H. Rose, Chalmers and Maxwell distributor for the northern half of the State, was host at a banquet last week to the combined Chalmers and Maxwell dealer forces. With the addition of the Maxwell subdistributors to his already strongly organized Chalmers dealers, Rose now has the largest dealer organization west of Chicago, it is claimed. The banquet was a real get-together and was in celebration of a most successful Chalmers year, as well as of the acquisition of the Maxwell line.

That California in general and San Francisco in particular are enthusiastic over the possibilities of the project to pave the entire length of the Lincoln Highway, is the report of G. S. Hoag, acting field secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, who is here in the interests of the transcontinental paving project. If plans now in hand carry through, there will be an unbroken strip of splendidly paved road from New York City to San Francisco, making possible year-round motor travel from one end of the country to the other. This would be of vast benefit to San Francisco in a business way, declares the Lincoln Highway official.

T. K. Jarrard, vice-president and general manager of the Apperson Brothers' Automobile Company, is on his way to San Francisco, according to Leroy D. Frasier, head of the reorganized Apperson agency in this city. Jarrard is making a flying trip over the western territory and plans to make his first stop here, Frasier announces.

Following several important conferences with George A. Boyer, president of the Franklin Motor Car Company, Franklin distributors for Northern California, S. E. Ackerman, sales manager for the Franklin factory, left to complete a whirlwind tour of the Pacific Coast territory before returning to Franklin headquarters at Syracuse, New York. Ackerman expressed himself as immensely pleased with conditions in California and declared that Franklin business is brisk in practically every large distributing center of the nation.

ALUMINUM PISTONS.

Thousands of cars of today are fitted with aluminum pistons and in many of them the fitting of these parts is incorrect, causing the owner to form the opinion that aluminum is unsatisfactory as a piston material. This is an erroneous idea, as aluminum pistons when properly fitted give much better results than iron ones. One of the common troubles with aluminum pistons is a slapping which occurs when the engine is first started and continues until it is warmed up. To cure this some owners employ a heavier oil, but the trouble with this plan is that the heavy lubricant is not of the body that gives satisfactory results after the engine has warmed up thoroughly.

Why You Want This Sedan Now

Lexington
MINUTE MAN SIX

ALREADY the reaction to the price excitement has come. As always—"Water finds its level."

Today the Lex-Sedan stands higher than ever in the public esteem. Its value appears greater, its price fairer, and its advanced design more desirable.

Here are the reasons why substantial people are now ordering Lex-Sedans:

—They are protected against price reductions.

—They realize, regardless of price, that it is poor economy to buy a closed car now that will be old-style next year.

—They know the Lex-Sedan is the leading style closed car type for seasons to come.

—They want the exclusive advantages of Lexington that include the Moore Multiple Exhaust System, the Lexi-gasifier, the Cable Foot Brake, the One-finger Emergency Brake, the 2-Way Head Lamps, etc.

—They want this Lex-Sedan because it is lighter, easier to handle, and decidedly more economical of gas and tires. There is no excess weight and no overload for the motor.

—They know only Lexington can offer this unusual value, because of a close working alliance between all material sources.

—They know the value to them of having a car built by a company that is closely affiliated with ten other factories specializing in motor car parts.

—They will not be satisfied with anything inferior, but want the fine appearance and perfect interior appointments of this Lex-Sedan.

—And, above all, they have been shown in actual demonstration that the Lexington leads in performance, comfort, and economy.

The above are a few reasons why we want an opportunity to show you how to get the most for your money right now in this Lex-Sedan. See us today.

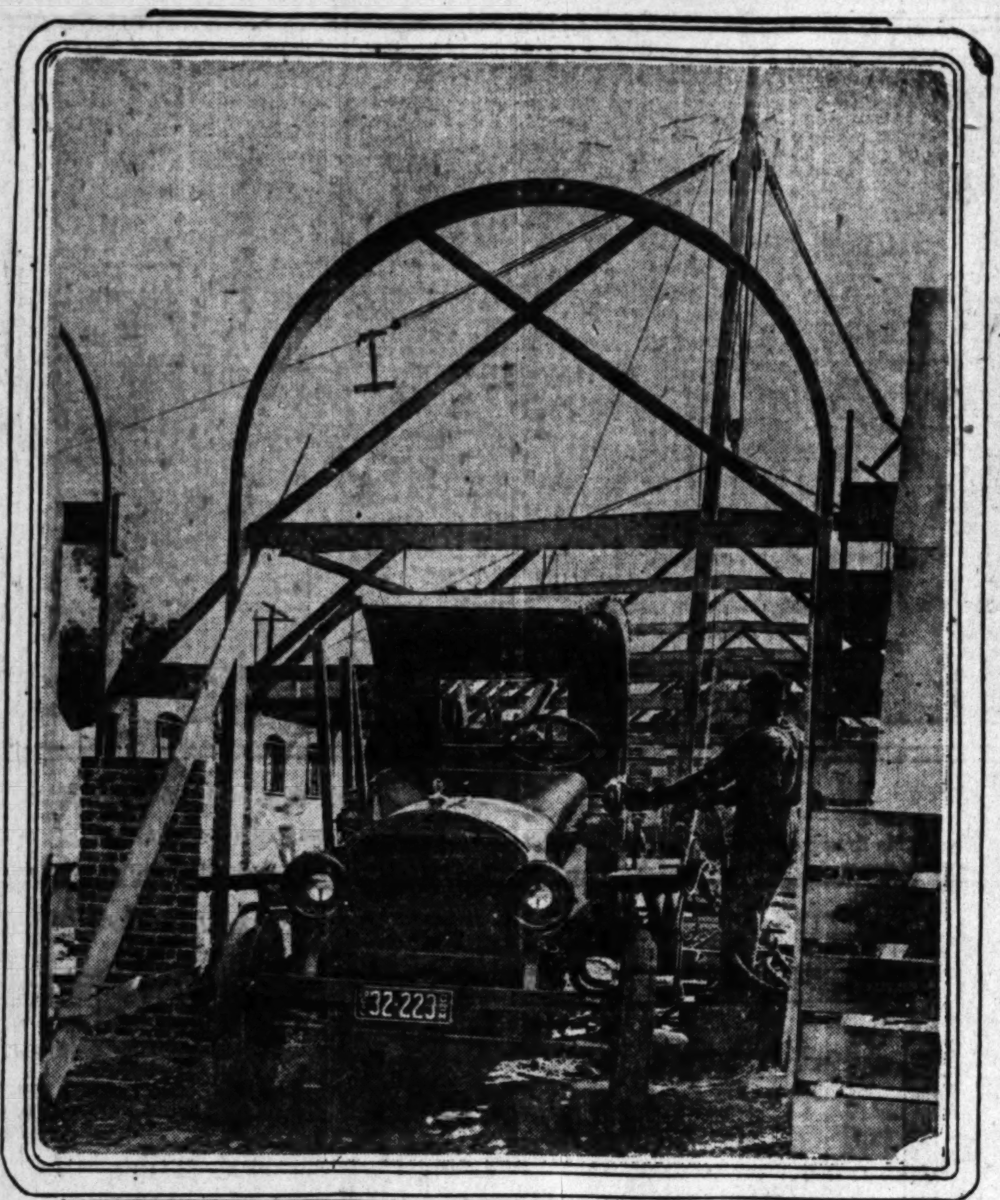
Pursell specializes in setting heavy safes, cabinets, in placing heavy beams and girders as a part of the construction of new buildings, and erecting machinery.

This equipment consists of the Mack with a special body of his own design, with extensions along the sides of the hood so that long poles used in his work may be carried easily, and a vertical winch, driven off the truck's countershaft. The winch is located directly back of the cab and less than three feet of the truck body's carrying space is taken up. A trap door in the bed of the body gives access to a ring located in an additional cross-member of the frame, to which a pully can be hooked so that when it is necessary to pull at right angle to the truck, the pull on the winch is always horizontal.

Pursell recently removed a 13,000-pound safe from a room on the second floor of a buildnig in Mercantile Place to an office on one of the upper floors of the new Pantages Building, through the medium of his new Mack equipment. At the Pantages Building the elevator shaft was boarded over at the ground floor and the hoist made up the shaft. The shaft could not be covered over at the floor where the safe was to be deposited, so Pursell's equipment enabled him to keep the six-and-one-half-ton safe suspended until it could be drawn out of the elevator shaft by being moved about an inch at a time, despite the heavy load and the fact that the Mack motor was operating the winch while standing at the curb approximately 150 feet distant and at right angle to the safe.

Pursell has found his equipment especially satisfactory in lifting girders for new buildings. The old system was to hitch a team of horses, either directly to the rope, running through a block to the top of a gin-pole, or to a capstan. In that case, it was difficult to do the work accurately, but with the power driven winch, absolute accuracy is obtained. The truck can be driven within the structure when this kind of work is being done, and there is no need to block the street with a capstan and team of horses. Pursell says his Mack outfit speeds up operations remarkably. He carries enough supplies of all sorts so that upon arrival at a job, he can be equipped properly, no matter what the requirements may be. He can do a job in Pomona in the morning and another in Los Angeles in the afternoon of the same day, while if dependent upon teams, two or three days would be required for the same undertaking.



Easing Dobbin Out of Another of His Favorite Jobs.

This is the Mack truck of Frank Pursell's stable which runs around doing little odd jobs such as lifting safes into second and third-story windows and little things like that.

SCARCELY USES ANY OIL AT ALL.

DRIVER KEEPS CLOSE TAB AND SHOWS REAL ECONOMY OF HIS CAR.

A Moon owner of Long Beach, F. S. Hall by name, in a signed statement asserts that he drove a distance of 2774 miles and only used five quarts of cylinder oil, according to F. S. Paden, manager of the California Motor Company, Moon distributor for Southern California. In his statement, Hall says in part:

"I drove to Bakersfield over the Ridge Road and never changed gears all the way and used one gallon of gasoline to seventeen miles. As to cylinder oil, it is almost unbelievable. The first 1320 miles it was driven there were only two additional quarts put in. I drained the case and took out seven quarts. I refilled with eight quarts, drove it 1334 miles, without putting any oil in, then put in four quarts and drove it 120 miles farther and then drained out six quarts, making a total of 2774 miles to five quarts of oil."

EASE OF HANDLING A TALKING POINT.

MODERN TRAFFIC CONGESTION MAKES SMALL CAR VERY BIG ASSISTANCE.

Street car men and traffic officers will tell you that each day finds our downtown streets more and more congested and, although the installation of the electric signal system at intersections promises to help matters considerably, it must be admitted that traffic conditions in Los Angeles have reached a point where they must be considered by the purchaser of a motor car.

A skillful driver, of course, experiences little difficulty in the city canyons and can snake through the crowded streets with almost any car, but judging from the numerous tangles and not infrequent serious accidents that occur downtown, the average driver is not skillful.

One of the features which have contributed to the success of the new Saxon duplex model, according to Andrew Baldwin of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company, distributors of the car, is its ability to take care of itself in traffic. It is unusually adept at squeezing into a tight parking space alongside the curb because of its short wheel base, which measures only 112 inches.

FITTING PITTED VALVES.

The owner who does his own work on the car will find that valves which are pitted may be easily and quickly refitted by having a local garage or machine shop cut a new face, the lathe being used for this purpose. This is a matter of a scant five minutes' work, whereas grinding in until the face is clear may mean hours of tiring work. Of course, the newly cut valve will have to be ground to its seat, but this is not a formidable task.

Gentlemen:-

Right now we are in the market for two 1918 CHANDLERS. We have sold 21 used CHANDLERS since the first of the year and every deal made us a satisfied customer. It is a fact that we sell more used CHANDLERS than any other car in its price class, and we usually have one or two orders on hand from customers who ask us to buy a CHANDLER of certain model for them.

We find that people are willing to pay good prices for used CHANDLERS, not only because of the fact that they are assured that they will receive good service from the car, but because they know that your dealer organization all over Southern California assures them service and attention wherever they go.

Anyone who buys a new car is eventually going to have a used car to trade in or sell. When that time comes, the man who has bought a CHANDLER will discover he has a car that finds a ready market and shows the smallest depreciation in value of any car we know in its price class.

Yours very truly

SPECIALIZE ON BODIES.

Recent enlargements to the body building plant of the Daniels Motor Car Company have converted it into the largest factory in the United States devoted to the building of custom-built bodies, according to advices received recently by Hall-Hebbard, Southern California distributors for the Daniels eight.

"A remarkable degree of efficiency has been worked out in their production methods as well," said Shirley M. Hall last week. "It is, of course, impossible to produce custom-built bodies of individual design, in anything like the speed attained by plants working on large production of bodies of a single type.

"Nevertheless it is possible to secure delivery in Los Angeles of bodies of special design, with special uphlostery and paint, in ninety days from the time the approved design is in our hands here. This is excellent time for the production of special bodies, and it is something that has only been made possible by the unusually adequate equipment of the Daniels plant and their long specialization on this type of work.

"The location of the Daniels plant near the chief resources of raw materials for this class of work is another distinct advantage which the plant enjoys, as they are never delayed by material shortages. Special forgings, castings and fittings can be obtained on extremely short notice, and such things as these cut a great deal of figure in prompt production of special body designs."

LUBRICATION IS IMPORTANT

Speaking on the subject of "The Importance of Correct Motor Lubrication," Ralph Hamlin, the popular distributor of Quaker State oil, gave a plain analysis of motor troubles and their logical remedy. Mr. Hamlin said in part, "the life and efficiency of a gasoline engine depend on oil. But it is not enough to have perfect lubrication under normal conditions only. The engine needs an oil which protects it from damaging wear in all emergencies.

"An efficient oil with plenty of 'body' and heat resistance will prevent breakdowns and costly repairs resulting from hard driving, heavy roads, overheating and faulty engine adjustments. Why it takes the best oil to preform this service is clearly seen when the principles of lubrication are understood.

"A delicate oil film no thicker than paper must carry the moving parts which deliver the motor's energy. If this film gives way, the engine's effective power is dissipated in the heat and wear of destructive friction.

"The partial and temporary breaks in the oil film pass unnoticed, but they induce a surprising number of seemingly unrelated troubles and disorders. Experts have found that 75 per cent of the causes for lay-ups come from faulty lubrication. Scientific researches in this field support their conclusion. The statement, however, is not clearly explained to the car owner by his own experience. To the motorist, breakdowns result from tangible and obvious causes—causes removed bodily by repairs or replacements. When the car takes the road again, no evidence of a hidden or uncorrected source of engine trouble is apparent to the satisfied owner. Yet experience has taught him to consider future lay-ups, or 'bad luck,' inevitable. He takes depreciation for granted and hopes big replacements will make the engine new again.

"The motorists, nevertheless, can avoid much bother and worry, and save both money and motor by using a knowledge of the simple principles of lubrication."

LUBRICATION IS TAKEN CARE OF.

SCIENTIFIC ARRANGEMENT WILD DO AWAY WITH LOTS OF TROUBLES.

Most automobile repair men will tell you that the universal joint was probably so named from the fact that it is so universally neglected as far as its lubrication is concerned. The universal joint is subject to heavy wear and constant friction, and it is absolutely vital that it must be constantly lubricated if annoying trouble with it is to be avoided. Yet it is a fact that examination of the average car that has seen several thousand miles of usage will plainly show that the universal joints have not received the care they should. It is rather a difficult problem to lubricate the universal, for the whirling of the shaft tends to throw the grease out by centrifugal force.

"Most motorists, therefore, will be interested to know of a new development in universal joint lubrication," says H. J. Coger of the Troy Motor Sales Company, LaFayette distributors. The unit power plant of the LaFayette is set at such an angle that the power is transmitted in a straight line to the rear axle and but one universal joint is needed. This universal, with its hardened steel bearings, is inclosed in an oil tight torque ball casing on the rear of the transmission, resulting in small movement, positive lubrication from the transmission and maximum life.

BE SURE TO CONSULT A BATTERY EXPERT.

MEN WHO ARE NOE SPECIALISTS FREQUENTLY CAUSE A LOT OF TROUBLE.

"Here is an occurance that was called to my attention a short while ago and which should be an excellent lesson as well as a warning to all motorists," says H. A. Rose, battery authority of the Western Electric Company, distributors of the Titan Battery. "A certain woman motorists come to one of our service stations with the following tale of woe. She had taken her battery to a garage and had it recharged. She reported that it had turned the engine over perfectly at the time, but that subsequently the battery showed marked deterioration. She returned to the same garage and had it recharged again with exactly the same discouraging result, her battery discharging property for a short time and then failto work.

"Finally she came to one of our authorized Titan battery service station to find out where the fault lay. The testing man diagnosed her trouble correctly at once. He informed her that while the garage man may have recharged her battery to full capacity that on putting the battery back into her machine, had turned it around, with the result that the generator was improperly connected and failed to recharge her battery. The battery, of course, had worked all right until the current was used up. "It is our advice to all motorists to make use of the many authorized battery service stations, where there is always an expert battery man, glad to give advice and do correct recharging.

HORSE VERY MUCH IN BACKGROUND.

TRUCKS LARGELY SOLD ON THEIR ABILITY TO COMPETE WITH RIVALS.

Motor trucks of today are sold on comparison with other trucks and horses. Most truck manufacturers have stopped talking about competition with the horse, because as a general thing the horse has been outclassed. eYt on certain short hauls the average truck is unable to compete with teams on account of the excessive operating cost, says James Jerome Canavan, a transportation specialist and direct factory representative of the Walker Vehicle Company.

Even now the short hauls are executed much more reasonably with Walker electric trucks than they could possibly be with horses. This is shown in actual operatiing costs and investment figures of large experienced users who have used the famous Walker electric-drive trucks.

VETERAN EXPERT GETS A NEW JOB.

Announcement is made by the Briscoe Motor Corporation of the appointment of Mr. T. W. Tinkham as assistant general superintendent. Tinkham has been in the automotive industry fifteen years. His most recent connection before joining the Briscoe was general superintendent of the Willys-Overland plants at Toledo. Prior to this time Mr. Tinkham was associated with Olds Motor Works as general master mechanic and with Packard Motor Car Company as assistant production manager.

WATCH YOUR OIL AND YOUR GREASE.

"With the end of autumn, winter brings about conditions which require the special care of certain parts of the automobile. The cooler weather causes grease and oil troubles in many cases. Grease and oil congeal and thicken until their lubricating value is greatly reduced, sometimes blocking the lubrication system. Therefore, service men urge drivers to inspect all parts of the mechanism where grease and oil may clog. A light be used in the thickening ten case should be then, and an entire in," is the advice Derry, manager of Motor Supply House

When motor cars are used in business they must serve faithfully, economically and show small depreciation. That is one of the reasons why the Buick is being used more and more by the firms which carefully investigate. This letter outlines an experience that is typical:

Gentlemen:-

We are using in our business five Buicks. Our decision to use this car in our business was made after a careful investigation of cost and upkeep. We found that over a long period the Buick car offered a minimum expense as to oil, gasoline and tires, the car being particularly well balanced and very little difference shown in the wear and tear on tires, regardless of the wheels on which the tires were placed. Added to this there was a possibility of reconditioning the car after using it for 50,000 miles into practically a new condition. This, coupled with the fact that we were never tied up on the road owing to mechanical troubles, and the ability to realize a high second-hand value has in no way depreciated our first decision in the selection of this car.

Very truly yours,

THE VICTORY OF GOOD VALUE

Dodge Brothers' great works are operating at full capacity every day.

It is good to be able to say to you that Dodge Brothers' implicit faith in the good will that grows out of good value is being vindicated by everything that is going on in their plants today.

You know well that Dodge Brothers dedicated themselves, from the very first, to the production of a car which should rise superior to all external conditions, and be, in effect, and in fact, a law upto itself.

They were supremely satisfied, to begin with, that good motor cars supplied a great and a permanent human need.

They were sure that no matter what happened, there would always be an inexhaustible market for the particular kind of a car they hoped and planned to build.

They were convinced that they could produce a car so sound in value, so saving, and so satisfactory to the individual owner, that no outside influence could shake its hold upon the public.

The simple facts, as they exist at this moment, are so inspiring that we are prompted to share them with everyone who shares with Dodge Brothers their faith in sound business principles.

Dodge Brothers are more strongly and soundly entrenched in the good will of the public at this moment than ever in their history.

Every good result which John and Horace Dodge counted upon when they committed themselves to the principles of building good will by building good value, has come to pass.

Their certainty that people will always discover a meritorious product, set it apart, prefer it and reward it, is continuing to come true with each and every succeeding business day.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car is in demand because Dodge Brothers Motor Car meets a definite economic need and satisfies a human craving for honest and substantial value.

Its market will continue to grow and the production continue to increase to meet that market, as long as merit continues to be the determining factor in motor cars and in all other manufactured products.

November 21, 1920.

Chess and Checker Headquarters, 212-214 Higgins Building. All chess and checker players invited to join. For further information, see or write the secretary, D. H. Betza, at the clubrooms.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

AMONG THE FANS.

Preston Ketchum, State champion of Wisconsin, is now editing a checker column in the Sunday edition of the Milwaukee Sentinel. Mr. Ketchum is well known to the checker fraternity as author and player, and that his column will soon rank among the foremost of the world is a foregone conclusion. Mr. Ketchum, we salute you.

At the last moment, J. A. Drouillard postponed his proposed trip through the Southern States, and will remain here indefinitely.

Mr. Greene expects to have the Fourth American Tourney Book out about the 15th of December. Those desiring a copy should send E. H. Greene, box 282, Hannibal, Mo., $5 for a copy. Orders should be placed now, as only a limited number will be printed.

The Long Beach Press has been running a checker column for about three months. Mr. Courtney of that city is the editor.

Note How Essex Sweeps Nation's Hill-Climb Records

An Ability That is All Important in California Motoring

Just a few Essex hill-climb records, made in a week of nation-wide tests, in which many owners participated, setting marks that have never been equalled.

California—Rim o' the World, climbed nearly 5,000 ft. over difficult 8.8 miles of mountain road in 17 minutes, 23 seconds, beating all previous records.

Washington, D. C.—35th Street Hill, an Essex the first to climb it on high, Tilden Street Hill, 31 miles per hour over top. Same car tows 6-ton truck with load 16 blocks up hill.

San Antonio, Tex.—Record for Belknap Hill going over the top at 40 miles per hour from standing start in 17.2 seconds.

Helena, Mont.—First car ever to cross Continental Divide on high at Priest Pass, 5984 ft. altitude.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Topped Englerts Hill one mile long, 4 blind turns, 14% grade in 90 seconds.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Only car ever to make Main Street Hill from Central Avenue to Gray Street on high.

Bridgeport, Conn.—4 Essex cars broke record on Sport Hill going over top from standing start at 52, 56, 57 and 60 miles per hour respectively.

California motoring challenges car performance with uncompromising tests.

No deficiency is more quickly revealed than weakness on the hills. Many cars that give very satisfactory performance in the flat country, are constantly faced with demands beyond their ability.

It is common knowledge that one of the chief qualities responsible for the wide preference of Essex in California, is its extraordinary ability in hill-climbing. Men go where the road invites, indifferent to hills. And the great surplus power of the Essex meets the unusual task without strain, which accounts for the dependability on which owners rely with unquestioning faith.

CONCERNING HIGHWAYS.

Heavy Duty Trucks Do Not Damage Them, as Has Been Charged.

BY R. E. FULTON,
Vice-President International Motor Company.

At a time when the long-standing national need for more and better highways is being substantially met by legislative appropriations in the $100,000,000 figures, it seems appropriate to ask the question: "What has made this huge expenditure possible and in what terms will the dividends from the investment be expressed?" It seems appropriate further to consider what is the basic idea behind this expenditure—who pays for these highways, for what purpose are they built, and who benefits by them.

TWO CLASSES.

Two classes of motor vehicles use our highways—the motor truck and the passenger car. About 6 per cent of the people in the United States own passenger cars, yet through the medium of the motor truck, every person in the country is directly benefited by the money that is spent for building highways.

As a matter of fact, if the 7,000,000 people who own passenger cars were the only ones to derive benefit from the road, our government would scarcely be justified in spending for this purpose money which comes from the entire 115,000,000. But since practically every article that is consumed or used by everyone in this country makes some part of its journey from producer to consumer in motor trucks, the entire population receives a dollars and cents return in the form of lower living costs from the improvement in transportation which motor trucks and good roads make possible.

VERY NECESSARY.

Adequate transportation is essential to general welfare and prosperity, and as conditions exist in the United States today, adequate transportation is impossible without the use of the motor truck. For example, suppose every motor truck in the country was suddenly put out of use.

It would cause a paralysis of the railroads through inability to clear terminals; it would mean the cessation of practically all building operations through lack of materials; it would stop practically all passenger automobile operation, as almost all gasoline and oil is transported to retail filling stations in motor trucks; it would tie up retail business in large cities to nearly a standstill, and countless other situations equally serious would result. It is a fact that the average person does not realize how dependent he is upon motor transportation.

MUST HAVE 'EM.

Good roads must be built if the country is to profit to the largest extent by the economic advantage of the motor truck, and if we are to have good roads, then road financing must be placed on a sound economic basis. It is quite natural that the task of collecting and disbursing funds for supplying good roads should be undertaken by the government in behalf of the people, since it is a national proposition and since there is no other agency large enough to handle the problem efficiently.

It is a business arrangement, pure and simple—the original investment comes from the people of the country as a whole, while the upkeep and maintenance of the roads is paid for by the vehicles that use them in accordance with the amount of road wear each causes. The latter is, of course, a just arrangement under any conditions, yet the former—the investment on the part of the entire population of the country—is only justified through the use of the motor truck, which gives each investor a return on his investment. In fact it is only through the increasing use of motor trucks that an enlarged road building program has been justified and, consequently possible.

BAD LEGISLATION.

Recent legislation stimulated by automobile owners has in some instances sacrificed the motor truck in the interest of passenger cars. It is obviously important that passenger car owners realize that if they are to have improved highways over which to travel, the expenditures for the roads must be economically justified, and since the motor truck is the factor which makes such expenditures justifiable, the automobile owner who attempts to hinder the growth of motor truck transportation, defeats his own purpose, which is to secure good roads.

The fact that the motor truck is entitled to favorable consideration in framing laws for highway regulation, does not mean that it should not be carefully governed. Every vehicle using the road should pay for the road-wear which it causes. This fact has long been acknowledged by all concerned, with legislation pertaining to highway transportation. But as yet, no law has been framed, which will accomplish this end. The reason for this has been the lack of knowledge of the factors which enter into road-wear.

REAL KNOWLEDGE.

Recently, however, tests have been conducted at Washington which establish a definite and workable basis for road conserving legislation. These tests show that vehicle design in so far as it governs the proportion of sprung and unsprung weight is the most important controllable factor in road wear. A single example of the results of these tests shows clearly how great the importance of unsprung weight actually is.

In one particular test it was found that a five and one-half-ton chain-driven truck delivered only 68 per cent of the road impact produced by a three-ton shaft-driven truck. This was accounted for solely by the fact that in a chain-driven truck a much larger proportion of the driving mechanism is carried on the frame above the springs, whereas in a shaft-driven truck the final drive is all carried below the springs and strikes a direct solid blow on the road.

A PLEA.

Every effort must be made to reduce road wear per ton of material moved as this has a direct bearing on the return which the people of the United States get from their investment in good highways. It can be proven by actual test that a well-constructed road will carry more useful load before it wears out if seven and one-half-ton chain-driven trucks are operated over it than if smaller trucks were used. Should not legislation be so framed as to favor large highway transportation units of this kind in order that our highway system may have the greatest possible productivity? In view of the fact that these units not only decrease road wear but also lessen road congeston and reduce the possibility of accident by their more moderate speed, there would seem to be but one logical answer to this question.

MOTOR CAR IS MOVIE STUDIO.

A COMPLETE DEVELOPING AND PRINTING PLANT IS CARRIED ON IT.

"The Apperson eight, the car that gives eight-cylinder flexibility on four-cylinder gas rations, has made a unique debut into the movies," says Mr. T. E. Jarrard, vice-president of Apperson Bros. Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind.

"Probably the smallest complete motion picture laboratory in the world is on an Apperson car which recently drove through Kokomo. This car is operated by the Harris Film Co., at Beaver Falls, Pa., and is in charge of Nelson A. Harris, photographer, and O. C. Healy, business manager. The car travels from city to city taking all kinds of commercial motion pictures—pictures of industrial processes, machinery in action, etc. The car carries the complete apparatus for finishing, printing and projecting the pictures.

EXPECT MORE SALES OF POPULAR MACHINE.

The A. G. Kaufman Motor Car Corporation, prominent automobile distributing agency on Broadway, New York City, has been appointed to handle the Liberty six in the Metropolitan territory. The new distributor predicts an increase in the sale of the popular "six" in the near future. There already has been a large number of Libertys sold in the New York area during the last five years, and the car is meeting with continually increased popu-

Buick I was driving for we found a score of cars stalled and mired down with storms breaking on them. We assisted at least a dozen cars back on the road and I was not the only one then who was thankful that we had a Buick.

TOUGH GOING.

"We took the Lincoln highway from Chicago to Denver. We found some very deep mud in Illinois as a starter, but that did not seriously trouble us. At Denver we turned southward to the National Old Trail, crossing the divide at Raton Pass. Here the weather was really a blizzard and it was fortunate for us that we had provided plenty of warm clothing. Cars were stuck in the snow where they had slid off the road. We were warned repeatedly not to go on, but we were rather enjoying the trip because of the pride it gave us to be able to forge on ahead where other cars were stalled.

"We did change our route, however, and dropped down into Texas almost to El Paso, taking the more balmq borderland route, which brought us into California through the Imperial Valley and San Diego. We found that the climatic conditions close to the border were less severe. But how inviting California looked!"

NEW DEPARTMENT.

Manager Howard announced yesterday that the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles had opened a special used-car department at 1136 South Olive street to better facilitate the handling of this branch of the business. The tremendous gains in the new-car business at 1323 South Flower street have taxed the capacity of the building and it was believed to be advantageous to the purchaser to have the used cars where they might be better displayed.

SPRINGS WEAK OR STIFF.

When in the course of operation valve springs become weak, they should be stretched or else have a washer placed under them. If a car spring becomes so that one side of the vehicle sags, the addition of another leaf will remedy the trouble. In a new car it frequently happens that the owner finds cause for complaint in regard to hard riding, due to the fact that the springs are stiff. This difficulty may be obviated by removing a leaf, if so desired, but before long the new springs will limber up merely through ordinary usage.

LEAKY PISTON RINGS.

A good check on the condition of the piston rings may be had by feeling the crank case. If it is hotter than usual it is probable that there is leakage past the rings, which either are worn or stuck in their grooves because of carbon deposits.

OWNER'S SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

Question: I understand that kerosene can be used in the cooling water to prevent it from freezing. Is this better than the regular substitutes and how much shall I use?

Answer: Do not use kerosene in any quantity, as it will attack the rubber hose connections, soon destroying them. Use an alcohol-glycerine-water solution, or get a prepared compound.

Q.: What is meant by a late or early spark and by Hotchkiss drive in cars?

A.: A late spark is one which occurs late in the cycle or when the piston is going downward, and an early spark is one which occurs when the piston is traveling upward on the compression stroke. A late spark is retarded and an early one advanced. Hotchkiss drive refers to a method used of having the rear springs take both drive and torque stresses. The torque or twist of the rear axle due to movement when the speed of the car is changed must be absorbed by a member of some sort, and in some cars a torque tube or other special member is installed. When there is no such member and the rear springs also are required to push the car forward the system is called Hotchkiss.

Q.: How is the gear ratio figured, and have the gears in the transmission anything to do with the ratio?

A.: The gear ratio properly is the ratio of the number of teeth on one gear to the number on the gear in mesh with it. In cars the gear ratio as usually given refers to the ratio in the rear axle. Thus, 4 to 1 means that there are four times as many teeth on the large ring as there are no the driving pinion. This means that when the car is in direct drive the engine will turn over four times to one revolution of the rear wheels. When in second or first speed there is an additional reduction in the transmission. If the reduction in the transmission on first speed is 3 to 1 and in the rear axle 4 to 1, then the total reduction is 3x4 or 12 to 1. This means that in first speed the engine turns over twelve times every time the rear wheels turn over once.

Q.: Would you advise inserting wedges under the springs in front to pitch the axle and in this way improve the steering?

A.: This method may be used providing the hard steering cannot be overcome by ordinary means. Be sure you do not incline the knuckles too much.

STICKING CLUTCH.

The clutch pedal of the Ford car occasionally refuses to spring back after it has been pressed forward firmly. This is due to binding and may be remedied by screwing the adjusting screw on the opposite end of the pedal shaft a turn or two.

NORWAY ENJOYS AMERICAN CARS.

"American automobiles and trucks are so predominant in Norway that they give a distinct American touch to the street traffic," states Trade Commissioner Nels A. Bengtson of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Comerce of the Department of Commerce, in a report just made public.

"American agricultural machinery is prominent in Norway. In general the high quality of American tools and mechanisms is conceded, and the expression is frequently heard that American goods rank first in quality, but are somewhat higher in price than the same type of goods from the United Kingdom, Sweden or Germany. The United States now ranks first in the trade in metal manufactures as a whole. Before the war Germany ranked first, the United Kingdom second, and the United States third," says the report.

IT is common knowledge that the Hupmobile does uncommonly well, exactly those things which make a motor car worth what it costs.

You pay for long life in a motor car–and get it in the Hupmobile.

You pay for low repair and operating-costs and get them in the Hupmobile.

You pay to keep going, and for freedom from constant adjustment–and get both in the Hupmobile.

You pay for satisfaction as long as you use the car, and satisfaction in the price you get when you sell it–and owners will tell you these are precisely the things you get in the Hupmobile.

The World and Westinghouse

YEARS and years ago when many of us first studied our Geography—as we formed our first impressions of the world of Science and Invention—even then, Westinghouse was known as a great organization. Its famous research laboratories had already given the world many wonderful inventions.

And down through the years the name of Westinghouse has kept pace and has been an important factor in our progress. It has sponsored marvelous inventions that have helped solve some of our greatest electrical and transportation problems.

It is fitting that this wonderful new battery of greater strength and longer life should bear the name of Westinghouse.

AIR PILOTS TO HAVE WIRELESS.

Radio Phone Stations Placed Along Routes.

Commercial Planes Thus Get Ready Reports.

Much Trouble Will Probably be Avoided Now.

The growing usefulness of the radio phone in its application to aviation exemplifies itself every day. By enabling the flyer to keep in constant communication with the earth, it gives him speech and hearing and, by so doing, keeps him apprised of weather and other conditions ahead. The psychological effect upon the flyer of this invisible link with the earth, this intangible evidence of "human touch," is incalculable. To a very decided degree it reduces the sense of hazard as it actually minimizes the danger by affording him indubitable evidence of physical conditions to be encountered throughout his route.

ON THE ROUTES.

In recognition of its importance to aviation, the Belgian, French and British governments have established a line of phone stations following the Paris-London and Brussels-London air routes. Stations now operating are located at Croydan, just outside of London, at Lympne, on the English side of the channel, at a point off the French coast, and at Paris. Preparations are also in progress to establish other stations at convenient intervals in England and France.

"The wireless telephone service," says the Flyleaf, "is to be used primarily to give information as to the whereabouts of aircraft traveling along a route, and also for reporting weather conditions along the rouet to planes in the air.

AVOID TROUBLE.

"By general utilization of the radio telephony system it is believed by aviation authorities that practically all of the difficulties which were formerly encountered by flyers running into unfavorable or dangerous weather conditions can be eliminated. The use of the radio phone to direct passenger planes is but one of a number of important uses to which it may be put, and is the result of extensive experiments in which the value of wireless telephony in connection with flying has been definitely established."

At the little city of Salida, we were transferred to a narrow-gauge line, originally constructed as an ore road, now specialized on as a scenic line, leading to sportsmen's angling and hunting Meccas. Attached to our train was the private car of Supt. Wilcox, accompanied by Car Accountant McMeekin, both of the Rio Grande Railway. As their guests, all points of interest were pointed out to us from the rear platform. Out through the foothills, we passed prairie dog villages, deserted prospect holes, abandoned shaft houses and mining camps at one time prosperous cities, now overrun with sage, chaparral and mesquite brush. At some stations, patient burros freighted down with merchandise, awaited the signal to start for interior villages or camps. On up the mountain side, by a succession of switch-back curves, until the summit at Marshall's Pass was reached—this at an elevation of 10,856 feet. The continental divide of the Rocky Mountains. This above timber line.

The descent was made by abrupt curves following the serpentine course of Tomichi Creek, later converging with Gunnison River, claimed to be America's finest trout stream. We found Black Canyon a marvel of scenic delight, a combination of wonders, second to no other locality in the world. With varied colorings, crags, cliffs, palisades and intersecting canyons, Curecanti Needle, inserting its point into the clouds, no other chasm or gorge has the call on Black Canyon for rugged beauty or scenic effect.

Gunnison River was our objective. We quit the train at Hollenbecks, Elk Horn Lodge, Wapita antlers decorated above his door. Clear cold waters of the Gunnison rushed madly by, chaotically jumping or encircling boulders, the rapid current digging seductive trout pools below the immense rock.

Gilbert flips a fly with the same precision and accuracy he directs a scatter gun, an expert in piscatorial art. We dressed in conventional garb, overalls, hickory shirts and hob-nailed shoes. Water was a little chilly as it first raced up our pantlegs, but the anticipation of hooking a good one immediately started red corpuscles racing through our veins.

It was a pleasure watching Gilbert reading the waters ahead and deftly dropping his fly in most likely places. Many were the strikes, and well-filled creels our portion. As a fitting finish, Fred made a long, low cast, landing his fly well under a protruding bank. A strike followed by a flash of sun accentuated colorings. The fight was on! His scaled majesty broke water in a curved circle, heading directly downstream. Fred gave him the butt, yet holding him on the spring of the rod. He dashed around the boulders, making a rush for an old submerged log laying near shore. Lineal objections were interposed, resented by a period of sulking. Again incited to action by a few gentle pumps, he demonstrated his knowledge of rock location, deep holes and assorted escape tactics, branding him a patriarchal old timer in those waters. It was Fred's fight, but he accepted a little landing net teamwork at the close of his party. After several ineffectual efforts, we brought that old speckled beauty to net. He was game to the last lap. Computing by the scales on his back, coupled with a length of twenty inches, this scaled fighting dynamo, weighed about three and one-half pounds.

We fished on down the river to a point near Cebolla, where our guide had pitched camp. Fred's big one rolled in cornmeal and fried to a turn was the piece de resistance for our evening meal.

Question: In a recent article you stated that many cities were setting apart a portion of their public parks for shooting. What cities are doing this and why is it done?

DANIEL ERMATINGER.
Phoenix, Ariz.

Answer: Yes, many cities have established gun clubs in their public parks. Milwaukee, Kansas City, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago (now building a $35,000 clubhouse,) Omaha and many others. Canada is also making a popular drive for general recognition of the sport of trapshooting in their public parks, thus instructing the rising generation in the art of shooting. Certain days of the week are designated instruction days at which time ammunition and targets are furnished the boys by the municipality free of charge, this for a limited number of shots. Gen. Pershing states: "Painstaking training and proficiency in the use of firearms is a great national as well as personal asset." Gen. Foch declares: "Accurate shooting ability, with a soldier, is 76 per cent. efficiency." Mayors and city councils in every locality are urging upon the populace advisability and necessity for gun-club organizations. To this end they are granting shooting concessions in public parks. The element of danger is nil, as 100 yards is the limit for fine shot to carry, with penetration. Every city will eventually have trapshooting established in their public parks.

Question: Do geese travel day or night? Are they classed as migratory birds?

JOHN MILLER.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Answer: Geese, when migrating, travel both day and night, their flight is both extended and rapid. Yes, geese are migratory birds.

BARNEY OLDFIELD DRIVES TO TOWN.

DRIVER MAKES LENGTHY TRIP IN HIS ANCIENT YELLOW SPEEDSTER.

Of all the hundreds of cross-country cars which weekly arrive in Los Angeles, it is doubtful if any have seen a trip surpassing in severity that encountered by a certain mud-spattered yellow Marmon speedster which rolled into the city last Thursday. The driver who piloted it through could scarcely be classed as an amateur, however, for it was Barney Oldfield who had held the wheel through almost six thousand miles of the worst roads to be found in the country.

Leaving Cleveland almost seven weeks ago, Barney drove through to New York, and thence down the Atlantic seaboard to Florida. From there he steered a course west by north over roads that in many instances could better have been navigated by a motor boat. Through Alabama and Mississippi he drove, turned north to Memphis, and south again to Texas Phoenix, Ariz., and home. In each State he visited the chief Oldfield tire distributor, and carried him with him in the Marmon over the main distributing points of his territory. Very few tire magnates in the United States have the fund of exact knowledge as to general business conditions in the East, South and West that Oldfield acquired as a result of his tour, and very few indeed would care to undertake the physical hardships of the trip the "Master Driver" has just completed.

GETS SERVICE OUT OF YANK MACHINE.

Mr. John C. Maughan, grower of sugar cane in Gin-Gin, Queensland, Australia, recently wrote a letter to the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation throwing light on the living conditions in a part of the world we seldom hear about.

"Down here we have few roads," he wrote, "and in most places no roads at all. Nevertheless, in my business I need a motor car and in 1915 I took delivery of a Maxwell. It certainly has seen some working since. It has given me the best of service and in the five years I have had no mechanical trouble at all."

Mr. Lynn C. Buxton,
Figueroa at Twelfth,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Mr. Buxton:--

I have nothing but praise for the Stearns-Knight automobile which I purchased from you more than a year ago. It has an abundance of pep and power and is a wonderfully easy riding car. It is economical as regards both oil and gasoline and I have the original tires still on the machine, looking like new, though it has been driven over 9000 miles.

I would like to say something in praise of your service to those who have purchased cars from you, but my car has been so free from ailments that I have had almost no opportunity to learn what sort of service you give.

It is a privilege to own a Stearns-Knight car and a pleasure to do business with the firm of Buxton.

Very truly yours,
Edwin R. Collins
Managing Editor Evening Herald.

Aha, Here She Is. The Latest Product Along the Row.

This is the new Nash Four, a brand new model which arrived in Los Angeles last week and was on exhibition at the salesrooms of the Troy Motor Sales Company for the first time on Wednesday.

LOOKS LIKE BIG BROTHER.

Because it is a car that is unquestionably destined to occupy a large niche in its particular place in the automobile market, unusual interest attached last week to the arrival of the first Nash four-cylinder car, which made its debut on the salesroom floor of the Troy Motor Sales Company. Produced by one of the most strongly financed motor companies of America and designed by the best automotive talent in the country, the Nash four enters the automobile field with an assured demand awaiting it that few cars have ever commanded.

Seen from a little distance the casual observer would undoubtedly mistake the new car for its bigger brother, the Nash six. Though the hood of the four is shorter and the wheelbase less the general lines of the Nash six have been faithfully reproduced in the smaller car. In the finish of the exterior and the fine leather upholstery the four exhibits the same outward evidence of high-grade construction as does the six.

The motor of the new car is especially interesting. Compact, and delivering an unusual amount of power, it is at the same time extremely quiet and free from vibration. A counterbalanced crank shaft of unusual size, ance of the reciprocating parts all ance of the reciprocating parts both contribute to the latter quality.

According to John J. Troy, head of the Troy Motor Sales Company, which holds the distributing franchise for the Nash four and six for Southern California, the Nash four will early attain large volume production. Mr. Troy recently returned from an eastern trip, during which he had the opportunity to inspect the big new plant at Milwaukee, where the Nash four is being built.

A Policy That Dominates All Conditions--A Product That is Always Worth Par

"Reo is financially the second strongest concern in the automobile industry."

That assertion, published five years ago, created a lot of comment, not only in the automobile trade, but in banking business circles everywhere.

Incredulity was followed by approval when the proofs were looked up.

That statement is still true, we believe.

That standing, that solidity, that prestige is due to a policy of such soundness, such integrity, it has withstood those storms that have swayed others from time to time.

The well-known quality of the Reo product is the direct outcome of that policy.

Not to build all the motor cars—but the best.

Not how many—but how good.

Such a policy makes for a degree of excellence that knows no rival, and is always in demand.

Reo prices have been dictated always by the same high resolve.

Not "all the traffic would bear" but just a definite margin of profit over cost.

And that cost lower than others, because of the superior skill and facilities and experience of Reo.

Reo is "The Gold Standard of Values"—now as always.

To determine that for yourself, compare any Reo model with others selling—not at a similar price—but at twice the price.

This Sedan, for example. Compare cloth and springs in upholstery—silver and other trimmings; the all-aluminum body. Compare design—beauty and finish.

Compare these external features with any sedan selling for $4000—and say where you find any difference in quality—in value—to account for even a fraction of the difference in price.

And the price of this luxurious equipage is $3135 in California.

You get Reo quality, too, in every detail of the chassis.

And—and—that wonderful, silent, flexible, powerful, economical Reo six motor!

No matter how much you are willing to pay for your new automobile, you owe it to yourself to see this Reo first.

For professional and business men—or for milady who drives herself—the Reo Six Coupe is ideal. Same general design, same chassis, same quality—$3080. Prices are F. O. B. California, including Special Federal Tax.

Business Shows Genuine Signs of Big Revival.

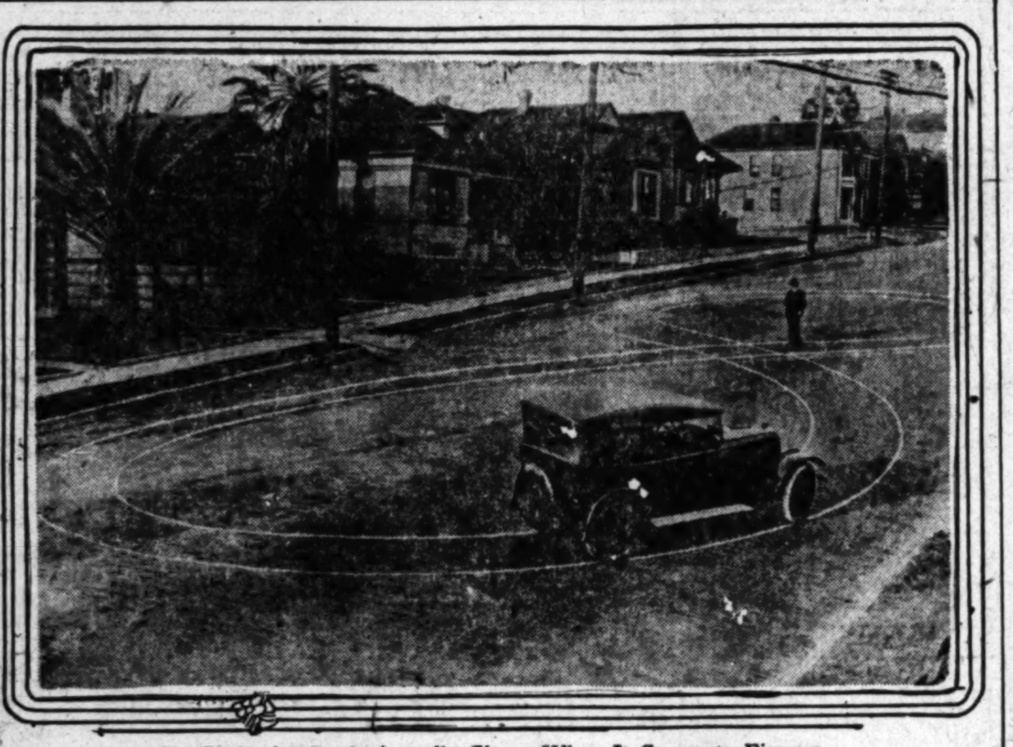
After a stay of six weeks in the automobile manufacturing center of Detroit, where he availed himself of the opportunity to make a careful survey of every phase of the industry, J. V. Baldwin, head of the firm bearing his name, and Columbia distributor for Southern California, returned to Los Angeles last week bringing with him a report of healthy business conditions, and greatly impressed with the outlook for the future.

According to Baldwin, many of the factories which had either suspended operations or were running at half production, have resumed normal production again. The Continental Motors Company, which for some time had entirely suspended production, has reopened its plants and is continuing its usual output of motors.

"All of us," said Baldwin, "have been watching the financial and business situation for the first encouraging sign as to the future, and I am pleased to say that the very best financial authorities are agreed that brighter times are coming."

CLAIMS RECORD FOR CARS IN ITS CLASS.

So far the economy records of the King have remained unchallenged by any car of the eight-cylinder type, claims J. P. Davidson of Francis C. Davidson, Inc., distributors for the King. "Seldom is the eight-cylinder car spoken of as a car of economy, yet the King has shown itself to be an extremely efficient car on gasoline, tires and oil," says Davidson. "In the Yosemite economy run last summer the King beat every six and eight-cylinder car in the event by a wide margin, regardless of class, and put the curtains over the records of any eight-cylinder car ever entered in the runs of previous years."



By Gosh, the Car is Actually Clever When It Comes to Figures.

W. W. Ward took an Apperson Eight up on the Flower-street hill between Second and Third streets and made the thing do figure eights on the grade in high gear.

ARITHMETIC IN HIGH GEAR.

Ability to deliver an ample flow of power at the low engine speeds is the single quality which perhaps more than any other one factor in motor performance is esteemed by the motorist of long experience. How slow a car will climb a hill rather than how fast it will top it in high gear is the test which really counts with the man who has driven a car for any length of time.

"Just think for a moment how comparatively few are the occasions when you find a hill that you can take a run for at anything like high speed," comments W. W. Ward, sales manager of the local Apperson factory branch. "Mountain grades are invariably full of turns that cut down your speed to a point where, if your motor will not deliver a satisfactory amount of power at low engine speed you will inevitably be forced to shift.

"If you are climbing Flower-street hill, just north of Third street you are almost certain to be slowed down almost to a stop by the traffic stream that pours in and out of the tunnel. Given a good start, many cars can climb that particular hill in high gear, but without the advantage of momentum, the cars which negotiate it in high are very few.

"For that reason, we have found Flower street hill especially effective as a place to demonstrate the power of the Apperson eight, and have made use of it in our "pictorial serial." An Apperson eight will not only climb that particular hill in high gear, but will make a figure eight on the hill between Second and Third streets in high gear without perceptible effort, which is far from being an easy thing for the average car to do."

TAXIS MAKE LONG CLIMB UP GRADES.

PULL INTO PINE KNOT AFTER A HARD BATTLE WITH SNOW DRIFTS.

The first storm of the season brought a snow fall to Big Bear Valley that was decidedly welcome to the directors of the local Morosco film studios, as it furnished a type of "atmosphere" that was badly needed to finish the filming of a production. A couple of Standard eight sedans of the Day and Night Taxi Company were requisitioned in addition to the studio fleet, and the company set out for Big Bear in spite of decidedly pessimistic predictions as to road conditions.

Mill Creek, City Creek and the Rim of the World were hopelessly blocked with snow, so the party set out via the lesser summits of the desert route. Good time was made as far as Cushenberry grade, where the first snow was encountered, but from that point on to Pine Knot a real battle with the drifts began. Nine hours after leaving Los Angeles, however, the two Standard eight sedans plowed into Pine Knot after a journey decidedly different from the average run of Southern California taxi work.

PISTON RINGS ARE MADE BETTER NOW.

"In watching the little racers eat up the board track on the Beverly Hills race course at something over 100 miles per hour, there is one feature which is brought to the fore in comparison with the big monsters, which roared around ovals of old, leaving a heavy screen of smoke behind them. And this feature is that although these small speed demons burn castor oil, very little smoke is emitted from their exhaust pipes. This is because better piston rings are used and prevent leakage of oil — the cause of smoke. In a like manner, as more and more motor cars become equipped with Stark-Inland piston rings," says C. C. Colyear of the Colyear Motor Sales Company, distributors of this one-piece piston ring, "the puffing of grayish-blue smoke from the motor-car exhaust is becoming an ever more rare occurrence."

RESULTS OF THE COTTON TESTS

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

AT THE present season the garden owner's thoughts lightly turn to things to grow, and among these the ucculent vegetable easily standeth first. is not given to all to choose the soil they yill work, but if there be any choice, it hould be light rather than heavy. If it be eavy, two courses are open, either to con- ert the soil or grow the crops known to o well in heavy soils, buying your sweet otatoes and other things that thrive best n sandy soils.

If soil is very light it will be deficient in ant food and humus. Do not mix with it ough, undecayed organic matter. Dairy anure will prove best, but if other manures are used, those which contain much raw should be thoroughly decomposed or e soil will be too much held "open" and y out quickly. Organic matter in sandy il decomposes slowly, unless kept in a oist condition at all times. When soil is ry heavy, plenty of stable manure, well tted, should be thoroughly mixed with it me time before planting and spaded in ain and again. After crops are planted e season's tillage will be much aided by a od mulch of manure that may be from me to time mixed with the surface soil rough hoeing, etc. This will prevent baking or crusting of the surface.

Atichokes, asparagus, horse radish and ubarb are some of the roots that may w be planted, and the following seeds e timely: Beets, Brussels sprouts, cab- ges, carrots, cauliflower, garlic, kale, ohl-rabi, lettuce, onion, parsnip, peas, dish, spinach and turnip. Many seeds e small and germination weak, therefore ver them shallowly, not more than one- hth inch, because the sprout must have r and light. If this is denied, it dies be- re reaching the surface.

In order to assist small, weak seeds it is visable to plant plentifully, because many eds will aid in raising the soil where e could not. This is applicable to all all seeds. It is easy to thin out the sur- us. A good general rule is to plant seeds a depth equal to from three to five times eir diameter. In beds where small seeds e sown thickly, sprinkle the beds—never od them. During winter months sprinkle ly in the morning, when water is warmer an the dew. This allows the heat that cumulates in the soil during the day to e retained and radiated far into the night. uring the hot months, it will be neces- ry to sprinkle in the evening to revive e plants. If you closely follow this ad- ce you may still have the "Garden Beau- ful," though composed of vegetables.

otash Supply.

Unless composted, brush, weeds, etc. n be burned in one place and the ashes ined with those from the house for use garden and orchard. There are many aning mills where shavings and sawdust e used for fuel and ashes from these aces may be available in sufficient quantities for top dressings for lawns, rose beds and all flower and vegetable crops, for wood ashes may with profit be applied to all crops or mixed with compost or potting soil. The addition of bone meal to the soil at the same time will furnish a fair balance of plant food for garden plants in general. Protect with cover wood or vegetable ashes, also farm manure. Every ton of farm manure contains ten or more pounds of potash, so that we have millions of tons produced annually in California. Keep both ashes and manure covered so that rains do not wash away this wealth.

A giant redwood in Muir Woods.

igantic Italian cypress at Bakersfield.

Start Right.

Do not start a new place without a definite plan or conception of what you wish, or at least what you have decided to have and do. If you get the proper ideas regarding the place and have the ability to carry them out, you need not fear the result and will get more satisfaction from working out your plans than from contemplation of the finished product. Get the fundamentals thoroughly fixed, position of buildings and main objects, the drives and paths, and you are ready to proceed; the details may be worked out as the garden building goes on.

The Chayote.

The chayote is a tropical American vegetable, closely allied to the cucumber. The vines have somewhat the same appearance though the chayote is much more vigorous than its near relation. It is also much more of a climber and may be seen in scores of California gardens, clambering over fences, outbuildings, trees, etc. The fruit is an excellent substitute for summer squash and by many considered quite superior in flavor. The vine makes a good, rank-growing, rough covering, and though somewhat tender, still if frozen down, readily sprouts again from the yam-like roots. The flowers are also rich in honey.

Fertilizer Constituents.

Garden fertilizers usually consist of but three elements, which are all that is needed by the average plant. These are nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid, the two latter are retained by the soil. Even though soluble in soil water they do not spread by such means and therefore must be mechanically distributed to insure uniformity. They are not volatile, nor do they leach the soil. The full year's supply may be applied at once with the assurance of not losing any. On the other hand, nitrogen should be applied at several different distributions, and it will also be quite easily spread uniformly through the medium of soil water. Nitrogen is obtained from organic matter which decomposes when exposed to the air and a portion of its nitrogen volatilizes is lost, the remainder, unless quickly absorbed by plants, will wash or leach away.

Substitute for Boxwood.

In place of boxwood for borders, hedges, box or vase plants, use a privet that in local market is found under the name of Ligustrum nepalense. It has small boxlike leaves, is hardier than the box under any treatment or conditions, is subject to fewer pests and diseases, and if injured will more quickly replace such parts. It is more easily grown, transplanted and maintained, is cheaper and more attractive.

Proper Parkway Planting.

There is urgent need everywhere, of concerted planting and care of parkways, for unless this work is carried out on a cooperative basis it is never as a whole satisfactory. If the whole street cannot be organised, "Block Beautiful" clubs should be formed by residents on both sides of the street of each block, thus insuring a uniformity and thoroughness in the work, attaining a standard quite impossible under individual effort.

Collection of Climbers.

The collection of plants of one family rather than an indiscriminate assortment is commendable—there is such an added interest. Take the Tecoma family (climbers mostly,) a large place could use them all. In the local market may be obtained: Tecoma Capensis, from Cape of Good Hope; T. grandiflora, China and Japan; T. filifolium (Campsidium,) from the Andes; T. jasminoides, Australia (also a white variety;) T. radicans, from the United States; T. Smithii, a garden hybrid; T. stans, a shrub from Mexico; T. Ricasolina (Mackenii,) South Africa; T. velutina, from Guatemala and the true, but rare, T. violacea. Others could be obtained.' The colors range from white to pinks, yellows, reds, to purple. Very close to the tecomas are our two bignonias, Tweediana and venusta.

Garden Walks.

Many places are planned so that the only sensible position for a walk is directly through the middle of the lawn, for a walk should be direct, if anything. If, however, the walk can be placed at the side, so as not to make a line across the lawn, the beauty of the place is enhanced. In most cases it is better to have only a straight walk, but if there is an opportunity to curve it somewhat, though making it still direct, the walk will appear more interesting and artistic.

Poultry Practices Across the Atlantic.

SOME PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

IN ENGLAND the Feathered World publishes annually a rather elaborate Year Book covering the poultry industry of Great Britain and affording a general review of poultry operations. From its plethoric pages we cull the following paragraphs of general interest to poultry breeders everywhere:

Essential Soluble Fats.

Housewives have always regarded an egg as one of the most valuable articles of food. They have no scientific justification for their faith. Chemists might contend that analysis proved they were wrong, but the housewife and the cook knew. Probably the most important discovery of recent years is that of Dr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, who, after twelve years' research, has found that for human growth and health a soluble fat is essential which, so far as is known, is only found in butter, egg yolk and certain glandular organs of animals, thus confirming the housewife's knowledge. A new respect for the egg has been engendered, which has enhanced its value and will increase consumption very largely when sufficient supplies are available (in England,) as these soon could be if producers, present and prospective, would deal with this branch of food production constructively and adequately.

Growing Poultry Meat.

In catering to supply the markets for birds weighing three and one-half pounds, a quick grower and a bird that puts on flesh rapidly is wanted. The best we have found for this purpose is a White Leghorn male mated to Faverolle females. A White Leghorn or Houdan male mated with any of the following females will be almost as good: Rhode Island Red, Sussex, Wyandotte, Buff or White Orpington, Dorking, Faverolle, Barred Rock. The strongest chickens are always obtained from hens in their second season, but there is always a likelihood of getting more eggs early in the season if young birds are used. If pullets are used they must not be less than seven months old and well developed; the male must be at least nine months old, healthy and vigorous. The best results are obtained from stock birds that have been reared on free range; the number of females should not exceed twelve and not be less than seven to each male. If table birds that weigh from four and one-half pounds to six pounds are wanted, the best crosses for this class are Faverolle male to Rhode Island Red, Wyandotte or Buff Orpington females. Other good crosses are as follows (male named first:) Indian Game, Dorking; Indian Game, Sussex; Dorking, Buff Orpington or Rhode Island Red, Sussex, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red or Faverolle. There should be about the same number of females to each male as stated in the former crosses. If possible, allow these breeders free range. Two-year-old hens mated with a yearling cockerel give the best result for this class of birds, although young birds can be used. The chief point to watch in one's breeding stock is stamina and vigor.

The Russian Orloff.

In England during the past two years, the Orloff has become numerous, and during that time we have been able to watch the breed's behavior under many and varied conditions—indeed, under all sorts of conditions, good, bad and indifferent; on free range, on restricted range, and also under semi-intensive conditions. During the past winter we have had more trying climatic conditions than I ever remember experiencing before, and the egg shortage has been acute. But those who have owned Orloffs have had an unfailing supply of eggs. In most cases the April hatched chickens began to lay at the end of October—some were earlier—and they have laid to date (the first week in February.) We have paid particular attention to the hens; nearly all of them moulted early, and the majority were in full lay again when the moult was completed. It was found that Orloffs lay remarkably soon after renewing their feathers, and while the pullets may not be so precociously prolific as those of some breeds, they are far more reliable "stayers" on the egg-laying course. We have been impressed with the Orloffs' prolificacy under back-yard conditions—housed in a tiny lean-to abode, and with only a few yards of run to exercise in.

Consumption of Hen Fruit.

It is refreshing to learn that the consumption of eggs, even at present prices, has been growing. According to the New York Produce News, the four cities of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago averaged 175,000 more cases of eggs in September of 1920 than they did in the corresponding month of 1919. We believe it is quite safe to say that the food value of eggs is being recognized more and more by the average consumer; the high cost of living has stimulated a study in nutritive values of foods in the human dietary, which has resulted in a higher appreciation of the sustaining food values of the product of the American business hen.

Barred Rocks in England.

For breeding, exhibition and egg-production purpose select birds of good type and color, with as fine barring as possible, provided that the bars are distinct and even, and as near the medium color as can be got. If the male is of the light shade of color, select females of the dark shade; and if the male is dark, mate him to females of the lighter shade. The chief things to avoid in mating a pen of Barred Rocks is smuttiness or the brownish dull color in the black bars, and too much white undercolor. Sometimes a Barred Rock appears to be really well barred, and is so on the surface color, but if the feathers are turned up a little, they are seen to be nearly all white near the roots. Another point is to choose birds which stand well on their legs, as some Rocks which are good in many ways stand somewhat in-kneed never looks well in a show pen; and visable, as a bird which stands badly or in-kneed, never looks well in a show pen; and moreover, in-kneed females are never much good as layers. As a popular breed the Barred Rock easily takes the first place among all breeds of poultry. They have now stood the test for about forty or fitfy years, and the demand for them seems keener now than ever. If a fancier has the luck to breed a real good one or two, and wishes to sell, it is generally an easy matter to do so at prices anywhere from $50 to $100, and some years much more than that has been paid. And the birds which are not good enough for breeding stock or sh birds always pay well as utility birds.

Poultry in Philippines.

The advent of a branch of the Americ Poultry Association in Manila has grea increased the breeding of standard poul in the Philippines, and more particula the American breeds. Up to the period the American occupation, and for some ti afterwards, poultry culture there was li ited to the breeding of fighting games— for eggs, nor for meat, but for sport p and simple. The cock pit was a feat wherever people of the rural districts c gregated, and the betting was always eral and was the exciting feature of contests. With the advent of western c ilization, however, and educational wo which was started immediately after took control of those islands, and thro the efforts of the officers of the Bureau Animal Industry, Department of Comme of the insular government, the native fa ers have become interested in the ra of fowls for egg production as food. Ri Island Reds, Rocks, Leghorns and o utility birds have been successfully i duced. The officials and others who ar gaged in the work of educating the na along these lines are confident that fighting will gradually die out just as fighting has.

Pricing the Birds.

We have sometimes wondered if it w not be good policy for those offering br ing stock to boldly announce prices in t newspaper and magazine advertising? a specific manner, this would hardly feasible, because but few birds possess same values. It is not with live stoc it is with soap and saleratus, that package or item of a given thing posse the same value; Nature in her opera produces no exact duplicates. Every cl of eggs hatched produces birds of var values, from market poultry to showr specimens. But a tentative value coul announced, affording intending purcha considerable latitude in making a ch For instance, John Doe might announce he had breeding Barred Rock cockerel offer from $7.50 to $25 each: exhib cockerels from $25 to $150; pullets fro to $20, and exhibition females from $2 $100. Such an announcement convey sense of values, and to our way of thin possesses a larger pulling power than R ard Roe's announcement that he had br ing and exhibition Black Minorcas for with an invitation to write for partic and prices. The four pivotal points o advertisement should be "what, w where" and the price.

An Isolated Place for the Ailing.

All poultry farms above the ordi should enjoy the privilege and advant of a hospital ward. It matters not careful the management may be, nor the servance of good sanitation and cleanli disease will make its appearance. To ward all ailing ones should be removed mediately it is discovered that there is ease present. This will avoid conta and at the same time afford better op tunity for intelligent treatment. Isola calls for no expensive quarters, but it call for physical comforts, freedom f draughts, well-ventilated quarters and a vironment that is sanitary. To do this, infection at regular intervals is advis particularly after being inhabited by a fowl.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

The Cotton Tests.

DOUBTLESS the low price of both long and short-staple cotton will have its effect in a decreased acreage set to this crop in California next year. But a lessened interest in cotton culture will not detract from the lasting value of growing experiments, carried on during the past year in many counties, for the purpose of deciding where cotton, especially the Durango and Egyptian long-staple varieties, could be grown profitably. It is to be regretted that many planters of test plots lost interest in their experiment as the price of cotton began to fall, for, as a result, no fair test was made in some localities.

Regardless of momentary price fluctuations, the business of producing extra long and extra fine cotton in California, Arizona and the northern district of Lower California is bound to be continued and to grow. It may even in time become California's most important single agricultural industry. The demand for cotton of extra length, which is grown only in California and Arizona, as far as the United States is concerned, will continue to grow, and it is quite possible that short varieties of cotton will be entirely abandoned, in those districts where long-staple cotton can be profitably grown, in favor of the Egyptian variety.

In coming years, when the acreage of the long staple spreads permanently outward from the great valleys of the Lower Colorado River basin, the hundreds of tests made this year will be a guide which will be invaluable to planters. The behavior of experimentally handled plants in the various districts this year will give farmers a line on cotton culture, when the price of cotton rises to a point where it can be grown right along with as great a profit as there is in raising alfalfa, sorghums or grains. And that time will come with the development of uses and a market for our fine staples and with the better organization of the growers for their own economic interests.

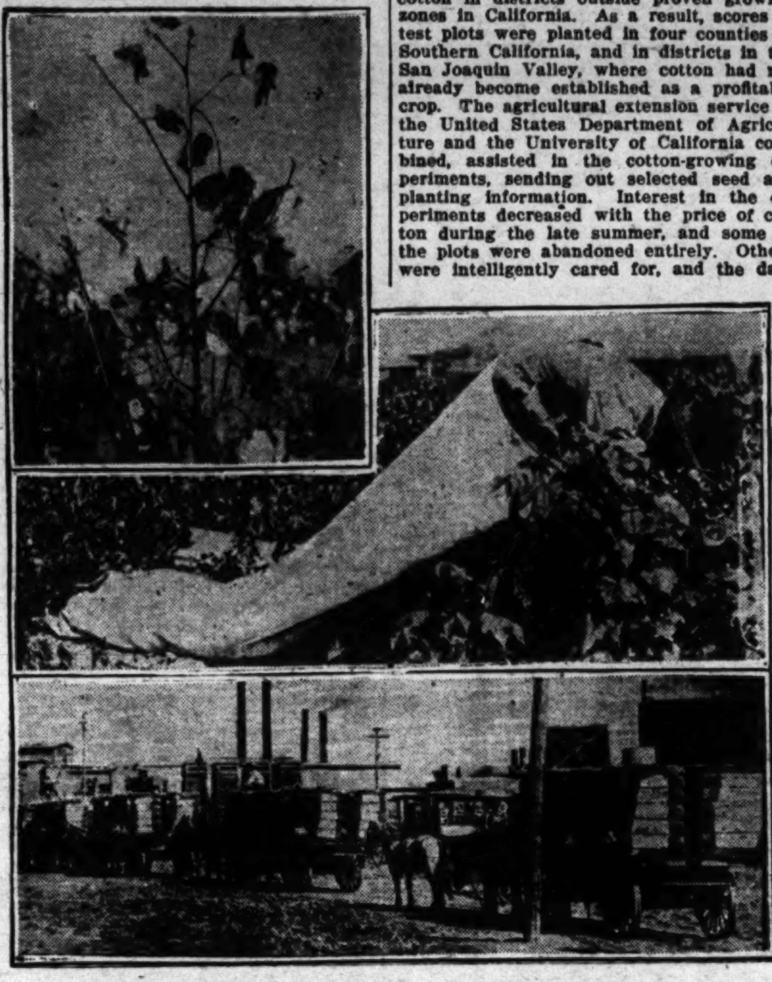
Two years ago, Kern, Tulare and Fresno county growers demonstrated, by good crops of long-staple cotton, the error of the opinion generally held that the growing of cotton outside the Lower Colorado River Basin was unprofitable. This year other districts were added to the profitable cotton area.

Cottonseed germinates readily, under a wide range of climatic and soil conditions, and the plants thrive, up to a certain stage, in almost every county in California. But high summer temperatures are necessary for the profitable growing of cotton of any sort, and a growing season of from eight to nine months is necessary for the profitable production of Egyptian cotton. Tests this year have shown that profitable cotton growing weather and a really pleasant summer climate are opposites; the cotton will stay in irrigated regions, removed from the atmospherical influence of the ocean, and which are otherwise adapted to the requirements of this exacting crop.

Why Nuts Move Slowly.

IMPORTATION of European walnuts amounting to 60 per cent of the consumption in the United States this year has resulted in a sluggish movement of California walnuts, despite the lowering of the price of the local product 30 per cent. C. C. Teague, president of the California Walnut Growers' Association, has issued a statement to walnut growers, stating that it will take the coming year to sell all the crop because of the reluctance of grocers to stock up beyond immediate needs.

Imports of walnuts in the year ending May 1 were 73,101,907 pounds and the California crop 55,042,700 pounds. Thus California growers are competing, with little hindrance in the way of duty, with the cheaply produced walnuts of Europe. Do the men who sit in the halls of Congress believe that the California farmer should be placed on a par with the European peasant and that the California walnut picker should be compelled to reduce his scale of living until he is on a level with the agricultural laborer of Europe?



A Crop in Which Many Districts Have Been Interested This Year.

(Top,) stal kof cotton with bursting bolls; (center,) pickers at work in cotton field; (botton,) hauling baled cotton to the compress.

ORIENTAL BEAN AS BALLAST.

While the freight rates on beans were recently increased 33 per cent, the ocean freight rates on the same commodity from the Orient, South America, or Madagascar, have tended to grow less, and recently beans have been transported from Japan to this country for only about the handling cost, on the theory that they were needed as ballast, say officials of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association. California growers are finding it difficult to compete against both lower freight rates and the cheaper labor of foreign countries.

ELIMINATING SCRUBS.

"Breed, Feed, Weed, Read and Succeed." This is the slogan of the farmers who have enlisted in the pure-bred sire campaign which is sweeping the country and putting American live stock to the fore. It is believed that the value of live stock in the United States will be doubled within three or four years if farmers in every State take up the campaign."

DRAFT HORSES HIGHER.

The United States census for 1910 revealed 19,833,000 horses and 4,210,000 mules on farms; and the Department of Agriculture estimates for Jan. 1, 1920, show 21,109,000 horses and 4,995,000 mules on farms, or an increase of 1,276,000 horses and 785,000 mules in the last decade. Besides this we exported, during the nine years ending June 30,1919, 1,149,763 horses and 376,836 mules. The rise in prices for good draft horses and mules in spite of the existence of more than 21,000,000 horses and almost 5,000,000 mules on farms indicates how agricultural and transportation needs are growing.

TESTS SHOW COTTON CULTURE AND FINE SUMMER CLIMATE DON'T HITCH.

HIGH prices obtained for cotton of all varieties in 1919, combined with the enthusiasm for long staple growing, due to the expansion of cord-tire manufacturing, and the establishment of a large tire factory in Los Angeles, created unusual interest this year, in the growing of cotton in districts outside proven growing zones in California. As a result, scores of test plots were planted in four counties of Southern California, and in districts in the San Joaquin Valley, where cotton had not already become established as a profitable crop. The agricultural extension service of the United States Department of Agriculture and the University of California combined, assisted in the cotton-growing experiments, sending out selected seed and planting information. Interest in the experiments decreased with the price of cotton during the late summer, and some of the plots were abandoned entirely. Others were intelligently cared for, and the data thus gained will be of great benefit to cotton culture in all districts in which the growing of the crop may from now on be undertaken.

Experimental cotton planting in California has been spasmodic ever since 1856, when the State Agricultural Society offered a large prize for the best acre of cotton. In that year a farmer in the San Fernando Valley raised a patch of cotton, but there is no data to show whether the crop was successful. In 1865, a farmer "near Los Angeles" raised 108 acres of cotton, but again history does not specify whether the crop was worth picking. In 1873, more than 22,000 pounds of cotton were grown in Merced county and shipped to Liverpool.

Observation of test plots planted in the past and during this year prove that cotton will make a good start almost anywhere in California outside of mountain regions. The seed sprouts under greatly varying conditions of soil, moisture and climate, the plants spring up like corn, and blossoms and bolls invariably follow. However, cotton growing under present conditions cannot be profitable unless a large number of bolls open before frost kills the plant. The question of whether districts in Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino and other counties can grow cotton profitably is largely one of length of growing season, absence of early fall rains, high night temperatures during the summer.

TESTS NOT UNIFORM.

In many districts cotton growing was not given a fair test this year, owing to the inexperience of the farmers, late planting, early frosts, and winds. It is believed that Federal and State agriculturalists will continue the tests next year. It is pointed out that, in a State free from the major cotton pests which create devastation in fields of the Southern States, with a climate adapted to the growing of long staple cotton in many districts, the determination of the limits of cotton culture is a most important undertaking.

Generally speaking, those semi-arid districts in Riverside and San Bernardino county removed from the direct climatic influence of the ocean, with warm summer evenings and a growing season of at least 250 days, were indicated as adapted to cotton growing by this year's tests. These districts include the Perris Valley, the Armada, Moreno and Corona districts in Riverside county, and certain parts of the Mojave Desert. In the region of Bakersfield and south of Fresno and in other parts of the San Joaquin Valley, including parts of Tulare county, the growing of long staple cotton is now on a stable basis as far as production is concerned as a result of the crops of 1919 and 1920, and these districts are now in the California cotton column with the Imperial, Coachella and Palo Verde valleys. Whether cotton of desired varieties can be grown successfully in a number of districts outside of these districts is still problematical.

FROST DATA IMPORTANT.

The most important consideration to the cotton farmer, next to an assurance of high temperatures during the growing season, is the length of the growing season itself. Temperatures of less than 30 deg. are fatal to the cotton plant under ordinary conditions. Often no killing frost visits certain sections of the Imperial and Coachella valleys, and the cotton stalks are cut off near the ground and a new growth starts, giving the earliest cotton. However, frost data kept by the United States Weather Bureau shows that only in these two valleys is this condition possible, for frosts sufficiently severe to put an end to cotton growing occurs in other sections of Southern and Central California each year.

The length of the growing season determines to a large extent the profitableness of the cotton-growing venture. A growing season of less than 260 days is not sufficient for the production of long staple cotton, experts advise.

The Weather Bureau has frost data on the following districts in California, where cotton is or has been growing this year: Bakersfield, Brawley, Blythe, Corona, Elsinore, Fontana, Fresno, Hemet, Indio, Pomona, Porterville, Riverside and San Jacinto. Records of the last killing frost in spring and the first killing frost in fall have been kept in these localities for from four to sixteen years. The average length of the growing seasons in these localities, with the dates of the frosts, are as follows:

City	Avge. date of last killing frost in Spring	Avge. date of first killing frost in Fall	Length of growing season, days
Bakersfield	Feb. 27	Dec. 2	280
Brawley	Feb. 11	Dec. 4	296
Blythe	Mar. 10	Nov. 5	239
Corona	Mar. 16	Dec. 8	266
Elsinore	Mar. 9	Nov. 29	264
Fontana	Mar. 22	Dec. 14	266
Fresno	April 3	Nov. 1	232
Hemet	Mar. 20	Oct. 26	219
Indio	Feb. 16	Dec. 4	291
Pomona	Mar. 23	Nov. 20	241
Porterville	Mar. 10	Nov. 30	264
Riverside	Mar. 3	Nov. 21	262
San Jacinto	Mar. 9	Nov. 23	258

In order to obtain all the data available regarding both the experimental plantings and the commercial plots outside of the long since proven areas of Imperial, Palo Verde and Coachella valleys, representatives of the Farm and Tractor Section of The Times scoured the field covered by the experiments in the various counties, getting their information first hand from the growers where possible, and obtaining photographs of typical cotton plants and fields. In the case of the San Joaquin Valley counties, the crop though established on considerable areas, is yet new and was included in the investigations. Information secured is contained in the following reports from counties named:

SEEK BEST SORGHUM FOR SYRUP MAKING.

More interest in the growing of sorghums for syrup making is manifest in southern counties of California, following the establishment of a number of sorghum mills in producing centers. What varieties of sorghum to plant under various California conditions is a problem which the growers are pondering, following their experience this season.

The Sorghum Syrup Refining Company, which established a mill and cooker at Burbank, has had better results this year with Early Orange sorghum than with the commoner Silver Tip, which was a favorite last year. The Orange gives a brighter syrup and a better flavor, say the Wells brothers, who are running the mill. There were about 160 acres of sorghum planted in the vicinity of the mill this year, and the yield is said to have run between 175 and 200 gallons per acre on the best prices. The brothers have made the syrup for the farmers at 65 cents a gallon, and helped the growers sell the product, which has been retailed at from $1.50 to $1.75 per gallon. The residue left from the crushing of the cane is sold as fertilizer and hog feed, being cut to suitable lengths with an ensilage cutter.

J. A. Higgason & Son of Bell, Los Angeles county, operate a mill and cooker. About fifty acres of sweet sorghums were planted at Bell this season, Amber, Silver Tip and Orange being tried. The Higgasons have found Amber not as well suited for syrup making as the other two kinds, both of which make an excellent quality syrup. The capacity of the Higgason plant is 100 to 125 gallons per day. A little trouble with alkali, which causes the juice to boil up too quickly and necessitates extra pains in preparation, has caused the syrup makers to advise the planting of the sorghums only on light, well-drained soil, free from spots of alkali.

The long growing season in most Southern California districts is very favorable to the growing of sorghum, Mr. Higgason says. He made syrup in Southern Illinois for twenty years, and old Jack Frost always made an end to syrup-making operations there early in October. Here he expects to make syrup until January 1. He advises planters to delay seeding until about May 20, as warm weather is required for good germination of the seed. At the Higgason mill the juice is pumped from the mill to the cookhouse, and the syrup is made in two large cooking pans, which have twenty-four compartments each. Before boiling, the juice is warmed up in a vat, to facilitate the operation.

WEGNER MEDICATED POULTRY ROOST
Absolute and permanent eradication of Mites and Lice
THINK THIS OVER

One pair of Lice on that bird, means one hundred thousand descendants in less than two months.
The Federal Bureau of Entomology states that 99 per cent of the flocks of the country are infested with both Mites and Lice.
The chicken infested with Lice and Mites is from one to two pounds under normal weight.
Mites and Lice cut egg production from twenty-five to fifty percent.

THE WEGNER MEDICATED POULTRY ROOST
is the greatest proposition ever offered to the Poultry Raisers of this country.
It means the complete and permanent eradication of Mites and Lice.
It means greater vitality of the flock; it means more weight per bird.
It means increased egg production.
It means the getting away from the disagreeable and continual job of spraying.
It is simple; it is sure; it will last a life time; it will pay for itself every six months.

COTTON CULTURE.

seventy to eighty days and each thirty days thereafter, with frequent cultivations. The plants are very well developed. Picking started November 8, and the yield is estimated by cotton authorities at nearly a bale to the acre.

R. E. Blair of Porterville, formerly of Bard, Cal., and who is conducting cotton seed tests at his place, doubts the statement, sometimes heard, that cotton will displace orchards in Tulare county. But growers, as a result of this year's tests, believe, first, that Pima is the one variety for Tulare county; second, that cotton will be grown there only as an intercrop.

KERN COUNNTY.

This is the third year of commercial cotton culture in Kern county. From 550 acres in 1918, the cotton area increased to 10,762 acres in 1920. Although the yield this year was better than the average throughout the United States, cotton farmers are generally of the opinion that if the price does not go above 30 cents per pound before next spring very little cotton will be planted in 1921.

As a result of the 1918 and 1919 plantings of Pima cotton the adaptability of certain sections of Kern county to the culture of the long staple was assured, and this year 7484 acres were planted to the Egyptian long staple, the largest acreage of the variety of any county in California with the exception of Imperial. There are 845 acres of Durango and 2433 acres of two kinds of short staple. Five gins are handling the crop this year. Leading cotton growing communities are Shafter, Wasco, Weed Patch and Arvin. Cotton is also grown at McFarland, Pond, Delano, Semitropic, Rio Bravo, Lerdo, Beardsley and Fairfax districts. The average yield this year is stated to be about the same as last year, when 900 bales were secured from 1100 acres of all varieties. Four hundred and twenty-two farmers planted cotton. Planting was between March 20 and April 15. Some growers started picking short staple about September 20 and long staple a month later.

FRESNO COUNTY.

Cotton growing and planting has been a success in Fresno county this year. About four years ago experiments were made on the Kearney Park University Farm, by Parker Frisselle, the manager, and last year cotton raising was started on a commercial basis. Last year thirty-three bales were secured from forty acres and this year 200 acres of Pima long staple were planted and is now being picked. It is expected about 175 bales will be secured. Perhaps the largest grower of cotton in the county is the Boston Land Company at Henrietta, in the western part of the county. About 3000 acres of Durango cotton is now being picked, with 300 pickers engaged. A large gin is in operation. A smaller gin will be started soon on the Kearney Park farm. Pima long staple and Durango are the varieties grown here. Out on the James ranch colony, west of the city, a fine crop of Pima has been grown with good success. The date of planting is April, and picking began the early part of October. Picking will probably be finished by the middle of December. The kind of soil in this section best suited is black, rich loam, while down at Henrietta a red loam such as is found in the arid places is used. The cotton necessitates several irrigations here, and when irrigated at least once a month or oftener it thrives best.

KINGS COUNTY.

The third crop of cotton to be produced in the Corcoran district is now being harvested, and the results obtained justify the prediction that cotton growing will become a permanent industry there, if the price goes higher. Some of the fields are being picked over the second time, and several growers report yields of one bale to the acre of the Durango and Mebane varieties.

Picking on the Los Posos ranch, which produced a little more than a bale per acre of Durango last year, has just begun and the present crop is estimated at a bale and a quarter per acre. This property is owned by Santa Barbara capitalists, the controlling interest being held by H. J. Doulton. The owners are so favorably impressed with the possibilities of the cotton industry that the dairy stock has been disposed of and a large portion of the acreage will be planted to cotton next year. There are about 200 acres of cotton on this ranch at present, all Durango.

G. F. Sloan of Los Angeles has about forty acres of Mebane cotton which will average a bale to the acre, and the lint is said to be of excellent quality. The crop was grown by Harry King, formerly of Marian.

A thirty-acre crop of Pima cotton, grown by L. B. Lapron on the Hall ranch, is nearly ready for picking, but no accurate estimate has been made as to the probable yield. This variety is not regarded as favorably as the Durango and Mebane in this vicinity. The total production in the Corcoran district is estimated at one thousand bales, including all varieties.

PARCEL POST LIMITED.

While it may be attractive to a city dweller to believe that he can have a vegetable garden grown for him 100 miles or 150 miles away, place his orders for the cost of a stamp, and have the produce delivered at his door, it should be remembered that not all farm products lend themselves to direct marketing by parcel post. Usually it is impracticable to market such heavy products as potatoes by parcel post, whereas eggs, butter, sausage, poultry, many vegetables, and nut meats may frequently be shipped with profit and at a saving to the purchaser.

The use of lambing sheds greatly reduces infant mortality of lambs.

Most tractors are now fitted with spark arresters.

544 EGGS PER MONTH FROM 30 HENS IN JANUARY and FEBRUARY

A. S. Pujol, New Orleans, La., sent us the above report; says that he is using Pratts Poultry Regulator daily; that it has worked wonders with his hens; that before using "Pratts" the number of eggs laid was very discouraging; and that 3 settings of 13 eggs brought 39 strong, healthy chicks, all of them developing into fine birds.
Pratts Poultry Regulator, mixed with a good egg-making ration, not only makes hens lay, but the eggs wanted for hatching will produce sturdy chicks that will develop into A-1 pullets and cockerels. Test "Pratts" with this understanding—"Your Money Back If YOU Are Not Satisfied." Pratts Poultry Preparations will make your poultry pay.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

EAST HIGHLANDS.—The frost is not on the pumpkins in Southern California, but just the same there are many of them in the field and the fodder is in the shock. It is a fact that more pumpkins and corn are being grown in Southern California these days than the true Californian ever had thought possible. With corn at the price it is now, it is possible to make money on the grain even with high-priced land. And the pumpkins also. A drive through the upper end of the San Bernardino Valley, especially in the district devoted largely to hog raising and the dairy industry, shows many fields of corn and many acres devoted to pumpkins. And the pumpkin pie produced in California is as tempting as those of the East. Pumpkins are grown though not so much for the pumpkin pie as because the dairyman has found that they give a rich return when fed to the cows. Great pumpkins, and, of course, squashes, are piled high in the barns and during the winter months are hacked up with hatchets and fed to "Bossy." The return for this attention is an increased production of milk and a better flavored milk. More and more acres are devoted each year to the corn and to the pumpkins because it is quite the thing to plant the corn and grow the pumpkins between the rows. On the Base Line, between East Highlands and San Bernardino, there are any number of fields of corn and pumpkins.

MARIOUT MAKES GOOD.

TULARE.—Mariout barley was grown in field tests last season on five ranches in Tulare county and an average increase of 4.2 sacks per acre above common barley has been reported to the authorities at the University Farm. In these tests common and Mariout barley were planted side by side under as nearly similar conditions as possible and it was found at harvest time that Mariout had averaged fourteen and two-tenths sacks per acre as against ten sacks per acre for the common sort. In all instances it was found that Mariout ripened about two weeks earlier than common barley and this characteristic makes it especially valuable for the Tulare Lake bottom lands, where late maturing grain is frequently lost through flooding in the spring. As a result of these convincing tests a heavy planting of Mariout will be made in Tulare county this fall, and several large consignments of seed have left the Davis region for this locality.

WITHDRAWS GREAT AREA.

NILAND.—The Secretary of the Interior on November 3, issued an order withdrawing from entry about 200,000 acres of public land lying east, north and southeast of Niland, Imperial county, in the vicinity of the Salton Sea, and even including a part of the sea itself. Many "squatters" who have been holding lands not legally entered will probably have to give up their homesteads under the new order.

NAVELS GOING EAST.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The local crop of Washington navel oranges now is well under way to eastern markets, where it is commanding very high prices. Nearly all the picking will be done this month, being the earliest known for years. The grapefruit crop is ripening rapidly and is being shipped mainly to southwestern points. Turning from cotton, a large new acreage of citrus fruit would be planted in the valley this winter were it possible to get nursery stock. Little is to be had here and Arizona quarantine laws forbid importation of young trees from California. It is believed there will have to be modification of this rule, with provision for the quarantine and fumigation of all nursery stock brought from outside the State. An exceptionally early variety of the navel has been developed near Phoenix by F. W. Avery, from whom many Arizona growers are securing budding material.

FATTENING STEERS.

FONTANA.—In pursuance of its quest for animal fertilizer for is 5000-acre citrus grove, the Fontana Farms Company recently brought in 350 steers from the Mojave Desert to feed on ensilage and peanut hay. When this herd is fattened another herd will be brought in to take its place. To handle its large crop of peanuts the company is installing a complete mill, including a sheller, a specific gravity separator and a machine for taking out the sticks and stones before shelling. This will be the only mill of its kind and capacity on the Pacific Coast.

HUNDRED TONS SHIPPED.

CHINO.—According to the report of the Chino Walnut Association, over 100 tons of walnuts have been handled since the season opened. The nuts produced by members of this association are packed under the Diamond brand. This requires that 90 per cent of the meats of the budded varieties must be good and 92 per cent of the soft-shelled varieties. It is predicted that the entire output of the association will be at least 200 tons before the season ends.

LONG STAPLE QUOTATION.

EL CENTRO.—The first quotation for Imperial Valley Egyptian cotton this season was made by Daly Brothers of El Centro, who received a wire from their agents in New York, putting the price of Egyptian cotton at from 49 to 65 cents. "Pima, of No. 2 grade," the message stated, "of inch and five-eighths staple, is offered at 58 cents, and probably could be bought cheaper on a firm bid."

FLOCKS GOING SOUTH.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Early snowstorms in the plateau region have caused many sheep owners to start shipment of their flocks southward by rail, rather than by driving along the four lanes that have been established through the forest reserves. Each lane is a mile wide, running from the Holbrook, Winslow, Flagstaff and Williams sections. More than a half million ewes will be wintered on the plains north of Phoenix, for shearing and lambing. While the price of wool is hardly half that known during the last season and the demand for spring lambs does not promise well, there is consolation that early rains, with promise of more, will provide exceptionally good pasturage on the lower plains. Last season was dry and return to the north had to be made at an exceptionally early time.

NO RETAIL DECLINE.

SANTA BARBARA. — Eugene Kellogg, County Horticultural Commissioner, states that, although the cattlemen in the Santa Barbara range country are losing money every day delivering beef steers at 8 to 8½ cents on the hoof, about half what they were getting eighteen months ago, the retail price of meats continues to stay up in Santa Barbara. A movement is on foot to organize a selling association and to seek markets other than in Southern California cities if necessary to get better prices.

COTTON WITHOUT WATER.

INDIO. Unirrigated cotton on the desert is an anomaly, and a successful crop grown without the application of water in the Land of Little Rain is decidedly unusual. Yet J. L. Marshall did it. He planted six acres more than he had water for, after irrigating the ground well. He abandoned the six acres, except for cultivation, when his water ran shy. The heavy rains, coming in August, did the best, and the six acres show up about as well as the rest.

ELECTS OFFICERS.

RIALTO.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Rialto Heights Citrus Association, a member of the San Bernardino County Fruit Exchange, reports were read showing the business of the association to be in the best possible condition, fruit returns for the past season being among the highest in this locality. The election of officers and directors for the coming year resulted as follows: C. R. Hobbs, president; D. C. Huntington, vice-president; A. H. Morgan, secretary; L. E. Newcomb and H. R. Bonnert, additional directors.

TO HANDLE MISSIONS.

LINDSAY.—Reporting the sale of 400 tons of olives and the closing of "pool number one," at a very fair price, the Lindsay Olive Growers' Association is making arrangements to open a second pool. It is expected that plans will soon be consummated for the handling of the mission olives at a satisfactory price. Picking has already commenced. The old Mutual packing-house is being utilized as a place to receive the olives and all necessary details have been arranged.

LETTUCE AND MELON GROWERS ORGANIZE.

CALIPATRIA. — The Imperial Valley Vegetable and Melon Growers' Association came into being last week, when six directors of the new organization were named at a meeting presided over by James P. Britt, deputy State market inspector, and Ed Garthwaite, county farm adviser. The directors named are: J. E. O'Neill, William F. Wild, A. S. Farley, Thomas L. Jones, J. R. Griffith and William Hilliker. A seventh director, to be named later, will represent the State Market Commission.

While the association made its initial bow at Calipatria, it will be county-wide in scope. The southern end of the county will be gradually covered, until each producing center is represented. It is planned to market the lettuce and spinach crop during the next few months, and later include the melon and other crops as they come into the market.

In speaking of the objects of the association, Mr. Britt said:

"More than $60,000,000 worth of California products were marketed last year through co-operation. The association will have behind it the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture, the county farm bureau and the State Market Commission. The association is regularly incorporated, and will work on a purely non-profit co-operative principle.

"Among the immediate benefits will be the inspection of vegetables when shipped. The deputy, when making the inspection, will issue a certificate to the grower. We are arranging with the United States Department of Agriculture to have a deputy inspect the produce when it reaches its destination. This will obviate all claims that goods were poor when shipped and in bad condition when reaching their destination. The immense advantage of this double inspection certainly must appeal to all, as it means honest prices for honest goods."

Other districts will be admitted as rapidly as they can be reached.

WILL TEST SULPHUR.

A project on the use of sulphur, lime, gypsum and superphosphates with various crops is now being prepared by the office of the farm adviser in Los Angeles county and will be launched within the near future.

COTTON CULTURE.

From May 1 to May 10 there were planted at Fontana three experimental plots of cotton, located at three widely separated points on the Fontana ranch. Each twenty-acre plot was planted half to Durango and half to Pima long staple. Owing to inexperience the crop was planted too deeply (three to four inches) and the stand obtained was not satisfactory. Accordingly, with the exception of ten acres of Pima on one plot and a few rows on each of the other plots, weed knives were run over the cotton, with the expectation of abandoning the experiment. However, about May 1 the Agricultural Department learned that cotton was still being planted in the Perris country, so ten acres were re-seeded on each plot of Durango and a very good stand resulted. The cotton was thinned to about eighteen inches apart to the row, and irrigation started around July 1, all plots being irrigated at intervals of from fourteen to twenty-one days thereafter up to the middle of October.

On one of the ten-acre plots 200 pounds of nitrate of soda was applied on five acres and balanced or complete fertilizer was used on two and one-half acres. On the plot fertilized with nitrate of soda much more rapid growth was shown than on the nonfertilized area or on those fertilized with complete fertilizer. The latter growth seemed to be stunted, although it did show signs of maturing a little early. The soil used is a light sandy loam, with a strong lime content. Cotton on old alfalfa ground has given a particularly good account of itself at Fontana, making perhaps a 50 per cent greater growth than on the nonfertilized plots and being proportionately well fruited.

Cotton men who have seen the planting on the Fontana ranch say that, if even the larger bolls mature, the yield will run over a bale to the acre on the Durango. The Pima is too scattered to estimate in this way, but in nearly all of the stands there are from 50 to 100 bolls on each plant, it is said. Those that have opened seem to have a very good staple. The ranch manager has no doubt but that cotton would be an entire success if it could be put out in March or April, which he thinks could be done by making a thick shallow planting during any warm spell in these two months.

Cotton in the Citrus Belt.

An Ontario orchardist planted short staple cotton as an experiment near his orange grove.

TULARE COUNTY.

Although a few acres of cotton were planted experimentally in Tulare county during 1919, the three chief varieties were not given a real try-out until this season, when about 3500 acres were planted, principally to Durango, although Pima was successfully tried. The long growing season and warm summer nights helped the Tulare cotton, and fields that were planted early enough matured good crops. However, the irrigated land in the county is in great demand for fruit growing is comparatively high-priced and is not therefore adapted ordinarily to cotton growing, except as an intercrop. The larger part of the cotton acreage, outside of the intercrop plantings, was in the Tipton, Pixley, Earlimart, Poplar anl Tulare districts. The largest planting was by the Globe Mills, at El Mirador, one of 320 acres of Durango.

D. E. McCorkle of Lindsay intercropped a twenty-acre young orchard with Durango, planting April 1. The spring was cool, but the summer a little warmer than usual, and picking began September 1. He irrigated five times and had a yield of 300 pounds per acre. C. O. Griffin, secretary of the Lindsay Cotton Growers' Association, with associates, planted Pima cotton as an intercrop to Emperor grapes, a total of twelve acres. They estimate a little over a bale to the acre. W. E. and C. O. Premc of Porterville have ventured farther in the experiment, having seventy acres in Pima, planted April 10, to May 1, first irrigation

SIMPLE MIXTURE MAKES HENS LAY

By W. S. Burgess

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A lifelong study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Comb's Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way, the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 107 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.

PCA

MOULT MASH & DRY MASH

Egg production regularly takes a drop during the moulting season. One of our own typical experiences with 500 hens (each a year old) showed a decline in production to 15 percent of normal during the moult. However, this figure was brought up to 40 percent within a period of sixty days by proper feeding, using

P. C. A. Moult Mash with Buttermilk and P. C. A. Dry Mash

Experienced poultrymen have demonstrated that these two celebrated feeds, not only tend to bolster up egg laying but are valuable as aids to the hen during the natural strain of moulting.

P. C. A. MOULT MASH is a specialty feed and must not be considered in any sense a substitute for P. C. A. DRY MASH.

P. C. A. Feeds are Packed in 100 lb. Sacks. Look for the Trademark.

DIRECTIONS FOR FEEDING: Keep both P.C.A. Moult Mash and P.C.A. Dry Mash before your hens continuously—or feed each hen one-half ounce of dampened P.C.A. Moult Mash per day in addition to the regular diet of P.C.A. Dry Mash.

HOGANIZED WHITE LEGHORN BABY CHICKS

WALTER HOGAN STOCK

We procure all our hatching eggs from a flock of 1500 hens that were hatched and raised from eggs bought direct from Hogan. The owner of the flock is an expert at Hoganizing and a very successful poultryman. He will not keep a hen that will not lay over 190 eggs per year. We guarantee safe arrival by express of a full count live chicks anywhere within 48 hours of Los Angeles. Fall chicks do fine and will begin to lay when 5 months old and be laying when spring-hatched birds are moulting. The ancestors of our chicks have been Hoganized and bred for egg production by Mr. Hogan for over 15 years. There is nothing better.

RESULTS WITH SULPHUR ON BEANS AND WHEAT.

BY C. C. STAUNTON.

COUNTY AGENT, VENTURA COUNTY.

Recent investigations made by the Oregon Experiment Station in the use of powdered sulphur to increase crop yields have resulted in a general report favorable to that material on some certain crops, mainly alfalfa, the clovers and vetches.

Demonstrations made in various parts of California through the efforts of farm advisers have yielded many interesting results, some negative and some positive, according to certain local conditions. A few experimenters added materials in conjunction with the sulphur, such as gypsum and lime and phosphates.

The results obtained in Ventura county the past year have brought one or two factors to the fore which, though not considered definitely settled as to making them a regular farm practice, have stimulated an interest in the use of sulphur. The first application of sulphur was made on wheat land, and was at the rate of 220 pounds per acre, being applied to the ground immediately before sowing, on January 20, the soil being a rather heavy loam and having a good amount of humus. Early Baart was the variety grown and it was planted at the rate of eighty pounds per acre. During the growing season the plot was carefully watched and no smut made its appearance, although rust showed all over the fields, including the test plot.

The grain on the sulphured acre stooled out better than that on the untreated field, the germination seemed better and the crop matured a trifle later. A systematic examination of the heads of wheat in both plots showed that the sulphured one had longer, heavier filled out ones with the berries much more plump than was the case with the rest of the field.

At the time of harvesting this acre and another check acre were held separate, but owing to difficulties with the machine when threshing time came, these plots were overlooked and all run through without any track being kept of the yields. An estimate would put it at a 15 to 20 per cent increase in favor of the sulphur.

A half acre of alfalfa was treated at the same rate of 220 pounds per acre, but has given no returns all season. One possible reason for this is that the irrigating water comes from Sulphur Mountain and contains a relatively high per cent of soluble sulphates, so that the addition of sulphur had no effect.

On the lima bean land the application was made the last of March, the material being broadcasted by hand, irrigated twice and cultivated three or four times during the growing season and threshed on October 4.

Results With Sulphur.

Right—Eight hundred pounds of beans grown on half-acre of sulphured land. Left—Six hundred pounds from unsulphured half-acre adjoining. Photographed on test plot of J. P. Thille bean ranch in Ventura county.

The check plot beside it had absolutely the same treatment and was of the same soil type. The one-half acre gave 801 pounds of limas, the unsulphured 598 pounds, which was an increase of 203 pounds to the half acre, or over 400 pounds per acre.

The increase in crop yield, however, was not entirely due to whatever stimulating effect the sulphur may have made on the plants, for the stand was heavier than on the check or on the rest of the forty-acre field. This may have been due to the control or repelling of wireworm damage on this plot, for none were noticed working here, though many plants showed their work on the bordering rows and practically the whole field showed depredations to a greater or less extent.

A number of Ventura Farm Bureau members are to experiment with sulphur next year on a commercial scale to find if this material will be of real value in increasing the crop and in the reduction of the wire worm damage, or perhaps in its control.

DOUBLE CROPPING PLAN PAYS WELL.

COACHELLA.—There are around 3000 acres of cotton planted in the Coachella Valley this year, mostly Durango, with about 400 acres of Pima, which is producing a fine crop.

Volunteer cotton, from last year's stubble, grown by William Lay, one mile west of Indio, yielded half a bale per acre in August, having still four months' growing season left to make cotton.

H. O. Todd, near Coachella, a new man from San Francisco, after harvesting a good onion crop between his date trees, planted cotton between the trees in June, and has a heavy crop of Durango, which will, it is expected, yield him a bale to the acre.

Dr. D. G. Sniff, recently from Newman, Cal., from his thirty-acre ranch, between Indio and Coachella, after harvesting an early onion crop that brought him a good return, leased the ranch to Pedro Diaz, recently from Mexico City, and J. A. McGregor, for a reported rental of $52 per acre cash rent, for a cotton crop for the rest of the year.

V. E. Metzler, a retired banker, thinks grapes and cotton will grow together, and that two blades should grow where one is usually grown, as shown by his fine Pima cotton planted between his young grape vines. Both have made a marvelous growth, the cotton protecting the young vines from the spring winds.

J. A. Harris, who has cotton gins at Imperial and Brawley, built a new four-stand gin at Coachella this year, and is running full shift.

The general feeling of the farmers here is that the price of cotton is bound to be much better and for that reason many are holding on. Some cotton has been sent to the warehouse at San Pedro for storage. Some farmers are hauling seed back from the gin to be used as fertilizer.

CALIFORNIANS WIN HEAVILY AT FAIR.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The poultry and pigeon display at the Arizona State Fair held here November 8 to 13 was declared the best ever seen at Phoenix. There were over 1000 entries. William Fetterly was in charge and the judges were N. E. Luce of the United States Poultry Experiment Station at Glendale, Ariz., and M. E. [illegible], White Leghorn breeder of Burbank, Cal. Over [illegible] single-comb Rhode Island Reds were in evidence, followed in number by Barred Rocks.

A large number of Californians were exhibitors. R. G. Baxter, Whittier, took all awards for rose-comb White Leghorns and had first cock and third hen in black-breasted Red Game bantams. A. G. Huskins, Glendale, took first cock, first hen, first cockerel and first pullet in White Wyandottes and first cockerel in black-breasted Red Game bantams and first cockerel in Light Brahmas, second cock Golden Seabright bantams. William Williams, Los Angeles, took second, third and fourth hens, first and third cockerels, the four awards in pullets and first and second pens in Buff Minorcas, as well as second and third hen, second and fourth cockerel, third and fourth pullet in Buff Cochin bantams. H. D. Keplinger, Los Angeles, took first cock, first hen, second cockerel and first pullet in Buff Cochin bantams. Dr. R. Irwin Royce, Glendale, took first cock Golden Seabright bantams, all awards for Partridge Plymouth Rock bantams, three prizes for Red Game bantams and second cock for single-comb White Leghorns. J. J. Dean, Moneta, took all awards in Silver Seabright bantams. Percival D. Edouart, Los Angeles, took first cock and first hen in Dark Cornish. H. E. Belcher, Los Angeles, took all awards in Blue Andalusians. W. Wesley Wilson, Guasti, took all awards except second cock in single-comb White Leghorns. Phil Lehrbach, Los Angeles, took first and second cock, second, third and fourth hens, first, second and fourth cockerels, third pullet in single-comb Rhode Island Whites, second cock, third hen, second pullet rose-comb Rhode Island Whites. J. L. Harrison, Pasadena, took second, third and fourth pullets Rhode Island Reds, first cock, first hen, first cockerel, first, third and fourth pullets silver-laced Wyandottes. Floyd R. Marvin, Burbank, took third cockerel in White Wyandottes.

TO USE FERTILIZERS.

A. E. Barnes, secretary of the Fruit Growers' Supply Company, at a meeting of fertilizer companies and fruit growers with G. H. Hecke, recently, predicted that there will be an increased consumption of commercial fertilizers in California amounting to 20 per cent per year, for several years, owing to the growing scarcity of animal manures.

A Land of Milk and Money

It takes more than honeyed language to put your dairy-farm on a moneyed basis. It takes know-how! Breeding, cow-testing, feeding—that is the trinity of success in the dairy business. And feeding should not come last in your reckoning, either!

For it's the feed that shows up in the flow. It's the feed that, in the end, makes your herd profitable or unprofitable.

Nature has provided alfalfa hay or pasturage for your cows—that's good! But it doesn't go far enough. Because alfalfa, although a cheap source of protein, contains only half the carbohydrates required. Hence the need of a concentrated grain feed.

It has been demonstrated time and time again that you can't put your dairy on a real profit-basis unless you feed, in addition to roughage, a grain concentrate. And just as alfalfa hay is the ideal roughage, so SUREMILK is the ideal grain concentrate. Together, they enable your cows to produce the greatest amount of milk at the lowest cost.

If you want to see how SUREMILK can help to make your dairy-farm a land of milk and money, send for our booklet, "Converting Feed into Money." It's free—mail the coupon now!

COTTON CULTURE.

alkali, and the water table lies about three to four feet from the surface.

As irrigation is necessary for the growing of cotton, this culture is not a success at every place on the desert. At Hesperia the weather conditions are not so favorable for the growing of the long staple variety, although the short staple may do fairly well, it is believed. Farther north, in the Apple Valley country, it may be possible to grow this variety, providing the weather permits early planting. W. A. Foster of Apple Valley tried out some of the new variety, Ascia, which has done very well and which may prove to be the best variety for that district and others not having a long growing period.

Experiments on a small scale have been carried on at Adelanto, situated six miles west of Victorville. The plants grown seem to do fairly well, but as no considerable large acreage was planted, it is hard to determine just what to expect from a commercial planting. A. J. Faults, who has a ranch between Daggett and Yermo, has demonstrated that cotton can be grown on the desert if given the correct care and proper soil. On Mr. Faults' ten-acre plot he has about two acres of Durango and some long staple Pima. The Pima is showing up so well, he says, that it will pick about two bales to the acre. This soil is of a virgin nature, having had nothing previous on it prior to this planting. A. D. Van Dyke, an old settler of Daggett, is convinced that Pima cotton is going to be a good rotating crop for his alfalfa. He states that it requires no more water than does corn and very little more attention. One row of Pima cotton was planted at the Indian school at Banning. Although it was not planted until early in June, the bolls matured rapidly, and when the killing frost came some of them had opened.

Mebane Cotton at Porterville.

R. E. Blair, formerly with the Federal Department of Agriculture, is shown examining bolls of medium staple, improved through selection over a period of three years.

J. R. Johnson, who on May 20 last planted seventeen acres at Euclid avenue and Dessau street, a mile south of Ontario, to Durango, Pima and Mebane cotton, declares himself so well pleased with the result of his experiment to date that he will plant a larger acreage next year. Mr. Johnson believes that his planting date was considerably too late to procure the best results. He has twice irrigated his field, but gives it as his belief that but one watering would have been better.

J. W. Evans, who has had much experience with cotton raising in Texas, is experimenting extensively in the ranching section to the south of Ontario. From fifty acres of Durango cotton, which he has raised without any irrigation whatever, Mr. Evans expects to average better than a quarter of a bale to the acre. This crop was planted April 20, but Mr. Evans believes better results would have been obtained had the planting been done earlier in the month, or even late in March. From three acres of short staple cotton, which he has given four light irrigations, Mr. Evans expects to take better than a half-bale to the acre.

BEET GROWERS UNITE TO GET NEW CONTRACT.

SANTA ANA.—Beet growers of Orange and Los Angeles counties are in open revolt against the sliding-scale contract with the refiners now in effect. At a recent meeting held in Santa Ana 165 growers of the two counties, controlling nearly 50 per cent of the acreage set to beets, pledged themselves not to sign contracts offered by the factories for the coming season until a committee appointed at the meeting had reported on the proposed new beet growers' association. The committee was given three weeks to make its report.

The session of the beet men was notable in that discussion was confined to organization and marketing problems, and no "mud" was slung at the factories. D. Goodwin of Artesia, temporary chairman, first told of the purpose of the gathering, and J. A. Knapp of Garden Grove was selected temporary secretary. Mr. Goodwin struck the keynote of the meeting in his opening speech, when he said:

"Because of the experiences of the past two weeks, following payments for beets delivered, the growers feel the need of organization. They want to deal with the factories as a unit, instead of as individuals. I do not want to hear any 'mud slinging' here today. The factories are conducted by business men on a business basis. The growers should do the same, and should also act unitedly. If you or I go to them individually, they might tell us that they do not need our acreage. If we go to them as an organization, we will get more consideration. We should try to form an organization with sufficient funds back of it to maintain the membership."

C. L. McComber discussed organization; T. L. McFadden, attorney, of Placentia, dwelt upon the legal aspects of the organization, and suggested that the Orange County Produce Association, already formed, might enlarge its scope to take in the growers. H. E. Wahlberg, farm adviser, urged organization, and promised the help of the farm bureau. A. L. Darby, banker, of Compton, said that banks everywhere would look with favor upon such a movement. Others who expressed themselves as favorable to the proposed organization were Homer Clemens, Artesia; H. T. O'Connor, Los Alamitos; R. L. Draper, Smeltzer; Sam Giesler, Huntington Beach; R. B. Marshbanks, Artesia; Earl Gardner, Smeltzer, and Dean Johnson, Westminster.

COTTON CULTURE.

Edward M. Fowler Company, Southwest Cotton Company, California Products Company, Imperial Development Company and W. B. Camp, cotton expert in the employ of the United States Department of Agriculture, stationed at Bakersfield.

When this project was mentioned to farmers in the Antelope Valley there were many requests for seed and information on the growing of the crop. A circular was therefore prepared by the farm advisors for the help of those who were trying out cotton. The seed was distributed, but unfortunately, due to an unfavorable spring, the weather remaining cool quite late, and also due to the rush of other work, only eight plots were put in. One of these was not irrigated, and did not turn out at all successfully.

The seed was planted in these various plots from April 20 to June 1. The seed planted between the 20th and the latter part of April seemed to give the best results. The Pima, or long staple, cotton, although getting a good stand and growing well, did not have time to mature before frost. Some of the plants were still in blossom on November 1, and practically none of the bolls were matured. With Mebane short staple, many bolls were fully matured, although the percentage of the bolls on each plant was not very great. Plants that were somewhat stunted by lack of water early in the season were thrown into fruiting early. This resulted in a comparatively small number of bolls, most of which, however, were about to mature. The plants which were allowed to grow more vigorously by a greater amount of water being supplied, did not start fruiting early enough to mature all of the bolls, and when frost came many of them were still green.

The results obtained with this season's trials in Los Angeles county were not altogether satisfactory, although there was a sufficient degree of success obtained to warrant further trials in the future. This past season was an unfavorable one in the Antelope Valley, from the fact that frosts hung on late in the spring and came early in the fall, making a shorter season than the average one in the valley. The people who tried cotton were also inexperienced in the growing of that crop, and much was learned this year which will be of advantage another year. Antelope Valley growers experimenting with cotton included Mrs. Lydia G. Weld, Del Sur; C. H. Brooks, Roosevelt; J. W. Mays, Sierra Bonita; Mrs. Mary L. Barr, Rosamond; Fred Hamilton, Willow Springs.

In the San Fernando Valley the most pretentious planting was made by J. B. Myers of Chatsworth. H. C. McDaniel of that place had planned to give Pima cotton a thorough trial and had obtained, through Edward M. Fowler, sufficient seed for thirty acres. Due to delayed arrival of a new tractor, however, he failed to get his seed bed in shape for a sufficiently early planting and Mr. Myers undertook the planting of a four-acre piece with some of Mr. McDaniel's seed. This piece had been prepared early and the moisture was deep. The planting was made April 1 and several hot days following brought forth an excellent stand. The cotton made a thrifty and healthy growth and was pronounced by experts to be of very good quality. The north side of San Fernando Valley does not have the hot nights found in some sections where cotton has done well, but has a long growing season and is not much hit by frost. The lower bolls of Mr. Myers's cotton were opening by November 1 and were showing around 125 bolls to the stalk.

A small plot of Pima planted much later by J. B. Culbertson on the Cascade Ranch, northwest of San Fernando, also developed a thrifty stand, as did also a row of the same variety grown on the Denure Ranch at Zelzah. J. D. Radcliff grew several rows of Durango near Burbank, the growth being partially stopped by frost occurring in October. Other San Fernando Valley growers who tried out little plantings of cotton were C. R. Sneed, Mission Acres, and Mr. Reynolds of San Fernando.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

Several districts in Riverside county gave the best results of any of the Southern California districts outside the great valleys. Cotton was profitably matured in the Perris Valley, in the Armada-Moreno section, and near Corona. At this year's Riverside fair almost every agricultural district showed stalks of cotton with many matured bolls. There was renewed interest in cotton culture in the Coachella Valley, a proven cotton district, and 2000 acres of Durango, and 400 acres of Pima cotton were successfully planted there. A gin at Thermal is now turning out the season's crop. The average yield is reported to be at least three-fourths of a bale to the acre of Durango, and slightly less of long staple. In the Palo Verde section of Riverside county 23,000 acres were planted. Spring winds were severe, and cut down the yield, which may be 16,000 bales. In that valley 400 acres of Pima were planted, but owing to the growth of the plants, which were planted late, being stopped by frost, an average crop was not secured.

Cotton in Perris Valley seems now past the experimental stage, the crop which has just been produced demonstrating that an important new cotton section for the growth of this staple has been developed there. For a number of years, previous to 1919, small experimental plots of cotton had been planted in the valley by J. E. Lowery, Jonathan Nance, Arzina Reynolds and other experienced cotton growers from Texas and other Southern States. Almost without exception, these small plantings did well. In 1919 A. M. Ayers planted two acres, not getting the seed into the ground until late in June. This cotton was given almost no care, yet it produced at the rate of nearly a half bale to the acre.

Early in 1920, under the leadership of the Perris Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau, a general interest in cotton culture was aroused, and about 1400 acres were planted in the Perris and Nuevo sections. The variety chosen was Durango. The spring was late, and the warm weather came later than usual. Due to the fact that the majority of the growers had never

PEANUT HAY AND SILAGE FOR CATTLE.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Over at the 18,000-acre Fontana Ranch they are performing a new stunt. They are trying out peanut hay and silage on range cattle to fatten them for market. There are 300 of the cattle and they belong to C. J. and K. K. Langford, who recently brought them in from the range. The Langfords expect to feed them for ninety days to fit them for the Los Angeles market. They are largely grade Herefords and Durhams, mostly steers, and are in the well-built and arranged cattle pens at Fontana.

C. C. Langford, who is in active charge of the cattle, declares that the past summer season on the range was most satisfactory. These particular cattle have been pastured in the Mojave Valley. Mr. Langford and some helpers had a busy time of it dehorning the cows.

The Langfords are not in the least in doubt as to the fattening qualities of the peanut hay. "I feed it to all the ranch stock," said one of Mr. Langford's helpers, who is a part of the Fontana Ranch force. "It makes the horses very slick and fat."

In the office of the Fontana Farms Company they say they believe there is a wonderful work awaiting farmers in San Bernardino county in this very line of feeding the range cattle and fattening them for market. They point out the dependence of agriculture upon soil fertilization, and the necessity of having live stock for this purpose. Here, they say, is an opportunity to market farm products right on the farm and get a good price for them, since the usual plan is for the owner of the cattle to pay so much per day per head for the cattle, and the pay is sure when the cattle are ready for market. With Los Angeles getting to be such an important live-stock market, they argue, and the vast ranges of California and Arizona and Nevada shipping stock in there, what more natural than that this valley should be ready to form a half-way station and fatten the stock off feed grown in the valley and receive the enormous benefit from the vast amount of barnyard fertilizer that would make the permanent agricultural prosperity of the valley assured?

Milking Machine Makes Friends.

AGENCY BUYS BULL.

TULARE.—Holberk Pontiac Finale, young Holstein bull prize winner at the Tulare Live Stock Show of 1920, has been sold to the United States Indian Agency at Greenville, Cal., according to announcement made by T. J. Gist & Sons, the former owners. C. A. Peairs, county dairy inspector, made the selection for the agency. This bull was sired by Creamcup Pontiac Burke, III, and his dam had a seven-day record of 21.88 pounds of butter from 549.6 pounds of milk.

DURATION OF OESTRUM INTERESTS BREEDERS.

For the persons who are not familiar with the time elapsing from one oestrual period to the other in the various domestic animals, the following extracts from extensive observations are given by the California Department of Agriculture, with the hope that they will be of some aid to the breeders.

When a mare is not pregnant, each period of oestrum occurs every three or four weeks, but more often in three weeks.

Sometimes there is a period of three to four months before the mare comes in heat while in other cases the oestrual period may last for several weeks. After parturition the mare may come in heat in two or three days, however, most frequently this occurs on the eighth or ninth day and occasionally on the tenth or eleventh day. The duration of oestrum lasts on an average for nine days. The period in suckling mares usually is considerably shorter.

The periods of oestrum in a nonpregnant normal cow occur about every three weeks. Certain variations of this time may occur but as a rule the time intervening between each period is less than four weeks. The duration of each period lasts from one to one and a half days. Sometimes it is not longer than one-half day to eight hours. After calving, the oestrual period is observed in from three to seven weeks.

In sheep and goats the oestrual [illegible] are repeated in about three weeks (sometimes two weeks) and each period [illegible] from twenty-four to thirty-six hours. The first heat occurs six to eight weeks after parturition.

In the sow heat returns on an average of about every three weeks. Some authorities state the return of each period is considerably less. During the time the sow is suckling her offspring there is no oestrual period and as a rule the presence of the male does not induce a sexual stimulus until seven or eight weeks after parturition. The oestrual period lasts twenty-four to forty-eight hours in case of copulation, otherwise it may last five or six days.

The rabbit may become pregnant every month and is ready to receive the male immediately after parturition. When copulation does not take place the period of heat returns about every thirty-five days.

HORSE FLESH GOING UP.

At the national Belgian breeders' show, at Waterloo, Iowa, optimism regarding the future of the draft horse was shown by reports, and by the high prices prevailing for good horses. One breeder reported the sale of 114 pure-breds to farmers. The average for this lot was $835 each, all ages being represented, from suckling colts to mature stallions.

Smilo grass is both cold and drought resistent, and is a strong perennial.

Calf Meal
Milk Substitute
100 Lbs.

Let's get away from raising calves on milk

It would be foolish to deny that good calves can be raised on milk They can. But in view of the fact that there is another method of raising them which is equally effective, and at the same time, far less expensive, the natural query is "Why feed milk to your calves"?

Blatchford's Calf Meal

Thousands of farmers on thousands of farms have entirely discontinued the practice of raising their calves on milk because they have found they can grow them as rapidly and develop them every bit as well on Blatchford's Calf Meal. Yet Blatchford's, which is a milk-substitute, can be used at less than half the cost of using milk.

You, Mr. Farmer are a business man. In the conduct of your business, economy of operation looms up with every bit as much importance as it does in any other industry. Therefore, the merits of Blatchford's Calf Meal should interest you. Providing as it does, the elements the calf requires for quick growth, thrift and health—and providing them in proper form—the opportunity its use presents to save milk and to save money, should engage your attention.

Blatchford's is GUARANTEED. You take no chances when you use it because the manufacturers stand back of every bag sold. We have no hesitancy in recommending to you that you try it. We KNOW you will find it a profitable thing to do.

BULK HANDLING OF GRAIN IS INCREASING IN GOLDEN STATE.

BY ARTHUR L. DAHL.

CALIFORNIA is one of the few States that has clung to the system of handling grain in sacks, and the piles of sacked grain seen in our harvest season are as interesting to the Middle West farmer who visits us as are the numerous grain elevators that dot the landscape in the central grain belt, to a far westerner.

Unquestionably the matter of climate has a lot to do with our harvesting habits, for nowhere else than in California can the grain be sacked and piled in the open and left for many days without fear of damage by the elements. This favorable condition does not blind an increasing number of California grain growers to the advantages to be derived from bulk storage.

The great milling companies of the State have adopted the bulk system of handling grain, and even though it is received at the warehouse in sacks, the subsequent handling is in bulk. The railroads make provision for bulk shipments of grain, since proper cars are provided for the shipment of grain in bulk and tariff regulations are framed to meet these shipments.

Manufacturers of combined harvesters have developed their machines to permit of the handling of bulk grain from the time it is cut until loaded on the wagons for hauling to the elevator, and the only thing necesshsary for the farmer to do is to provide the necessary storage facilities on the ranch to take care of the grain until it is sold and delivered to the purchaser.

SACKS ARE EXPENSIVE.

Sacks are expensive from several angles. Of late years the scarcity and high price of jute have made the cost of grain sacks unusually high, yet farmers who had no storage facilities for loose grain have had to buy them and pay the price. A hole in one of the bags means a constant loss in handling. Sacked grain when stored in the open, or even under incomplete shelter, is subject to many kinds of deterioration. Moisture is apt to be communicated to the contents in one way or another, and rats and mice inflict serious damage to sacks in very short order.

A practical solution of the storage problem is the maintenance of a metal storage bin on the grain farm. With such a place to keep grain stored, the producer can sell when and where he pleases. Farm wagons can be easily converted to carry bulk grain, and the purchase and handling of sacks can be avoided.

Metal grain bins are made in sizes to meet the needs of the most modest ranch, or by combining a number of units, the capacity of the largest grain field can be met. A metal bin six feet high, and twelve feet seven inches in diameter will store 600 bushels of grain; and by increasing the height and diameter the capacity is increased, so that one eighteen feet high and twenty-two feet in diameter will store about 60000 bushels of grain.

UNIT SYSTEMS.

In some communities where farmers form co-operative elevator associations for the handling of their grain, metal bins are used to form units that can be expanded indefinitely to meet the increasing needs of the members. In one case a system has been worked out whereby a total storage capacity of 72,000 bushels can be obtained at one plant by the use of twelve bins, each of 6000 bushels capacity, and arranged in two parallel rows, with each bin mounted on a conical reinforced concrete base. Each of the bins is connected with a conveyor system for handling the bulk grain, and an operator stationed in the tower over the workhouse can regulate the delivery of the grain to any particular bin. Chutes lead from these bins to the workhouse, so that grain cars can be loaded directly from the workhouse, just as is done in the large commercial elevators. The grain hauled to the plant by farmers is delivered into a receiving pit below the level of the floor, from which it is conveyed to the bins by mechanical elevators.

A metal grain bin is excellent for storing seed corn or other seeds grown on the farm, and kept over from one season to another. The absence of moisture, freedom from rats, mice and birds will permit of the keeping of seeds so that their full germinating powers are not impaired. Where corn is kept for feeding to work animals, it has been the experience of farmers that the animals will eat more of the corn kept in metal bins than that kept in wooden corn cribs. Where the latter are used, it is practically impossible to keep rodents out, and their mere running back and forth through the corn imparts an odor and taste to the corn that is not liked by animals.

HEAVY COTTON YIELD IN THE PALO VERDE.

BLYTHE.—After several years of successful progress, the Palo Verde Valley may rightfully take its place among the California districts that have made good in agriculture. It is not so long since that section was almost unknown save to river trappers, watching their lines along the Colorado during the winter months, prospectors traveling in from the desert mountain ranges for supplies and a few homesteaders struggling to break through the heavy growth of mesquite that dotted the valley in close-grown patches.

The town of Blythe five years ago comprised a country store, postoffice and a few adobe houses. The stage came weekly from Blythe Junction on the railroad far across the desert. Then in 1916, in the face of the financial stringency brought about by the war, the California Southern Railroad was built to connect Blythe with the junction on the Sante Fe. Four years ago the first train pulled across the desert to Blythe and three years ago the farmers of the valley bonded their farms for $1,250,000 to construct a levee extending from the northern tip of the valley to the southern end where the bluffs join the river.

Inside the levee 22,000 acres of cotton are being picked this year. Seven cotton gins, three owned by the Cotton Growers' Association of the valley, are ginning. Estimates compiled by cotton authorities place the yield of the valley in cotton at approximately 22,000 bales. From 500 acres of cotton in 1915 to 23,000 in 1920 is the record of the Palo Verde, in addition to which 4000 acres of alfalfa are yielding their eight cuttings annually.

Short-staple and Durango cotton are the principal varieties grown in the valley, although there is about 500 acres of Pima this year. The Durango from the valley, according to authentic reports during a period of three years, has brought the highest premium paid on the cotton markets at Galveston. Short staple from the valley brings a regular premium over the prevailing market, according to high authority.

With the completion of the California Southern ten miles south of Blythe to the center of the valley, this year will witness the cultivation of over 5000 acres of new land in the section served by the new town of Ripley. Ripley was laid out early in 1920 as the terminal of the valley's railroad, terminal shops are under construction, two cotton gins are operating, a modern hotel will open in December. Over fifty miles of new ditches are under construction by the farmers' water company, which will serve the new tracts under preparation for crops in 1921. Across the Colorado River from Ripley, the Cibola Valley, recently purchased by the Southwest Cotton Company, is undergoing a change from a desert valley to a vast field of Pima long-staple cotton. Transportation will be carried on from the railroad through Ripley and a ferry to the Cibola.

In 1919 over $4,000,000 worth of cotton was shipped from the Palo Verde Valley to the cotton markets of the United States and England; in 1920, with a lower market and increased production, nearly the same amount will be realized.

HANDLING OF GREAT ORANGE CROP BEGUN.

REDLANDS.—The handling of the 1920-1921 crop of oranges in the south is well under way, according to C. P. Earley, manager for the Mutual Orange Distributors, with headquarters here. Mr. Earley says that the M. O. D., which ships about 98 per cent of the crop from the Salt River Valley of Arizona, has been rolling Arizona oranges East for some time. The first cars sold, being of navels, were for about $8 a box and it is believed that the whole crop, which will total 600 cars or more, will bring that price for an average. The Valencias which the company is shipping now are bringing a better price. The Mutual handles a large percentage of the Tulare and Porterville fruit, and A. M. Pratt, sales manager, has a big job ahead of him in that territory. The Arizona oranges come first. They are practically all out of the way when the Tulare district shipments begin.

There is to be a big crop in the north this year, but Mr. Pratt anticipates that the demand for California oranges will be keen enough to take care of heavy shipments so that practically all the northern navels can be out of the way when the southern crop begins to move toward the East. The local people will stay in the Tulare district altogether for about six weeks as the bulk of the crop is moved out in that time. Then they will return to the main offices in Redlands to begin the work of handling the Southern California navel crop shipped through the company. Picking of navels in some groves of the south has begun, but it will be some weeks before there is any movement of fruit. It is believed that California navels will command a good price at that time. There is every indication that the crop is to be one of the largest ever handled

LIVESTOCK BULLETIN.

BY R. T. LYANS.

Two shows of great interest to the breeder of pure-bred livestock have just come to a close. They were the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City, and the Pacific International Livestock Exposition at Portland. Several prominent Southern California breeders of Holstein cattle entered some of their choicest stock in one or both of these shows, and their winnings will be announced in the near future. The climax of all big shows, however, will take place during the week beginning November 27 and ending on December 4, when the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago will hold the boards. This is the show of shows, and a win there means much for the breeder. But the greatest feature of this show is the educational feature, for it is there that the standards are set for future breeding operations. Breeders from all parts of the world turn their attention to this event to get inspiration for further constructive breeding methods. Here is to be seen the finished product of breeding in the highest state of perfection. Were it not for this show, it would be impossible under present conditions to compare the different sections of our country from a pure-bred stock standpoint. Breeders generally are fully aware of this fact, and always manifest their approval by sending in their finest stock, and otherwise lending their hearty support.

We are often confronted with the question as to what breed of hogs or cattle or poultry to buy to make the most money. If this question could be answered with absolute and positive authority, it would be only a question of a short time when we would have only one breed of cattle, one of hogs and one of poultry. There is no best breed. With certain limitations, it might be said that such and such a breed is better in certain sections, under certain circumstances and environment, but a broad and sweeping statement which describes any breed as a best breed should be quickly cast aside or set down as coming from one who waxes over-enthusiastic at times. If a breeder is raising a certain breed of cattle and is making a good profit, and is perfectly satisfied with the particular breed he has chosen, then it can be said that that breed of cattle is the best breed for that man to raise. Another breeder has different ideas and he proceeds to develop those ideas by securing an entirely different breed and he, too, makes a profit and is satisfied with the breed chosen. Most assuredly that is the best breed for that man to raise. After all, it is not so much the breed as it is the man with the ideas who is trying to develop the breed to a higher state of perfection that really counts.

Miss Segis Pontiac Walker, the fine Holstein heifer which was purchased by Earl Graham of Compton at the Stalder dispersal sale on October 20 for $1700, has recently dropped a heifer calf for her new owner. We understand Mr. Graham's purchase is making a fine record as a junior 2-year-old. This wonderfully bred cow traces back to two noted sires, King of the Pontiacs, and Prince Bonnie Walker.

Time was when a stockman scoffed at the theorists as "tenderfeet" and theories as "tenderfoot ideas." Times have changed. Scratch your cow man of today (anywhere in California, at least,) and you will find a thinker; a man willing, even eager, to discuss theory or practice in the beef cattle industry. At the present moment one topic overshadows all others. It is the question of marketing. The war has left California and the other Western States with a serious problem—large stocks of cattle and no export market. Cattle brought to maturity through a period of high prices are now coming to market in a period of stagnation. This condition brought about the calling of the Salt Lake conference by the California Cattlemen's Association. This conference on December 6, 7 and 8 will endeavor to find an answer to the big question. The program of the State association for its annual convention on December 11 at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, has been shaped toward the same end. It will have the benefit of whatever is accomplished at Salt Lake City. Later the Salt Lake program will be submitted to the convention of the American National Livestock Association at El Paso for action by that body.

It has become a well-established fact that, when live stock is eliminated from the farm, the owner of that farm generally soon finds out that he is on the wrong track. Arizona farmers who sold out all their live stock and went into the raising of cotton exclusively had visions of great wealth in "dollar cotton," but it seems now that their hopes have been blasted, as cotton has become something of a drug on the market. If they had kept their live stock and planted only a portion of their holdings in cotton, they would now have something to fall back on, besides having maintained the fertility of their soil. If farmers could only be made to realize the importance of live stock raising, in connection with their general farming operations, it would not be long before such conditions as this would be eliminated. After all is said and done, it must be admitted that live stock is the real backbone of our agricultural wealth, and the sooner we come to this general conclusion, the better off will the country be.

The breeder of pure-bred hogs should not lose sight of the fact that the ultimate end of the offspring of even prize-winning sires and dams, or at least a large majority of these offspring, will go to the market for pork. With this end in view, the early maturing, economically produced and finished hog is the standard which should be used in swine-producing plants.

IMPERIAL COTTON SITUATION PUZZLING.

EL CENTRO—The cotton situation in Imperial Valley this year is uncertain. One of the largest acreages in the history of the valley was planted. Approximately 150,000 acres of which perhaps half is on this side of the international line, was seeded. This acreage was planted early, and bad weather compelled a large replanting. There was very little volunteer cotton this year.

The quality of this year's crop has been excellent, and the Imperial Valley Growers' Association arranged for the importation of 2000 Mexican cotton pickers to handle the picking. These pickers are now in the valley harvesting the crop.

Imperial Valley this year has tried, on a large scale, the growing of Pima Egyptian cotton. In the valley there have been 38,000 acres of Pima cotton planted. The larger portion of this acreage has been grown under contract with three concerns, all rubber companies manufacturing tires. Two of these entered the field on a major scale, the Goodyear Tire Company through its subsidiary, the Southwest Cotton Company, contracting for more than 15,000 acres, and the Fisk Rubber Company contracted for between 8000 and 10,000 acres. These contracts were all based on a guarantee of a minimum of 60 cents a pound for first grade Pima.

This cotton, as a whole, has not yielded as high as the average in the Nile Valley, but, considering that it is the first year that it has been grown in Imperial on an extensive scale, the results have been excellent. The growers have learned a lot through experience, and the yield in coming years should show a gratifying increase over that of this year.

The yield of short staple has been fully up to former Imperial Valley years, and valley yields are in excess of the average for the southern cotton States.

The thing which has depressed the cotton-growing industry has been the break in cotton prices. Imperial Valley ranchers this year grew their cotton from high-priced seed, with high-priced utensils and high-priced labor. Conservative growers in the valley estimate that it costs 28 cents per pound to raise cotton under present condition. Every cent that cotton drops costs the Imperial Valley growers nearly half a million dollars.

During the fall, the banks have come to the aid of the growers, and large numbers of growers are now holding their cotton in the expectation that the market will take an upward trend.

This acute cotton situation has had the effect of turning some of the cotton growers to the old Imperial Valley standby, alfalfa, and Horticultural Commissioner F. W. Waite reports that there is a great increase in the alfalfa acreage being planted.

The temporary demoralization of the cotton market is expected in the long run to have a beneficial effect on cotton growing in the Southwest. Lower prices for cotton are expected to force cotton growers into more intensive growing, thus producing a larger yield. There will be a decided reaction from present methods.

There is no question of the future of cotton in the Imperial Valley. Cotton will be grown there continually, and eventually all varieties will give way to Pima cotton, it is believed, because of the higher price which it brings. A temporary setback cannot in the long run dim the cotton future which this agricultural hothouse of America possesses.

Machine milking is on the increase on dairy farms of California.

ASSOCIATION TO HIRE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY.

Members of the Tractor and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California, at their last meeting, decided to employ an executive secretary who shall devote his entire time to the job of attending to the various affairs of the association. H. W. Nerney of the W. L. Hughson Company, who recently represented the association at the annual convention of the National Implement and Vehicle Association at Atlantic City, was present at the meeting and gave an interesting account of that event.

Thomas F. Osborne of B. Hayman Company is now in Chicago, a representative of the local association at the business meeting of the tractor and thresher division of the National Implement and Vehicle Association asking that the Pacific Coast associations have more of a voice in the government of affairs affecting dealers of California, Washington and Oregon. The officers of the N.I.V.A. are inclined to grant the petition of the Pacific Coast men as regards tractor shows and demonstrations, and have invited the associations to name a vice-president of the N.I.V.A. for the Pacific Coast. W. H. Gardner of San Francisco is the man agreed upon for this office by the Pacific Coast dealers.

The End of a Long Trip to Market.

W. W. Washburn, Tulare county farmer, and load of Mebane cotton he hauled from Alpaugh over the Ridge Route to Los Angeles, seeking prices to justify his outlay of time, labor and money made in growing the crop.

COTTON IS TRUCKED OVER RIDGE ROUTE.

W. W. Washburn, a farmer of the Alpaugh district, in Tulare county, probably holds the record for a long-distance haul of cotton to market. The San Joaquin Valley grower cranked up his small truck just before noon one day late in October and started with 2500 pounds of the fleecy product on a long trip to Los Angeles. He was accompanied by his daughter, Edna, who attends school in the southern city. He drove through Tejon Pass and over the Ridge Route, entering the San Fernando Valley the next afternoon, having camped in the open during the night. He reached Los Angeles in the evening and sold his cargo before dark.

Mr. Washburn was one of the many San Joaquin farmers who became interested in cotton this year. He made an extensive planting, putting out ninety acres of his 500-acre ranch to the crop. For the most part he planted Durango, although he put in several acres of Mebane. It was a load of the latter that he brought to Los Angeles.

He drove to the Pacific Coast metropolis with the cotton, he said, to get first-hand information on prices and prospects for marketing this side of the Tehachepi. He was offered $15 for seed at Bakersfield, he declared, as compared with the price of $29 prevailing in Los Angeles at the time he reached his destination. Ginners in his own home district were asking 60 cents a hundred pounds for ginning, he reported, as against 35 cents asked in Los Angeles. Sixteen to 18 cents was being offered for short staple cotton in Los Angeles at that date, more, he reported, than he could hope to get in his own immediate market zone. Furthermore, the Alpaugh man declared, truckers in his district were offering to bring cotton to Los Angeles $2.00 a ton cheaper than the rate quoted by the railroads.

grown cotton before, there was a considerable amount of pessimism about the result of the venture, but that distrust has now disappeared, as the results of the picking are becoming known.

On October 13 occurred the first frost. This frost was just severe enough to stop further growth of the plants, while at the same time it hastened the opening of the bolls. Usually the first frost does not appear in Perris Valley much if any before November, but it has apparently been demonstrated that even a frost as early as this year's need not worry the planter.

The fields of cotton planted this year in the Perris Valley vary from one to as high as 167 acres. Adelbert Danner of Nuevo planted three acres. His return may be one and a quarter bales pér acre, it is reported. His neighbor, Norman Walker, put in five acres, from which he is said to have obtained a bale and an eighth per acre.

North of Perris, Sam Johnson put in ten acres, which may go better than a bale to the acre. A. E. Kepnér & Sons have fifteen acres, which, they expect to run better than a bale to the acre, in the parts in which the stand is good. The Sierra Vista Ranch, owned by Peter B. Kyne and O. H. Cash, has thirty acres which, it is reported, will go a bale to the acre, beside ten acres, on sandy soil, on which the yield will be lighter. J. C. Phillips has forty acres, the larger part of which will show a good crop.

East of Perris, toward Coyote Pass, on old barley land, owned by Harford and Greenleaf, has been grown thirty acres of excellent cotton. Here, in spite of difficulties incident to starting a new pumping plant, the yield will run fully three-quarters of a bale to the acre, it is believed. The largest planting in the valley is that of the Midvale Farms Corporation, which has 167 acres in several different fields. Averaging their best fields with their worst, the yield for the entire planting will run better than three-quarters of a bale per acre, the growers state.

Taking the 1400 acres in the valley as a whole, and counting the failures as well as the successes, the average yield per acre this year will probably be one-half bale to the acre, reports indicate. Next year, with the increased experience of the various farmers, a yield far above the average for California is looked for by enthusiastic Perris people.

The cotton is being ginned and handled by the new gin of the Perris Valley Co-operative Cotton Growers' Association, at Perris. The association also has charge of picking excepting cases where the work is being done by the growers' own families.

A long period of warm nights in July and August matured a large proportion of bolls on ten acres of Durango cotton planted in the Corona section by Mann Brothers of La Sierra Heights. Four acres of Pima planted by the same growers about May 1 did not have time to fully mature. The Manns estimate they will have close to 1500 pounds of seed cotton to the acre. Ray Haddock of Orchard Heights planted Mebane, Durango and Pima on May 28. The Mebane and Durango made good headway, but would have done better if they had been planted earlier. Glen B. Watkins of Corona, with a small plot of the same three varieties, did not irrigate his cotton, but still believes he will have 1200 pounds of seed cotton to the acre. A well-cared for plt put of by John Grant, set a good crop, especially of Durango. Other Corona growers planting small cotton test plots included Phillips & Koons, and G. W. Williams. W. T. Eldridge of Wineville had a plot of Durango and Pima. J. R. Maxwell, Moreno, planted Pima and Durango, and W. L. Helwig of San Jacinto, the same varieties.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY.

Plantings at Fontana, Redlands, Ontario and Patton, and in the Mojave Desert, in Apple Valley, at Daggett and Adelanto comprise the experiments in San Bernardino county. Some of these were carried out by the farmers under the direction of the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau and others by individuals working alone.

The Fairbanks ranch, four miles west of Redlands, had approximately one-fourth of an acre planted to Pima, which has made an excellent growth. The plants are seven to eight feet high and with as many as 250 bolls per plant. This was planted May 25, and while it could have been put out earlier by a month, the plants are opening well. Four rows were pinched back after getting about four feet high, and it is interesting to note the large amount of wood growth as the result. While the crop has not produced the most favorable result possible, r. Harvey, the manager, is by no means discouraged, and next year may see some considerable acreage planted in his district.

It is interesting to compare the results obtained by the State Hospital plot, located three miles east of San Bernardino, where Mebane was grown, with that of the Pima on the Fairbanks ranch. Having the same care and being under practically the same weather conditions, this short staple variety, planted the same time, has been very much of a success. Three pickings have been made and with future pickings will run about one bale to the acre, it is expected. On this plot the soil carries some

FINE SEEDBED BEFORE HEAVIER RAINS MEANS MOISTURE SAVING.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

THERE is no question in the minds of thinking farmers but that a thoroughly prepared seedbed for row crops should be made before the coming of the heavy rains in order to conserve every drop of moisture in these days of moisture deficiency in the soil. But unless the farmer is equipped with mechanical power he is often unable to get his fields prepared before the "soakers" come. There is greater need for tractor power at this time for the row crop farmer than at any time of the year. The tractor-made seedbed is always earliest and best.

Most farmers understimate the existing moisture deficiency. It is a fact that in the soil below the first foot there is less than 60 per cent of the normal moisture in many fields, and only in sections favored by heavy rains last season is the moisture content of soils near normal. If there ever was a time when farmers were called upon to pray for rain it is now. But they should defer their supplications until they get in their seedbed, to check evaporation of the moisture as it falls.

It is a fact that summer work generally piles up onto fall work, so that there is increased demand for power at this time on farms where diversified farming is practiced. The farmer who has an orchard or an alfalfa field in addition to his grain, beet or bean crops has use for his teams in the orchard, dragging out brush and plowing, and in the alfalfa field, getting in the last cutting of hay. Thus we cannot well spare the horses for early plowing and pulverizing. Here is where the reserve power of the tractor is a valuable asset. While the horses are busy elsewhere, the tractor quickly prepares the seedbed for the row crops.

Rainfall is irregular and generally unexpected during the California winter. The early winter rains may be the heaviest of the season, or heavy precipitation may be deferred until March. It is better to be prepared and have the seedbed ready for the moisture. Plowed ground provides a deep container for the rain. If the farmer allows the rain to run off his unplowed ground, he is losing the most valuable thing he has in his soil. He will have a late crop, or will be unable to put in as much ground as he intended, because he defers this plowing. He suffers inconvenience and loss.

TRACTOR POINTS WAY.

It is only since the tractor has been perfected that farmers have fully appreciated this importance of early plowing. Now row crop farmers have learned that early preparation of the seedbed means money to them.

Within the last year observation and experiment have shown throughout the country that faster plowing speeds means a better seedbed. Hence tractors that were rated to plow two and one-fourth miles per hour in 1919, now are geared to do efficient plowing at three and one-fourth miles per hour. Thus the number of acres plowed in a day by the tractor has been moved up the column and a better seedbed the result of pulverization of the furrow-slice by the speed attained by the tractor is secured.

The number of acres plowed per day by one plow drawn by a tractor is thus much greater than the work done by the same plow drawn by horses. When the tractor draws two, three or four plows, the work done by horses is thus multiplied by the number of plows, when getting at the number of acres plowed by machines. One fourteen-inch plow drawn by a tractor should cover three and one-half acres in an ordinary working day of ten hours, where the average working speed is two and one-fourth miles per hour. Where the maximum plowing speed is used, as advocated this year by mechanical engineers, the number of acres plowed per ten hours with a fourteen-inch plow is about five acres. Then a two-plow machine should plow between seven and ten acres per day, and a ten-plow gang outfit from thirty-five to forty-five acres per day. However, where cotton stalks, bean straw and trash clog the gang plows, each plow drawn by the tractor will cover much less ground than that drawn by a smaller outfit, since the delays will naturally be in proportion to the number of plows pulled. A delay on account of one plow on a two-plow outfit stops only one other plow, while on a ten-plow rig, for example, it stops nine other plows. However, one accomplishes much more work with the gang outfits, even under such conditions.

DON'T OVERLOAD.

According to figures furnished by tractor owners in Central California, the area covered per working day of nine hours in plowing with tractors most commonly used is six acres for the two-plow outfit, eight acres for the three-plow equipment and nine and three-fourths acres for tractors drawing four plows. In this connection it should be mentioned that many tractor owners require their machines to pull one more plow than they are rated to pull, and as a result the outfit does not cover as much ground as would be covered by a machine built to handle a certain number of plows. Three plows behind a two-plow tractor will cover only a little more ground, as a rule, than will the two plows, because the tractor usually will travel a little slower, partly because the motor is overloaded and does not maintain its proper speed, and partly because the drive wheels will slip more than usual with a load heavier than the machine was designed to pull. As a consequence delays on account of small holes or slight grades will be more common, as will also mechanical difficulties.

If the barley or alfalfa planter can get in sev[illegible]res per day of seedbed with a tractor, instead of two or three acres with a horse team, he is not only getting his work done quicker [illegible] thus saving valuable time for other work, but is going to conserve moisture that cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents, and, in the case of alfalfa planting, will get in his seed while the sun is still in summer solstice, and will germinate his seed more rapidly. If he is going [illegible] beets or beans next year, and has no outfit that will plow eight acres per day, instead of two, he will be able to prepare a fine seedbed in advance of the soaking rains which may come at any time, where the slow-going horse team would be caught by the rains long before they had finished the plowing operation.

Many factors influence the draft of plows, whether the power is flesh and blood or [illegible] oil products. Among these are the [illegible]f plowing, the width of the plow, the character and moisture content of the soil, the obstructions encountered, the sharpness of the plowshare, the hitch and the speed. Few plows run at the same depth constantly. There is a continual variation of an inch or so. Often furrows side by side will show considerable difference in resistance, due to the natural difference of soil texture or to previous mechanical treatment of the soil. For instance, the furrow, including the wheel track of the tractor may show considerable difference in draft from that of a parallel furrow. Or more straw or other organic matter in the next furrow may make the plowing easier. Moisture has a decided influence upon draft. Farmers should realize that sharp shares have a great influence on the draft of the plow, as the velocity with which the furrow slice leaves the moldboard varies with the sharpness of the share. And high speeds are impracticable with abrupt moldboards. It has been generally suggested that with extremely high speeds special shapes would be required.

ALFALFA WEEVIL NEAR BY.

Live-stock growers, as well as alfalfa producers, are considerably exercised over the fact that the alfalfa weevil has been found in our bordering States, Nevada and Oregon. Not only does this pest inflict serious damage to growing alfalfa, but the quarantine incident to finding it in any locality often causes material losses. It develops that the inspectors who are guarding California from this and other pests are paid a maximum of $3.50 per day, which farmers

Why Pay Tribute to Togo? Grow a Patch of Your Own.

BY ARTHUR E. HENDERLEY.

NOT many years ago, strawberries were selling for 5 cents a box on the Los Angeles market. The other day they brought 24 cents a box. The reason—strawberry growing as a back-yard pastime has become almost obsolete, and the industry has fallen into the hands of the little brown men, who are charging all the traffic will possibly bear. The remedy—plant a strawberry patch, whether it be but five by ten feet, or five acres. Let's get the strawberry-growing business back into the hands of Americans and Southern California!

This is the most opportune time of the year to plant strawberries. If the plants are set now, and well cared for until spring, the planter will be rewarded with a crop in early summer, or, if he has the early varieties, in March or April. Nurserymen are offering a great variety of berries.

For the back yard, unless the family or the guest list is a large one, a patch twelve by twenty-four feet is enough. But the industry offers great promise to the commercial gardener. The farmer who has the available ground and water, and who can count on picking help from the members of his family, will find that there is plenty of profit in the culture of an acre of strawberries. But the planter must keep in mind that berries are a soft, perishable product, and must be handled gently and quickly on their way to market; they are shallow rooted, and easily injured by drought. But if it is properly managed, the small fruit garden can be made to yield large profits, often as soon as one year after planting. It is a crop which requires the personal attention of the planter, whether he be a back-yard gardener or a commercial grower.

Strawberry plants are bought by the hundred at the seed stores and plant nurseries, and the roots should be kept moist until they are in the ground. They may be planted at any time between November 15 and January 15, or even later, but best results are secured by planting them at this time, or in December. Plant the berries in a warm exposure if possible, as fruits which are set in this location usually ripen much earlier than those which are partially shaded during the day.

The strawberry seldom sends its roots to a depth greater than fourteen inches. The roots, on the contrary, are near the surface. Hence, the available moisture in the soil must be carefully investigated before planting unless the planter has irrigation water available at all times. At no time should the plant be allowed to wilt or show signs of drought. Lack of moisture is shown immediately by weakness of the new growth from the center of the plant. In sections where irrigation cannot be given every few days, the soil moisture must be conserved by frequent shallow cultivations. The plants are small, and set close together, and horse cultivation is almost impossible.

Strawberries do best on the clay loams, but are found growing with a large degree of success on the sandy loams. The berries are, as a rule, somewhat larger when grown on the heavier types of soils, provided the plants are not put out in adobe or soil of such a heavy character that it cannot be worked readily. Let not the gardener who has a sandy loam be deterred from planting, for he has ideal soil for working and conserving the moisture.

It is necessary to supply humus in the soil, if that desirable element is lacking. Therefore, spread stable or poultry manure over your patch, and work it in thoroughly before making your ridges. Make the ridges three feet apart, and plant the berries eighteen inches apart in the row. Some people practice level planting, setting the strawberry plants in a furrow, covering them, and irrigating them from another furrow. But the plants are better cared for when set on a ridge about fourteen inches across at the top, leaving a space for irrigating and for the picker to walk in, between the plants. Do not sprinkle the strawberries. They are best grown when the plants are kept altogether dry, and the moisture reaches them from the furrow by sub-irrigation.

The planter will find, by January, when he has set strawberries the last of November or the first of December, that the plants shoot forth nodes, which take root, and form new plants. When the roots become established in the ground, they can be separated from the parent plant and allowed to grow where they are, or they can be set in another furrow, where they will continue to send out nodes. Thus one plant is multiplied many times by spring.

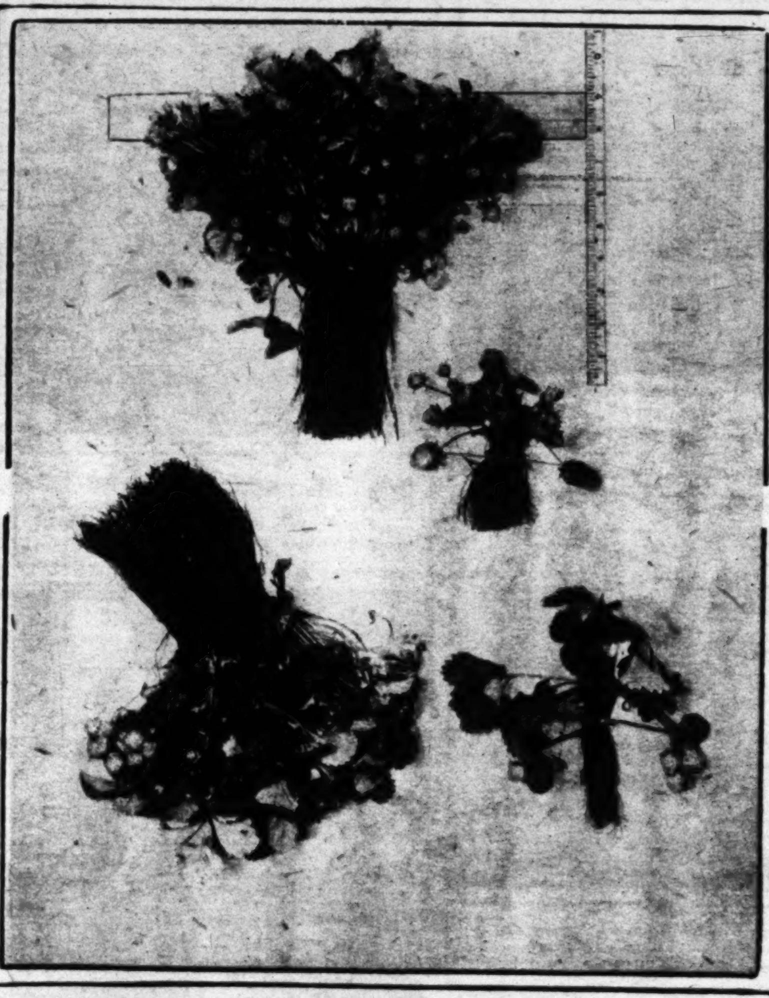
When the ridges, or long beds, are narrow, that is, about a foot wide, plants are set in a single row in the center of the bed, from ten to twenty inches apart, depending on the rate with which new runners are produced. Runners or offsets are allowed to take root in the row itself, and not to spread laterally, the aim being to maintain the width of the row at ten to twelve inches. Runners spreading laterally are either cut off, or are moved to the center of the row. Where the beds are wider, and the "matted row" is desired, the plants are set out in a double row, as above described, eighteen inches apart. The latter system is the one generally followed by home gardeners. The plants are then allowed to spread to the edge of the ridge, forming a mass in the center at the end of the first year.

Strawberries require greater care in planting than most plants. Accept only young plants, with light-colored roots, as the older plants, having dark brown roots, do not take hold readily, and often these plants die despite careful irrigation and cultivation. The plants must not be allowed to dry out during the planting operation, but should be wrapped in wet burlap or kept in pails of water while the planting operation is going on. The outside whorl of leaves should be removed when the plant is set out, leaving only two of the small center leaves. The plant must be set firmly at the same depth at which it had been growing. If it is planted too high, or the soil is not sufficiently firmed about the roots, the young plants will dry out and die. If they are set too low, and the crown of the plant is covered with moist soil, the plant quickly rots.

Shallow cultivation should always be practiced with strawberries, preferably with a hand tool, for the roots are very near the surface. Cultivation should be continued throughout the season to keep the plants thrifty.

Now as to varieties: The Klondyke and the Brandywine have always vied with one another for first place in the hearts of the growers, but now come two new varieties, the Carolina and Arizona Everbearing to compete with these two old favorites. The latter strawberry has not seemed to come up to expectations during the past two seasons. Though it thrives well in Arizona and in other desert sections, it does not seem to be so well adapted to the more humid regions near the Coast. The Klondyke is a vigorous grower, a fairly good plant maker, and ships well. It is the favorite with the market gardeners near Los Angeles. The Brandywine is not so large, but seems to be more prolific, and a little earlier than the Klondyke. The Carolina, introduced into Southern California by a Los Angeles seedsman, was tried out last year for the first time commercially, and has made a hit with the growers, as it is prolific, a good shipper and a good plant maker. Other varieties that have proven to be good in this section are the Oregon, the Marshall, the Jessie, the Malinda and the Gold Dollar.

Strawberries are set eighteen inches apart, on ridges, as shown in the picture. These are Lady Cornell berries, and show growth in Spring when planted in December.



Carolina strawberries, showing habit of bunching during the latter part of first year. Smaller plants show growth in Spring when planted in late fall.

Klondyke strawberries, probably the most popular market variety.

HEAVY RETURNS TO APPLE ORCHARDISTS.

YUCAIPA.—The returns to the growers of Yucaipa apples for this season will be the heaviest in the history of the valley. The crop has been light, but the growers have been receiving from 4 to 5 cents a pound for their fruit at the orchards. The picking is now practically all done. The crop has been light, but the fruit has been of good quality. The market has been so keen and the fruit in such good shape that it was possible to sell a good big portion of the crop loose, thus saving the cost of packing. A large quantity of apples has recently been placed in cold storage, due largely to the influx of Idaho apples, which caused a slight break in the demand and the market of the local product. The keeping qualities of the Yucaipa apples are so good, however, that it was found possible to place as much of the crop in cold storage as was desired.

The growers are anticipating as large a net return, and possibly larger, from their crop this year than from the heavy crop of last year. The smaller crop means less cost in handling and a better price. Practically all the fruit has been sold with one handling, for there has been but a small amount of it used for cider and for apple butter and canning. There has been a short crop in all apple-producing sections of the Coast and the market has stood at top notch all the season. Within another month the apple associations will be able to make complete reports to the growers.

The University of Arizona, College of Agriculture advises the planting of fruit trees in the southern half of the State during early winter, instead of in February and March, as they start growth better. Strawberry plants are being set out, with the winter root and leaf vegetables, the varieties of berries favored being the Arizona Everbearing, the Klondyke, Gandy and Early Ozark.

The Effort to Determine the Limits of the Cotton Grow

J. D. Radcliff and Durango cotton grown at Burbank; growth partially stopped by frost occurring on October

Picking Pima cotton in the Coachella Valley Growers are quite enthusiastic over the showing made by 400 acres of Egyptian cotton. There were 3000 acres of cotton grown in the valley in 1920.

pley, Palo Verde Valley. About 400 acres d in this Valley in 1920, with entire success. Durango and 12,500 acres of short staple

Well developed Pima plant, grown by C. O. Griffin of Lindsay, Tulare county. Most of the bolls opened before frost came.

Pima cotton on the Fairbanks Ranch near Redlands. Planted a month too late, and bolls did not open before frost put an end to growth. Mr. Fairbanks believes that, properly grown, cotton may be profitably produced in this district.

Bringing Home The Ba-Turkey

PLANT THESE BULBS NOW

Hyacinths

We have just received a splendid lot of first size bulbs direct from Holland. Now is the time to plant for early Spring blooming. Plant them in the open ground in your garden or in pots for interior decoration.

GRAND MAITRE—A delightful shade of clear porcelain blue.

YELLOW HAMMER—The best of the single yellows.

GRANDEUR A'MERVILLE — Enormous spikes. In color an exquisite tint of blush white.

GERTRUDE—A splendid shade of bright rose pink. Compact trusses.

QUEEN OF THE PINKS—An elegant shade of pure pink. Produces extra large spikes of bloom.

MARIE—Handsome deep blue.

MORENO—Delicate rosy red.

KING OF THE BLUES—One of the best pure blues.

PRICE of any of the above, extra strong, first size stock—Each 20c; Per dozen $2.00. Six at dozen rates. If wanted by parcel post add one cent extra for each bulb.

Chinese Sacred Lily

This handsome Polyanthus Narcissus, commonly known as the Chinese Sacred Lily, is one of the most useful of all the types. It is usually raised in bowls with rocks to hold the bulbs in position and half full of water. Under this method of treatment they can be grown in an ordinary living-room, where they blossom freely, the flowers being pure white with yellow cup.

We have just received an importation direct from China of extra fine large bulbs. A bowl or two of these with five or six bulbs to the bowl will give you an abundance of flowers during mid-winter.

Each 25c. Per Doz $2.50.
If wanted by mail add 1c per bulb extra.

Darwin Tulips

Of all species of Tulips this is unquestionably the premier class. Stems twenty to thirty inches long, flowers enormous in size, colors superb.

CLARA BUTT—A clear soft shade of rosy salmon pink.

MAD. KRELAGE—Bright lilac rose, margined pale silvery rose, interior of bloom soft rosy pink.

PRIDE OF HAARLEM—Bright rose suffused with purple. Extra large.

EUROPE—Glorious salmon scarlet with shadings of rose.

FARNSCUMB SANDERS—Pure rosy scarlet. Interior of flower vivid cerise scarlet with white center and blue markings. Extra choice.

GLOW—Dazzling vermillion scarlet. Center white with blue margin.

GRETCHEN—Pale silvery rose and blush white. Interior of bloom soft pink with white center marked with blue.

BARRONE DE LA TONNAYE—Bright rose margined blush rose. Flower of immense size.

REV. EWBANK—Vivid heliotrope and lilac tinted lighter at margins of flower.

GESNERIANA SPATHULATA—Rich crimson scarlet with intense black blotches at center of bloom.

GESNERIANA LUTEA—Stems extra long. Color clear rich yellow.

PRICE of any of the foregoing Tulips—Each 10c; Per Doz. $1.00. If wanted by parcel post add 5c per dozen extra.

NOTE—Bear in mind that the above bulbs are all first size, extra selected stock and are not in any sense to be compared to second sizes which are often offered.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION IN THE WEST.

BY H. FENDLER.

"East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."—[Kipling.

IS IT the fault of college or the fault of the man that your average upperclassman in the most representative eastern university is affected, snobbish, conceited and has a false idea of what constitutes gentlemanly culture?

I am an upperclassman working my way through the most representative university of the West, along with several hundred other young men and women who are making the major part of their expenses—and I don't feel that my morals are poorer, my character impaired, or my reputation ruined, because I have "hashed" waited on table for two hours a day since my entrance into college.

It may be true that your average college man can only dance, swim, paddle a canoe, play some musical instrument, and drive an automobile with one hand—and that when he tries to get work in the summer time he is lucky to land a job as errand boy at $18 per week.

But how many college boys do you know, or of whom you have heard, who are "riding a caterpillar," working in the shipyards or lumber camps, acting as rangers in the National Park Service or Forest Reserve, soliciting for national publications, or laboring ten or fourteen hours a day on the farm?

If college was merely having a good time, do you honestly believe that thousands would be enrolled in summer sessions throughout the country, when summer school means hot, intensive work and good times are extremely rare?

Of course, there are many going to college because they have nothing else to do, or because their folks are insisting upon it, or because they really are looking for nothing but a good time. However there are many more who have some definite purpose in mind, such as special training in law, medicine, or engineering, or merely a better preparation for some business.

A university is a small world in itself, and the man who is working his way through has just as many problems to face as the man who is just starting in business: both must manage to make both ends meet. As a matter of fact, the man who is working his way, rather than being looked down upon, is placed upon a pedestal. He is elected to class office, bid to dances, included in all parties, and is helped by everyone.

Such positions as editor or manager of the daily newspaper or "annual" are invariably given to men who need the several hundred dollars paid by the publication. Many fellows are getting ads; corresponding with their home newspapers; playing musical instruments, not to keep the neighborhood awake, but because they are receiving $2.50 per hour to play at dances.

Although it may be the fashion in the East to wear "soft collars, attached, oxfords the year round, and a loosely tailored sack coat with a vest of corduroy," your western college man wears a flannel shirt, corduroy pants and the oldest shoes, tie and hat that he can find.

And now let us examine our college types: First, the "grind." My best friend must properly be called a grind. At least, he studies until 1 and 2 o'clock every morning, has practically all "A's," and is sure of making Phi Beta Kappa. And yet he is president of one of the largest organizations on the campus, has debated three times on the varsity, is recognized and admired by professors and students alike as having one of the keenest minds in the university, and has more real friends than anyone else on the campus. And in addition he is on the varsity wrestling squad. "Pity the Poor Grind"—Perhaps!

Second, the "athlete"—my room-mate last year won his freshman numerals in practically all sports. Sometimes in the near future you may read of a lad that has won the "football classic of the West" by a drop-kick from the fifty-three yard line—and if you do, you'll know who I am talking about. And this typical college athlete, an engineering major, studied three hours per day each on calculus, physics and chemistry at the same time he was out for football.

He had promised to let me use his bedclothes one night after I had expressed mine south, and he had been called home. I came into our room after a 1 o'clock dance and found him unexpectedly returned, stretched out on his bare mattress with a face-towel and an overcoat thrown over him—and my bed made with his blankets!

"How many fathers are going to send their sons out to soak up this kind of ideals and this kind of culture?"

If a man is just coming to college for a good time, he isn't wanted; and the sooner he learns it, the better, I don't mean to say that you can't have a good time because you most certainly can—and do—but I do say that unless a man has some more definite purpose in mind than just enjoying himself for four years, he had better stay away.

Exactly one hundred students were "flunked out" after eleven weeks of a good time last year, and two hundred were put on probation. Although several did just get by with little or no work, the large majority studied and studied hard—they had to.

A university does not pretend to make Solomons of its students. What it does try to do is to train their minds to think more quickly, more accurately, more logically; to give special training where required and to graduate well-rounded men and women into an enlightened American citizenship.

CASA GRANDE RUINS.

races, etc., suggestive of a highly civilized race of builders. The main building that is now standing is three sto.... high and contains eleven rooms. It is in a fair state of preservation. As a precaution against further damage by the elements a metal roof has been erected over it.

The walls of the building are made of caliche mud, much as a reinforced concrete wall is made today. Instead of twisted steel for supports in the construction of wall, those early builders used juniper poles. The ceilings and floors of the upper stories were made by imbedding these juniper poles in the walls and covering them with grass and a thick layer of mud. The interior of the building was at one time burned out, but the charred ends of the poles may be seen in the walls today. The interior of the rooms seem to have been plastered by hand as finger prints may be traced here and there upon the walls.

The doorways suggest, at first thought, a race of Pygmies. Their dimensions are only two feet wide and three feet high. Archaeologists claim that the doorways were evidently made small for defensive purposes, as only one enemy could enter at a time, and in a stooped position at that. This would make it an easy matter to tap him on the head with a club or stone ax as he entered the doorway.

Full-sized human skeletons have been exhumed within the confines of the city. A variety of articles have also been unearthed that would lead one to believe the inhabitants were skilled in the art of pottery, of agriculture, etc. The remains of some old irrigation canals leading from the Gila River about ten miles away have also been found, and these are believed to have been built by the prehistoric inhabitants of this city. While the most known about the builders of this city is mere conjecture, of one thing we can be certain—that is, that they were a people more highly civilized than the Indians living in that vicinity when the first missionaries came among them.

I shall never forget my first glimpses of those ruins. The sun was just sinking in a blaze of glorious coloring. I had driven over by team from Toltec, a distance of eighteen miles, and was weary from the heat of a desert day and the monotony of the scenery along the way. Making a turn in the road I came in sight of the ruins standing out against the desert background. As I drew nearer and nearer to them the rays of the setting sun were reflected upon them, painting them a golden hue. What a picture for an artist to catch upon his canvas!

As I stood there revelling in the picture before me, many thoughts came into my mind. I just wondered how many times had the selfsame sun set upon these ancient ruins; what strange race of people was it that had builded so well that their handiwork had outlived all trace and vestige of the builders; what strange misfortune had wiped out this race of people and left standing this crude monument to their credit? No doubt these same questions have arisen in the mind of many another pilgrim to this ancient shrine. But all these questions remain unanswered—as deep a riddle as the Sphinx.

We made camp that night in the shadow of the walls just outside the city gate. It was like camping on holy ground. Who knows but that these walls were built before those around the Holy City of Palestine. Later, a full moon came up and another entrancing picture stood before my eyes. The changing among the crumbling walls, deserted corridors, silent rooms as the night grew old made the place take on a ghastly aspect. One could easily imagine a Hamlet and his accompanying ghosts and grave diggers. A howling coyote near by added to the weirdness of the scene. Save for this sound, all was as still about the Great House as about a tomb.

CHARM OF CHOCOLATE.

most important items in the concentrated menu of those who seek their fame or fortunes in the lands of ice and snow.

A word as to the vanilla with which chocolate is so often flavored. Few people know that this is the product of the only orchid that is of any economic value. It grows from the ground and climbs up the stem of shady trees. Its clusters of green orchids have each to be fertilized by hand. When the beans are ripe the pods are picked, plunged into hot water and dried in the sun. They are then subjected to a daily "stroking" by the supple fingers of an Indian, till the crystals gather thick on the outside. Much of the essence on the market is synthetic.

THE THIEF.

known. Then, the day she was out, he put all the things in her box, and having already planned the fire, took a handkercher and a letter. The devil never put an easier job into the mind of a mad man. And when she'd gone, everything was ripe for the wheat stacks. He set a light to them himself and went to bed, and when all had gone to rest after the fire, he crept down again and put the letter he'd half burned and the handkercher where they must be found after. And everything fell out exactly as he had ordained.

But then he had to pay the devil's wages, and after three months of tidy torment, with the thought of his ruined life and that girl in prison, he began to wish he was dead. In truth he thought to slay himself, and if he had, without confessing, the wrong would have gone hidden till the Trump; but that's where Providence took up the running, and it was mercifully put in his heart to own up and take the consequences. Somebody had to pay, of course, but 'tis the way of great evils that often the innocent be called to suffer worse than the guilty. It killed his mother. She wilted away like a gathered flower, and died six months after. By then young Tom was in Canada, for he left England immediate and was away almost before the full size of the truth came to be known. He wanted to go to prison, I believe; but his father sent him to Canada instead: and Joanna and her mother never did anything against him, though they well might, 'twas thought in law.

Joanna, however, decided that she wasn't much surprised to hear the bitter truth. She knew before the end that the man hated her with a deadly hatred, and when she was asked why she never told about him persecuting her for love, or tried to make a case against him for her own good name's sake, she explained that like the simple creature she was.

"Father always told me that if a man offered marriage and I didn't take him, I must never mention the subject, or name the man's name, out of honor and fairness to him," she said, "and whatever father told me to do, I always did do."

That was Joanna; and when she came out of prison, a generous government only said she was dismissed without a stain on her character, but never offered a penny piece for all she'd been called to endure. Governments never got no spare money when 'tis only a question of their honor. That never troubles 'em. But the nation's a thought higher minded than the government, thank God, and a very tidy purse comed along afore the girl took her sailor. And such a wedding she had at Ashburton as would have done credit to a royal princess.

In the Pastoral Line.

AUTUMN is here. Not, indeed, the autumn of the old eastern homeland, which conveyed a sense of something completed, a day's work well and truly done and Dame Nature therefore free to doff her outer garments, wrap herself in draperies of snow and enter into rest.

But a California autumn carries a hint of expectancy in its serene calmness. A change has in truth come over things, yet nature, with an occasional gusty sigh for departed summer, is nevertheless "sitting up and taking notice" that something good is traversing the aerial course and daily drawing nearer. But as the shortening days pass a restless craving ruffles her calmness. This State—in which hope alternates with longing—has been translated into mortal tongue by Eliza A. Otis in certain stanzas of "California Where Sets the Sun." Her poignant lines might well be taken as those of the Spirit of the Valleys entreating the Spirit of the Floods to send the longed for rains on a parched and thirsty soil teeming with life held in abeyance until the coming of the waters.

Only the nature poet can at once realize and express this impalpable urge, "The substance of things hoped for." Such a one must not only love the out-of-door world, but must also in a sense identify himself with nature and feel that he is her accredited voice dedicated to the task of sacred vows. It is this attitude that makes Drinkwater's poems so appealing and delightful, and it is the lack of it that one regrets in the beloved martyr-poet, Joyce Kilmer, who was once so "left to himself" as to sing:

> "Poems are made by fools like me,
> But only God could make a tree."

As if the being who can give a voice to inarticulate nature, who can interpret the meaning of visible creation, and put in words the choral song of hill and vale, tree and stream, were not himself "a creator in the finite."

A seer has said that "The happiest man is he who learns from nature the worship of Spirit." Joyce Kilmer has learned that lesson. But he might have known a sweeter and more self-abnegating happiness had he realized that by means of a poet's musical and appealing speech, less gifted man may come to share this knowledge. To break the bread of life and distribute it to the multitude is a high task which no man ought to belittle.

In addition to his mission as one who sees more clearly and more deeply than his fellows and can open the eyes to new prospects he can also cheer the hearts of men of his own nature, who feel and know all that he does, but are unable to give fitting or adequate, expression to their thoughts and emotions. To these he seems a liberating angel in whose utterance "they hear their own native language for the first time—and leap to hear it."

Those Who Ride Alone.

LAST evering as I was being carried home to dinner in another fellow's automobile, I faced the rising moon, a big golden globe waving before me, while on the other hand was a sky of blue, green, pale rose and yellow. The stern, brown hills were draped in veils of palest lavender, and the air was sweet as that of June. The owner and driver of the vehicle rolling so smoothly along the highway was careful and troubled about many things. For instance he murmured something that was somewhat like, and yet unlike unto a vessel in a submarine zone in the war time. truck with a trailer which zigzagged in front of us, like unto a vessel in a submarine zone in the wartime. Then as we neared a railway crossing, he craned his neck to right and left like a woodpecker seeking a good boring place. But not a wave of trouble rolled across the peaceful breast of his guest, who had opportunity at leisure to enjoy the panorama of the rising moon, the sky and hills. Wherefore I believe the sage was mistaken who said that it is better to break your bones traveling a rough road on foot than to ride at ease in your neighbor's coach, thus putting yourself in his debt. But that would deprive your neighbor of the pleasure of acting as gracious host and guardian, which he doubtless enjoys being. If he admires me sufficiently to burn gasoline in my honor, that is his affair. Do I not reward him with praise and thanksgiving and alse afford him an opportunity of acquiring merit in the eyes of an observant world? May the day be far distant when he becomes a candidate for public office. But if such an undeserved calamity ever overtakes him his beneficiaries will see to it that his political banner bears the unique device: "He never rode alone, even during the gasoline shortage." To ride alone. To the man of porcine nature there is doubtless a surly sweetness in this condition of life. But sometimes high-minded and unselfish men, when placed in positions of responsibility, are fated by their very talent and probity, their superior mental capacity and moral insight, to ride alone.

They are guiding a vehicle freighted with precious things over a road filled with pitfalls which men of ordinary vision cannot even discern, much less avoid, and their sense of duty will neither allow them to surrender the steering wheel nor share the driver's seat with anyone. Certainly their lives are not easy or pleasant, especially as they are likely to be constantly pelted with mud balls and brick bats throughout the journey, since almost any jealous fool can wield such weapons. Think of Lincoln, for example, with only one man of anything like equal capacity near him and that one despising and disliking him, and marveling always that the nation should not have recognized his own superior merits. "To be great is to be misunderstood." Shall we therefore be thankful for our innocuous asininity?

A PRAYER FOR RAIN.

Soft-footed as the stars the sunshine steals
About us here—the hushed breeze yields
To the faint touch of silence, and a-dream
It lies upon the breast of flow'rs which lean
Beside the fair lake's breast, as if to see
The wonders of their being's mystery.

The cloud lies black, the shining blue within,
With ragged edge and long arm furrowing
The fields of space, as if 'twere striving there
To find some lurking tempest, hidden where
The rains are loitering, while the earth lies dumb,
Tortured with thirst for rains which do not come.

O Father, hear us! Let the deeps of sky,
Touched by Thy power, lift their great floodgates high;
Let the vast cisterns of the storm be filled
And Thy warm rains upon our earth be spilled;
Let Thy rich harvests smile upon the plain,
While plenty walks through all our land again.

ELIZA A. OTIS.

Feathered Pests.

IF ST. ANTHONY ever again is sent on a mission to earth I hope he will preach to the birds instead of the comparatively sinless fishes. These feathered wretches set the laws of economic conservation at naught more than do any other created beings, for they take but one peck at a peach or pear, and then greedily attack another and another. Out of twenty "lug" boxes of peaches on my garden trees more than twelve boxes were tasted and deserted. My single apricot tree bore about two "lugs" of fruit and I did not gather one quart. By spending the larger part of each day under my fig tree and laming my right arm throwing clods into its recesses I harvested, say one-third, of the fruit. As fast as my apples developed a rosy cheek that cheek was smitten. As for the berries, I surrendered them without a struggle to the scolding, thieving crew, who neither planted, watered, cultivated, nor paid taxes. They have evidently been converted to vegetarianism, or rather fruitianism, by Harry Brook's eloquent exordiums, for they never cast a glance at grub or caterpillar during the fruit season, though they stoop to puncture my cantaloupes.

Why, pray, should the law forbid me to advocate "direct action" and protect the birds in practicing that simple rule of life. Why not restore legal equality by protecting me from the birds alternate seasons? Am I or am I not of as much value as linnets, catbirds, etcetera? To be sure I do not go out in the garden and eat worms, but I solemnly swear that these enemies of mankind also refrain from so doing during the deciduous fruit season, which in this valley lasts for many months.

I never before appreciated the canniness of the orange, which caused it to encase its seeds and pulp in a leatherlike case. Would that the other fruits had been equally wise and wary!

It was my lot in childhood to know the chief of a tribe of Indians who lived near Niagara. He was educated both in white and red fashion and in his old age was much occupied with committing to paper the lore of his people.

On one occasion he told me, in the course of a talk on birds, that for many years the Chief Medicine Man of his tribe owned a magic whistle given to one of them by the tutelary spirit of the feathered race, as a reward for carrying the birds through a phenomenally hard winter by daily placing food for them in various places. This whistle was to be used to call the birds to repentance and reformation whenever they became unduly predatory.

The chief sadly added that the Medicine Man in charge of the whistle fifty years earlier had been killed during a raid of white roughs from Fort Erie, and all valuables, including the whistle, stolen from his august person. If the descendants of those thieves now wish to atone for the sins of their ancestors they will kindly forward that whistle to California, where it will be attached to an electric motor and blown steadily for at least a Pythagorean lustrum, Opportunity not Gratuity.

SIX feet of stalwart young humanity, topped by a head covered with dark waving hair and ornamented with a pair of merry hazel eyes, this moment appeared in my doorway and inquired whether he might borrow my garden rake. "The fact is," he explained, "our neighbor, Mrs. Maydew, wishes to employ someone to trim her shrubbery. Now I learned how to cultivate plants from the French family on whom I was quartered for some time while across seas with the A.E.F. They were gardeners, and while I was waiting for this gash in my face to heal—pointing to a wicked-looking scar traversing one cheek—I helped the old grand-dad and the women of the family with their gardening. Now that I am for the time being unable to find such a place as I desire, I propose to pay my way by using tahe skill I acquired by helping my French hosts."

Of course I would not wish him to permanently enter into competition with a lot of Japanese peasants. But until he finds something that will develop and employ all his talents I am proud to see him emulating Father Adam, rather than see him living off—or on—his by no means wealthy parents. His present plight certainly brings home to us the disadvantages of the high school lads who enlisted before or directly after graduation and are now entering the business world on no better basis than that of boys two or three years their junior. They have too much general experience and are too mature to wish to be office boys and not sufficient specialized knowledge to fit them for more responsible places. If your surname was Rockefeller what plan would you devise and put into operation for their training? The nation is doing much for the physically unfit, but do we not owe some care to these also? It would help them little or not at all to give each a small sum of money: What about the Maxwell plan, thus making practical engineers of them by employing them on big State and national reclamation projects and by granting franchises to private corporations doing such work only on condition that they employ and train this class. Such youths as the one here referred to don't want largess, but development in themselves of that spiritualized strength which we call skill, in one or another direction.

They are the salt of the nation, the most valuable of all our products—always excepting their sisters—and must be cherished accordingly. Mr. Tumulty's recent account of the pain felt by our President when Congress cheered the reading of his war message—"because war means that many of our boys must die"—proves that he not only recognized their personal worth but also their value as a national asset. Let us all therefore prove our grief for the dead, not by bestowing gratuities, not in any way coddling the living, but by seeing to it that they have opportunity to make the most and the best of themselves

Why the Elect?

THE peripatetic gardener who cares for the lawns and gardens in this neck o' mountains has just trimmed the shrubbery about our cot "to the home." The growth of the past season has been riotous beyond reason, and it was necessary to reduce it to something approaching order. But oh, how bereft and half-clad the porches and pergolas appear, and how sad it is to look upon the heaps of wistaria, jasmine, honeysuckle, ragged robin and geranium. It seems a great waste of effort on the part of the plant, which brought forth so much for naught. How are the roots from which all this needless verdure sprang to be taught the regulation of growth in accord with the allotted space? Here's a nut for philosophic gardeners of the positivistic school to crack at their convenience.

Of course it is easy to say that these surplus boughs, sprays and leaves are not really lost, because if added to the compost heap "fornent" the poultry yard, they will gradually return to their original elements and at the long last fertilize and strengthen the roots from which they came at first. But why should one branch be elected to honor by being carefully trained about the front entrance while its equally well-favored brother is cut off untimely and thrown to dishonor on the unsavory bed of poultry yard sweepings?

Some philosophers would tell us that every created thing must take its turn on the compost heap, or in sweeter phrase, "Every man must eat of every apple once." And certain of our poets have also chanted after this manner:

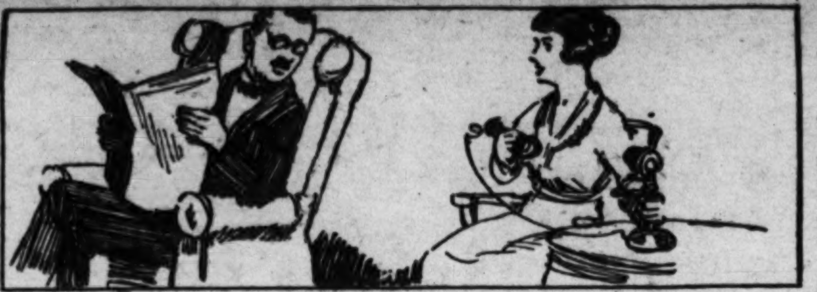
> "Oh why should I keep holiday
> When other men have none?
> Because when they were free to play
> I worked and wept alone."

If anyone has a more satisfactory explanation let him whisper into the ink-dyed auditory orifice of the Times Illustrated Magazine editor, who is, or ought to be, a first cousin to Job. Was it not to qualify him for such lofty kinship that Fate made him an editor?

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

Warren Refuses to Invest in a Dubious Proposition Promoted by a Friend.



"IT'S THE Burnhams—they're downstairs!" dismayed Helen, her hand over the receiver. "They want to know if it's too late to call."

"After 9!" Warren scowled at his watch. "They've got a nerve to butt in at this hour."

"But they're here—we'll have to see them!" Then into the telephone, "Oh, yes, it's quite all right. Ask them to come up."

"Confounded nuisance!" growled Warren, flinging down the evening paper.

"Put on your coat! That old smoking jacket's a sight. Quick. You'll have to receive them. I'll be out in a few minutes."

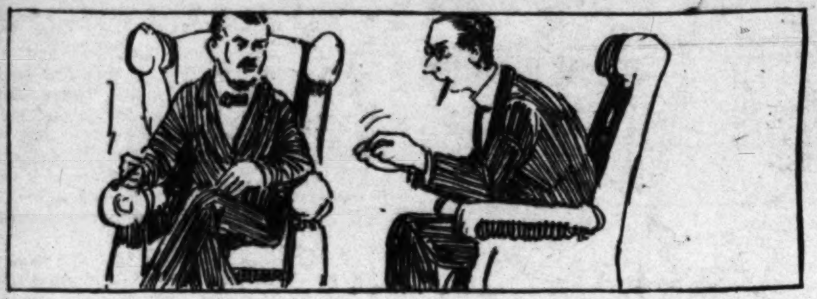
"Hold on, you look good enough. Don't go dolling up for them!"

But Helen had darted into her own room. From her closet she snatched an easy-to-get-into blue taffeta and began dressing with nervous haste.

As usual the maid was out, having promptly escaped after she had washed the dinner dishes. Any chance callers they had to receive themselves.

The door bell! Warren's tread through the hall. Then voices. Mrs. Burnham's shrill treble held an apologetic note.

Something had gone wrong with their steering gear and delayed them half an hour. She was still volubly explaining when Helen entered.



"I told George it was too late—but he insisted on phoning up."

"I'm so glad you did," lied Helen, politely. "Why, it isn't late."

"Well, this won't happen again. We're going to junk that tin Lizzie and get a real car," announced Mr. Burnham importantly.

"Two, aren't we?" glowed Mrs. Burnham. "You said I might have a sedan."

"What's the idea? Put in a rotary press for printing off ten spots?" grinned Warren.

"Well, not exactly, but I'm in on something that's about as easy."

"Is that window too much on you?" asked Helen solicitously. "It's right on your back."

"Not at all. I hadn't noticed it. Yes, I've struck something that's going to put us on Easy street."

"Mighty glad to hear it. Have a cigar?" Warren took out a box.

"Thanks. Yes, this is my last year with Baker and Gibbs. I'm going to open up an office of my own."

"That's a good move," commended Warren. "Nothing like your own peanut stand."

"Just what I told him," enthused Mrs. Burnham. "He's been working for other people long enough. It's time he started out for himself. We were looking at offices in the Equity Building yesterday—a wonderful suite on the seventeenth floor."

"Well, these are pretty uncertain times. Better start conservatively," advised Warren. "You don't want to sink all your dough in office rent."

"Oh, that'll be a small item," with an opulent shrug. "I've got a proposition that'll net me twenty thousand within two months. That's conservative—it'll be nearer thirty."

"Ought to be able to rub along on that for a few weeks," grinned Warren.

"And it's a dead certainty. None of your fly-by-night schemes. Any way you figure it—I can't lose."

"Good!" Warren reached for the ash tray.

"Now, I'll tell you just what it is—you can figure it out yourself. A crowd in Wall street are out after control of a little trolley line in Ohio. Got to have it as a link in a big scheme. They've had feelers out and picked up some of the stock—but haven't been able to land any big block."

He paused to light his cigar. Then leaning back, resumed impressively,

"The man who's handling this came from that part of Ohio and knows the two biggest stockholders. One's the widow of the builder of the road—the other's a mean old cuss who got his stock as collateral on a loan. Neither are wise to the game, and with the increased cost of operation they want to sell. We can swing it with fifty thousand. We're making up a pool of ten—five thousand each."

"Sounds all right," admitted Warren cautiously. "What's the name of this buzz line?"

"I can't tell you that yet. No one not in the pool is to know. For all our sakes we can't afford to have it leak out."

"I see," was Warren's noncommittal comment.

"Now, Curtis, I think a lot of you," confidentially. "I'm going to let you in on the ground floor."

"Little out of my line, I'm afraid."

"Not out of your line to make twenty thousand on a five thousand investment, is it?"

"Well, I don't believe I care to touch it."

"Why, it's a chance of a lifetime! We can squeeze them—get our own price—and make a quick clean-up."

"Possibly you can, but I'd rather not go in."

"Why, man, you're crazy! It's like getting money in a letter! You can't lose—and you stand to make up to thirty thousand."

"Sorry, Burnham, nothing doing here," with sharp finality.

"But you've got to! As a matter of fact, I felt so sure of you that I put your name down this afternoon."

"The devil you did!"

"Yes, and I was doing you a mighty big favor. Thought you'd snap at it. I know a dozen men who'd be glad to get in on this—but I've always felt friendly toward you and I wanted—"

"Much obliged," curtly. "But you'll have to count me out."

"I tell you you're already in! I put you down this afternoon."

"Now see here, Burnham, when I say 'no' I mean it. You take my name off that list the first thing in the morning. You seem to think it's all right—but you needn't be so blamed insistent about me coming in."

"Well, how about splitting your share? Make it twenty-five hundred. Surely you'll put up that much on a dead certainty? I can get some one to take the other twenty-five."

"You can get some one to take it all! If you want the truth—you were pretty nervy to use my name. I'll not put one penny into this or any other blind pool scheme. That's final."

"Oh, well, of course if you take it like that. It's rather tough when I thought I was doing you a favor."

Though keeping up a running conversation with Mrs. Burnham, Helen had been listening apprehensively. And now she was quick to relieve the awkward pause that followed.

"I do want you to try some of my grapefruit cordial. I made it myself and I'm really very proud of it."

"Oh, please don't trouble," protested Mr. Burnham coldly. "It's getting late—I think we'd better go."

"Not until you've had some of my cordial," eager to make up for Warren's possible rudeness.

Hurriedly she brought in the tray with the old Bohemian decanter and the crystal glasses used only for state occasions.

They both praised the cordial and marveled that it was homemade. But its mild glow was not sufficiently alcoholic to dispel the chill constraint that was over them all.

An uncomfortable fifteen minutes and Mr. Burnham again rose to go. This time Helen made no effort to detain them.

Out in the hall, the wait for the elevator was painfully awkward.

Always nervously sacrificing herself to bridge an embarrassing silence, Helen started on a rambling dissertation about the poor service and the constant changing of hall boys.

"We've enjoyed seeing you so much," was her parting effusion when the car finally reached their floor.

"Good night. That cordial was delicious—a real treat," Mrs. Burnham was also trying to cover her husband's unresponsiveness.

Back in the library, Warren bit off the end of a fresh cigar with a savage,

"Well, what d'you know about that? The nerve of him putting up a blind pool proposition to me!"

"But, dear, it did sound all right," with feminine weakness for a big-return investment. "Perhaps there is money in it."

"You bet there is—for the gink who framed it up," reaching for the matches. "Widow of the builder and the mean old cuss who held the stock! Those two puppets had whiskers before the flood."

"You mean they don't hold the stock?" puzzled Helen, rescuing a cordial glass from its dangerous proximity to his elbow.

"How d'you know there's any stock to hold? A trolley line in Ohio! Sounds like a silver mine in Honolulu! And they won't give the name or place. Huh, he must've thought I was ripe for plucking to fall for that."

"But surely he wouldn't want you to go in unless he thought it was good," pouring back her glass of the precious cordial which she had economically saved.

"Don't know about that. I never could quite make out where Burnham gets all the money they spend. Still, he's a fairly decent sort. Let's hope he's only one of the suckers."

"But, dear, you were awfully rude. You needn't have been so curt."

"Tried to let him down easy, but he was so blamed insistent. And to use my name without consulting me. Talk about your brass-bound nerve!"

"Yes, I was surprised at that. But he seemed to think it was such a sure thing. Dear, it must be all right! He's talking of getting two cars and taking offices in the Equity Building!"

"Well, if he's helped to frame this up, if he's pulling off a crooked deal—he may sport around for a while. But if he's just a sucker going in on a blind pool—he'd better keep his tin Lizzie and hold on to his job. He'll find they'll both come in mighty handy!"

A Woman of Tomorrow

BY ELLEN GLASGOW

PATRICIA paused.

Sharply defined she stood against the sodden sky, a strong, straight figure with superb head erect.

Beyond her the neutral sweep of a chain of hills broke the gray horizon with jagged lines as though penciled by a child's uncertain hand. And, here and there, where a hollow rose and fell, faint azure peaks were visiblo, standing but half revealed in the hazy distance like dim ghosts of dimmer realities.

Over gray landscape and gray sky evening was falling. The prospect was somber and remote. Hill and plain showed bare and unlovely as a chill study in crayon; all the warm tones of day were blotted out.

Occasionally, with an all but futile effort, a single ray of sunshine burst the woof of cloud, stretching across the gloom like a luminous searchlight thrown from a lantern above—stretching across ragged hill and ragged meadow until, reaching the creek, below the road, it lost itself in the sluggish water.

On either side, wide unplowed fields swept far into the distance. Long ago the land had gone to waste. Good Virginia soil it had been once—some years before the war—yielding many a crop of sun-dried tobacco and fine red wheat; but its returns had gradually diminished, and at last it had been left to run wild in golden-rod and sassafras bushes, its productions consisting in some bushels of sour blackberries, which bloomed, ripened and rotted without the aid of man.

The fields were skirted by rail fences upon which the wind and rain of many years had beaten with merciless force. In some places, the rails had rotted and fallen to the ground, leaving wide space, through which a stray cow or so roamed at will. will.

Upon the rotten rails trumpet vines fed with rank luxuriance, festooning themselves along the broken fence in great gorgeous clusters of scarlet bloom.

Patricia listened.

Across the tangled meadow, over broomsedge and brush, came the faint low note of a catbird, and fainter still, like the breathless minor-tone of an unspoken thought, the music of a cowbell rose softly from the glade below, sometimes losing itself against the hillside and again swelling clearly upon the rising air. Nearer still, in the turnpike just beyond, fell the heavy tread of oxen and the roll of a covered wagon as it lurched from side to side.

She heard the crack of the long whip and the slow drawl of the driver. Then the wagon passed and all was still.

Patricia leaned upon the low rail fence, her strong white fingers interlaced, her troubled gaze just touching the landscape and then, with a sensitive movement, space. Some long brown grasses growing beside the fence brushed her dress lightly and then, with a sensitive movement, swayed aside, their slender spirals silhouetted against the gradual distance. In the path in which she stood, a yellow lovevine grew in a delicate web.

Patricia had trampled it under foot until it was bruised and broken.

Still sharply defined, she stood against the sodden sky, her superb head erect.

Upon an adjacent hill a group of hayricks stood out forlornly in the landscape. A pale ray of sunshine shifted uneasily over them, casting violet-toned shadows at their feet and touching their yellow crests with the promise of a benediction that could never be fulfilled. Among the dried stubble a tender growth of white clover showed in emerald patches—a healing balm after the blade of the reaper.

Without, all was rest and age. It was the peaceful repose of a land that had yielded much and been of much service.

It seemed to Patricia, standing there, that she herself, with her young strength and troubled eyes, belonged to another scene, another age. Upon the fence beside her a whippoorwill alighted, watching her with shrewd, suspicious eyes. Yes, she belonged elsewhere—she, a woman of the twentieth century. Even nature seemed distrustful of her here—here where she was encircled by phantoms of the past.

In a tumultous wave thought swept over her, brushing aside all sense of the present.

The quiet, restful air grew restless. Across the tangled field the note of the catbird still sounded. The cowbells grew clearer as the cattle were driven home along the winding path.

Patricia thought.

Up to today life had all seemed a straight road to her—so straight, her strong young eyes had seen no stumbling-stones in her way. A year ago she had cast her first vote, and from that day she had been free—capable and free.

All the lingering remnants of nineteenth century prejudices she had defied. They had ceased to exist for every one until, drifting by chance into this out-of-the-way corner of Virginia, they had arisen and stared her in the face. Here, for the first time, her fresh young force, her splendid development had met with no approbation; here, where the women shrank from contact with her rude health and unbroken spirit; where the men could not be taught that she needed no protecting hand, no arm to lean upon. Half scornfully to herself she acknowledged that it touched her—that it aroused in her something besides the old cynical amusement. She remembered so well the indignation that had tinged that amusement when Aunt Jane had said to her once:

"Yes, you'd best not work that buttonhole. You're not smart about such things yet, but you'll learn in time, I reckon." Learn in time! Patricia fancied Aunt Jane asking a man who had carried off the honors at Yale to work a buttonhole!

"Well, she had been a success at college, if not with her needle. Six weeks ago, with many honors, more flowers and most congratulations, she had received her degree with becoming indifference.

Six weeks more, minus the honors, flowers and congratulations, she would face an inquiring public as—

"PATRICIA YORKE,
"Attorney-at-Law."

It had a beautiful sound. She had written it at least a thousand times during her two years' study. It was so suggestive in its simplicity. It spoke of hard work and ambition and a public.

Yes, a public! There were many scores to be settled between Patricia and that public, and she had little doubt as to which would be the victor.

She was always victorious. She had met with no force yet capable of defying her strong young spirit.

Resistance only stimulated her. She was not afraid. The public might resist, but she. Patricia Yorke, she, the embodiment of freedom and the twentieth century, would carve her name, an indelible mark, upon its constitutional history.

Yes, she was to become a power in the nation. She would grasp with firm hands at control, and the country should feel the strength of her hold. She would look with firm eyes into the public institutions, tear the dirty bandages from their cankerous sores and heal them with the surgeon's knife.

Standing there with the somber sky about her and the somber mere around her, she threw back her young head with a swift, courageous gesture. A great responsibility seemed to have fallen upon her. It was as though she carried the fate of womankind upon her broad shoulders.

"It is a mission!" she had once said to Uncle John.

"It is hypertrophy of the conscience!" said Uncle John to her.

Uncle John was simple—distinctly a product of the nineteenth century. Patricia knew it. Patricia was not simple, but sometimes simple people tell the truth when wise ones don't. Wise ones know better. But Patricia was honest, even though she wasn't a fool. "It isn't unselfishness, after all," she had said to herself. "It is ambition," and, she added, "Why shouldn't it be ambition?"

Why, indeed!

Her gaze passed lightly over the meadow and rested upon a clump of trees beyond. Above the trees the gabled roof of a house was visible, and from one of the blackened chimneys a thin line of smoke arose, creeping in slow, serpentlike circles against the sodden sky, and, at last, melting like a gray cloud upon the mountain height.

The house was Fairfax Place. Patricia knew it well. Too well, she had almost said. She had taken tea there the night before. She had taken tea there very often within the last four weeks. She knew the dining-room by heart—with its worn leather chairs, its faded portraits and its silver tea urn, whose battered sides still bore the Fairfax crest.

Behind the tea urn Patricia seemed to see the gentle hostess, looking as faded and dainty as the thread lace above her smooth white hair. She knew the cracked china cups with their washed-out pattern of blue willow. It was genteel poverty; but Patricia hated poverty—gentility but made it the more irksome. Another sham! She hated shams! She was at the age when one wants truth—truth only.

Most of us have known that age. It is a brief one, praise God, for, as we grow older and have tasted truth and have found it bitter, we prefer lies—lies are pleasanter.

Idly Patricia watched the thin line of smoke curling lazily along the gray mountain height.

She knew whose hands had lighted that fire, had drawn the water and had placed the bread to bake within the oven. Gentle, ladylike hands they were—white and ringless, with delicate wrinkles where the dimples had been once.

They were young hands, too. Hannah Fairfax was not more than 30; but her youth and dimples had waned long ago. There had been much work and few servants, so the gentle, ladylike hands had been put to the tiller. True, there had been a liberal application of mutton suet, and gloves had been drawn on—but the work was none the lighter because it was done in gloves; perhaps the heavier.

There was something about Hannah Fairfax that repelled Patricia. Something, she knew not what. Perhaps the coquettish timidity of her manner, perhaps the weakness and whiteness of her hands, that seemed half ashamed of their honest labor.

She was a pretty, sensitive creature with tired brown eyes and a fringe of carefully curled hair above her forehead.

Patricia wondered why she took the time to curl it—why she didn't brush it back and forget to put the frilling of lace in her collar. If she would only forget it once Patricia might forgive her. But the hopeless air of dressiness, the coquetry, baffled the younger woman. She could not ignore it, and it was always there.

Once, indeed, she had met her by chance coming from the well with a water bucket in her hand. Then she had worn a faded cotton wrapper and her hands were in gloves, but the curls were there, and a dainty covering of rice powder protected her skin from the sun.

At sight of Patricia she had started and fallen back, a deep flush showing beneath the powder on her face, her tired eyes growing hurt and appealing.

"Our servant was sick today," she had said depreciatingly, and Patricia had been stung by the polite lie. In one moment she had loved and hated the woman before her—loved her for her strength to labor and her beautiful pride—hated her for the appealing blush and the shamefaced little lie.

Why should she be ashamed of the truth—she, living in the twentieth century—when honest labor is more than luxury and strong hands above white ones?

Then, from thinking of the sister, Patricia passed to thinking of the brother.

Yes, there was a brother.

The thin line of smoke still curled against the sky.

Patricia could fancy him returning from the fields, his broad shoulders erect, his eyes glowing beneath the brim of his harvest hat. She could see him pause beside the water bucket in the hall and lift the gourd in one strong hand.

She knew his story as every one about her knew it—as Mrs. Simonds, the postmistress, knew it. He had gone through a college course and was starting out into the world, when his mother had called him home. In response to a selfish whim of the gentle old lady he had come. "You must stay by me," she had said, "and by the old place."

And he had stayed.

"Ah!" cried Patricia, bitterly. She flung out her hands with a gesture almost of despair, a hot red mantling her face. "It is not just! It is not just! He might have done so much—so much—and now—"

Suddenly she straightened herself and stood up, her black skirt clinging closely about her, her arms hanging loosely at her sides. From the open collar of her dress her white throat showed its sensitive lines. She wore no hat, and the heavy coil of hair had slipped low on her splendid head. She was thrilled with life—a superb specimen of health and strength, capable of passion and of action. She turned and followed the winding path, treading ruthlessly upon lovevine and clover.

At the end of the path, just where it passed into the turnpike, a small, sluggish stream crept along. A rotten log was stretched across it. Patricia paused upon the log, her face showing white in the gray dusk. The croaking of frogs from their bed among the rushes fell mournfully upon her ears. The heavy odor of white-thunderblossom half oppressed her.

She leaned over the stream, seeing in its shallow water a faint caricature of her sensitive face.

Then she drew back.

"Patricia!"

Some one came from out of the dusty turnpike and faced her, standing upon the further end of the rotten log. With a sudden tremor she recognized him. His eyes glowed beneath the brim of his straw hat, his strong hand was outstretched. There was a sudden stirring in her pulses—a vague sense of exaltation.

She gave him her hand. Then, with a sudden breathless gesture, she threw back her head and looked into his eyes.

"I was thinking of you," she said.

"Patricia!"

"Hush! I was thinking of the shame of it—of the pity of it! Have you no ambition? Are you utterly without manhood that you are content to waste your life like this? That you let the world go by without a care, preferring to spend your youth upon a wornout plantation, tilling a wornout soil? Ah, the shame of it!"

Her hot, reproachful eyes flashed over him. Beneath the fire of her words he wavered and trembled. The glow died from his face. It looked white and set through the gray gloom.

"Don't you see?" he said appealingly. "It is a question of duty. My post is here. I cannot desert it. I owe it to my family—to my mother. Don't you see?"

But she turned away with a little hopeless gesture.

"I don't see," she said coldly. "I could never see. It is absurd. It is a remnant of that old chivalry—so-called—of which the world is well rid."

Then her mood melted. She turned to him with sweet, prayerful eyes, stretching out appealing hands.

"Oh, go away!" she cried. "Go out into the world. You owe it to yourself. Success is so dear—so dear. Why shouldn't you know it?"

He took her hands, his warm, rapt gaze still bent upon her. "I love you!" he said. "You know that I love you—love you well enough to sacrifice everything for you—everything. Love you so that the hardest life with you would be heaven."

The girl did not tremble, did not turn away. She looked at him steadily, her proud lips slightly apart.

"Well enough to leave this place for me—to come away and work and earn success for me—well enough for that?" Her voice was almost mocking in its earnestness.

"Can't you understand?" he cried. "Can you never understand? My mother needs me. I am her only son. It is duty, plain, practical duty. Will you yield nothing to that?" Then he grew yearningly tender.

"Ah, my love! my love!" he said. "Am I nothing to you? Is your love so weak? Can you not sacrifice something for me? Come to me here—here for a while—perhaps ten, perhaps twenty years. I am bound, hand and foot, but you—you are free. Be a woman, Patricia; give yourself to me. It will not be hard, and there is love. What is the world, what is anything to love?"

Then Patricia wavered.

CARE OF THE BODY.

the foodstuffs which nature designed for our use are not the haphazard products of wild and incoherent forces, but are wrought out by a subtle and infinite wisdom, which fits them to our needs so perfectly as to transcend our highest knowledge and defy the profoundest analysis.

"Another matter of much significance which must be borne in mind in relation to pasteurized milk is the rather surprising fact that, if not handled with very great care, pasteurized milk is likely to develop within a short time more bacteria, and bacteria of a more dangerous type, than are found in ordinary raw milk. The reason for this is that most of the bacteria found in ordinary raw milk are of the acid-forming sort; that is, they are of the kind that are commonly known as buttermilk; or sour milk germs, so-called friendly or protective germs. So long as these bacteria are dominant the growth of putrefactive germs is destroyed by the pasteurizing process, but the spore-forming putrefactive organisms are not destroyed, and hence grow with greater facility in milk which has been pasteurized than in milk which has not been pasteurized.

"It is evident that pasteurization does not solve the milk problem. When scientifically done, pasteurization does mitigate some of the evils associated with unclean milk, but the only true solution for the problem is clean milk."

Thomas Carlyle on Health.

THOMAS CARLYLE had dyspepsia all his life. It made him sarcastic and crabbed. It perverted his judgment in many things; nevertheless he was aware of the fact, as appears from the following delightful paragraphs from his Inaugural Address on being installed as Rector of the University of Edinburgh:

"Finally, Gentlemen, I have one advice to give you, which is practically of very great importance, though a very humble one. In the midst of our zeal and ardour—for such, I foresee, will rise high enough, in spite of all the counsels to moderate it that I can give you—remember the care of health. I have no doubt you have among you young souls ardently bent to consider life cheap, for the purpose of getting forward in what they are aiming at as high; but you are to consider throughout, much more than is done at present, and what it would have been a very great thing for me if I had been able to consider, that health is a thing to be attended to continually; and that you are to regard that as the very highest of all temporal things for you. There is no kind of achievement you could make in the world that is equal to perfect health. What to it are nuggets and millions? The French financier said, 'Why is there no sleep to be sold?' Sleep is not in the market at any quotation.

"It is a curious thing, which I remarked long ago, and have often turned in my head, that the old word for 'holy' in the Teutonic language, heilig, also means 'healthy.' Thus Heilbronn means indifferently 'holy-well' or 'health-well.' We have in the Scotch, too, 'hale,' and its derivatives; and, I suppose, our English word 'whole' (with a 'w,') all of one piece, without any hole in it, is the same word. I find that you could not get any better definition of what 'holy' really is than 'healthy.' Completely healthy mens sana in corpore sano. A man all lucid, and in equilibrium. His intellect a clear mirror geometrically plane, brilliantly sensitive to all objects and impressions made on it, and imagining all things in their correct proportions; not twisted up into convex or concave, and distorting everything, so that he cannot see the truth of the matter without endless groping and manipulation; healthy, clear and free, and discerning truly all around him. We never can attain that at all. In fact, the operations we have got into are destructive of it. You can not, if you are going to do any decisive intellectual operation that will last a long while; if, for instance, you are going to write a book—you cannot manage it (at least, I never could,) without getting decidedly made ill by it; and really one nevertheless must; if it is your business, you are obliged to follow out what you are at, and to do it, even at the expense of health. Only remember, at all times, to get back as fast as possible out of it into health; and regard that as the real equilibrium and center of things. You should always look at the heilig, which means 'holy' as well as 'healthy.'"

Smoking, gambling and other laxities do not fit well with the Y.W.C.A., so certain English women contend. These habits crept into the Y.W. in England during the war. A party known as the Evangelical Young Women's Christian Association is cleaning them out, earning therefor the name of "narrow-minded puritans."

are a number of small bones arranged to form an arch. The strength of the arch depends on the strenght of the supporting muscles and ligaments which hold these bones in their normal positions.

Muscles should be strengthened by exercise, not propped up by rigid metal appliances. Most shoes bind the foot, impede the circulation, sap the strength of the muscles. Cantilever Shoes have a flexible shank which not only affords support, but permits the foot muscles to work in walking.

That is what really strengthens the muscles and the arch, prevents and corrects flat foot.

Cantilever Shoes have both military and Cuban heels, slightly higher on the inside than on the outside. That feature makes it easy for you to assume a comfortable standing position, to walk gracefully and without fatigue.

A trial fitting will convince you. Expert fitting.

RADIUM SULPHATE
[illegible]

If you have lines on your finger nails you have catarrh and that very catarrh can cause every disease in the body.

The device here illustrated, filled with RADIUM SULPHATE 95% pure, which lasts forever, cleans out disease of catarrh perfectly. Sold under money-back guarantee for $2.50 (half price) to prove power of RADIUM as a cure for all diseases. Ours in the ONLY one sold directly to the sick, having in it GENUINE RADIUM METAL ELEMENT, so necessary to preserve the power of ENERGY and to reach the germ of deep-seated, malignant diseases. It's applied only one hour each day, is harmless, safe and easily applied. It cures by emanations like heat relieves hands of cold. RADIUM SULPHATE cleans out disease of rheumatism, pneumonia, kidney, tuberculosis, appendicitis, spine, catarrh, asthma, sleeplessness, eczema, tumors, ulcers, nervousness, pyorrhea, rectum, prostate gland, psoriasis, cancers, bloodpoisoning of every type, female troubles, dropsy, hay fever, heart, stomach, liver, gallstones, neuralgia and all other diseases that cause suffering. They all have germs and if RADIUM SULPHATE can clean out the disease of the worst, it surely will all the lighter weights. We will pay one dollar more than we received for it to the person using it thirty days, on returning it to us, who will make affidavit that he or she has tuberculosis of the lungs. We challenge any person to produce a combined dozen remedies, RADIUM BROMID excepted, which will cure half as many diseases as RADIUM SULPHATE will cure. It has been proved in this city that $15 worth of it will cure more and severer diseases than $50,000 worth of RADIUM Bromid at their respective selling prices, and it is the only non-surgical cure for all operable diseases. "YOU WILL NOT GET BEAT THIS TIME." That is our slogan and it is as true as the sun shines. It does not waste; guaranteed to retain its curative properties six years. Write or call for literature, free sample, and learn how RADIUM cures so many diseases.

THE ELFIN-FOREST OF CALIFORNIA

BY FRANCIS M. FULTZ.

Some Flowering Shrubs of the Chaparral.
(Illustrations from Photographs by the author.)

Matilija Poppies.

I RECALL with what surprise I greeted my first tree-poppies. According to my firmly established ideas, poppies should be annuals, coming and going with the seasons, and with a stalk so decidedly herbaceous that great care must be taken in gathering and in handling them, if one wished to make out of them a nice fresh bouquet. On visiting California, I had soon become acquainted with the Eschscholtzia—the State Flower—and a little later with its smaller cousin of the foothills and canyons—the Papaver—and they tallied very nicely with my standards of what a poppy should be. But when I took to the Chaparral Trail and found poppies growing on bushes ,I was compelled to throw overboard another of my botanical traditions, and to add still another item to the fast-growing list of "California exceptions to the general rule." Nevertheless, I hastened to make friends with this new-found poppy (Dendromecon ridigum,) for I liked the bright yellow flowers and the thin bush upon which they grew. And when I found that almost wherever I went in the Elfin-Forest it was there to greet me, I liked it better than ever. And that it strung out its blooming season from March until late in the summer was ,another bid for favor.

Half way up the steep bank of the Arroyo Seco, between the Pasadena avenue bridge and that of the Pacific Electric, on the South Pasadena side, a bush-poppy shrub years ago took up its home. Season after season it has put out a wealth of bloom. People scramble up the steep slope and break off the yellow-flowered branches, until there is scarcely anything left of the shrub but split and shattered stubs. But it never fails to rally from the wreck. Indeed, it seems to thrive on the harsh treatment which is its portion, and each succeeding year comes out with a new crop of branches and a seemingly more abundant spread of yellow.

Even Poppies Grow on Bushes in Elfin-Forest.

IT WAS after I had become well acquainted with the Dendromecon that I learned it was not the only poppy which grows on a bush, in California, but that there was another, larger in both bush and flower, and more attractive in every way. I first made its acquaintance in the garden of a friend, and when he told me it was a native of California, and that when I went out into the mountains I should find it growing wild, I asked him where he expected to go when he died.

"Heaven," he said, and smiled.

I looked at the plant. A great bushy shrub it was, four or five feet through, and sending up slender branches to the height of ten. Scattered over it were at least half-a-hundred five or six-inch flowers with crepe-white petals and deep-yellow centers, while two or three times as many buds were coming along to keep up the floral display.

"Have you never heard of the Matilija-poppy?" my friend continued.

I shook my head. I was new to California then.

"Well," he said, "this is really a wild California plant. It is said to be the largest poppy known. However that may be, it is surely one of the most famous. It is planted quite extensively for ornament here at home, and has also been taken to many foreign lands where the climate is mild enough for it to thrive. They say that abroad it is very generally known as the "California Poppy."

Since that first introduction to the Matilija poppy I have seen it many times "on its native heath," and in different parts of the Elfin-Forest. It is at its best along the sources of the Santa Ynez River in Santa Barbara county, and in Matilija Canyon—where it seems to have been first discovered—in Ventura county. Its botanical name is Romneyi coulteri. A somewhat smaller form is very abundant in the mountains of Orange county, which some botanists are inclined to consider as a separate species, giving it the name of R. trichocalyx. The uninitiated, however, see no difference between the poppies of Ventura county and those from Orange, except in the matter of size, and, as a matter of fact, this difference is so slight that very few persons not already informed ever notice it

California Slippery-elm Very Showy Shrub.

ONE of the showy shrubs, when in flower, of the Elfin-Forest is the Fremontodendron. It is more commonly known as "California Slippery Elm," or merely "Slippery Elm," as most persons call it. But of course this is a misnomer, as the shrub is not even closely related to the elms. It belongs to a plant family whose members are almost all tropical. It is to be regretted that its botanical name of Fremontodendron is not also in general use as the common name, as it commemorates the Pathfinder—who discovered it on his first expedition into Southern California, coming upon it as he was passing through the Tehachepi Mountains. Its full botanical name is Fremontodendron Californica—thus commemorating both its discoverer and the State to which it is native.

Prickly-Phlox (Liftodactylon Californicum: the Queen of the Phloe Family.

The Fremontodendron is sometimes more than a shrub, on occasion running up to full twenty feet in height; but most frequently in the chaparral region it is shrubby. It seems to be semi-desert in its tastes, and here in the south is found most plentifully in the drainage basins of the streams which flow to the desert, and does not seem to venture far beyond the ridges which limit these basins. An exception to this is the upper reaches of some of the tributaries of the Big Tejunga. While it often occurs scattered, yet thickets of it are not unusual. It has large yellow, somewhat cup-shaped flowers, which, by the way, are not what they pretend to be, for the sepals palm themselves off for petals, the latter being entirely wanting. But for all that the shrub frequently carries so much color from its load of bloom that it makes a bright spot in the landscape. I once came down Mill Creek Canyon—a tributary of the Big Tejunga—early in June when in places it was literally golden with the Fermontodendron in bloom.

The Fremontodendron is another one of the California shrubs which has been extensively distributed to different parts of the world for ornamental purposes. It might well be brought into our own parks and gardens. It seems to be a hardy shrub out in the wild and stands a good degree of frost. It got its name of slippery-elm because of the character of the bark, which has a mucous quality very much like that of the eastern slippery-elm. It is said to be equally efficacious when used for a poultice.

Covering very much the same region as the Fremontedendron is the California buckeye. It is very much of the same stature, too, except that it is bushier. In flower and nut it very much resembles the eastern buckeye, but in size it is a dwarf by comparison. It is deciduous, and like its eastern cousin, in the springtime it is a mass of bloom. The flowers are white, fading to pink. They are fragrant to such a degree that the air around where the shrubs grow thickly is almost disagreeably heavy with the odor. The leaves are large and palmately arranged, and give a handsome effect to the tree. While the buckeye nowhere grows thickly enough to form copses, yet in the regions where it is plentiful—as for instance around the west end of the Mojave Desert—it is a real factor of the Elfin-Forest growth.

Several Species of Willow Help Conserve the Land.

THERE are several shrubs which make their home largely along the streams and washes, and which, although they are not usually considered as chaparral, really play an important part in the conservation of the land. Among these are two or three species of willow, a Baccharis and a Senecio. The willows and the baccharis closely border the courses of the streams, and even invade the sandy and rocky beds themselves, thus preventing a vast amount of erosion and washing. And the shade they afford stops a great deal of evaporation and very much modifies the local temperature. The baccharis (B. vininea) is commonly called "mule-fat," because animals browse freely upon it when ordinary forage runs short. On account of its long, slender leaves and its habit of growing along streams, most persons take it for a willow; but its brittle wood—almost herbaceous in character—and composite flowers show that it is not even closely related to the willows. It is a generous bloomer and may be found in flower almost all the year around. Like the willows, it has "fly-away" seeds, so there is little danger of its tribe ever decreasing.

The Senecio mentioned is the one commonly known as "creek-senecio," although it does not grow down close to the water, like the willows and mule-fat, but in the gravelly and dryer parts of the washes, and even up on the secondary benches of the stream courses. Its bright yellow flowers make a very noticeable feature of the landscape in September and October, and if the season isn't windy, by the early part of November it is living up to the name the Old World botanist gave the genus so long ago, "Senecio"—that is, "Old Man"—and is covered with a multitude of gray-white seedballs. On account of its gray-green slender-leaved foliage, it is often taken to be a relative of the desert sagebrush; and, indeed, it is not so very distantly related. It belongs to the Grounsel Tribe, while the sagebrush is classed with the Mayweed Tribe—two closely related groups of the Compositae.

There are several species of the bush monkey-flowers in the Elfin-Forest, at least two or three, perhaps more, as the botanists are not altogether agreed in the matter. Two of them, however, seem to be pretty well defined. One of them is Diplacus longiflorus and the other D. puniceus. The former is abundant in Los Angeles county and the adjacent regions, while the latter is found southward toward the Mexican boundary and on the islands off the coast. The longiflorus varies in color from a very pale corn color through yellow and orange to an orange-red; the puniceus is almost constantly a dark-red. The flower of the puniceus is the smaller and more slender of the two; so that through shape and color it is quite easily distinguished from the other form. The shrubs of the two species are very much alike both in shape and foliage, and both seem deserving of the common name by which the two are indiscriminately known, "sticky monkey flower"—which comes from the glutinous character of the foliage and herbaceouslike stems of new growth.

The bush monkey-flowers do not form an important part of the chaparral-cover, and by the forest service people are even considered a negligible quantity. But they are not so counted by many of us who frequent the mountain trails for the pure enjoyment which a life in the open brings. For us they are a very evident part of the chaparral, and the bright patches of color which they paint here and there on the foothills and string along the borders of the trails are pictures that remain long in memory. In early summer the bushes are veritable bouquets of bloom and they keep up the display for a long time. The shrub likes blooming so well that there is scarcely any time of the year when you cannot find at least a few flowers.

Here Also is Found a Bloom Resembling the Sunflower.

VENEGASIA CARPESOIDES is a suffrutescent shrub of the Coast Ranges. It apes the sunflower in the appearance of both foliage and bloom, except that the flower has an orange center. Its habitat is not that of the sunflower, however, as it seeks the moist canyons and shady places of the mountain slopes. It is evergreen, and its foliage is attractive all through the year. In moist canyons it is ever-blooming, too, and we often find it at its best in midwinter. Its generic name is for Father Vongeas, one of the Franciscan missionaries. This is the only case which has come to my notice where any of the Mission fathers has been so remembered.

From April on through the summer the foothills of the chaparral country in many places are yellow with countless blooms of the encelias. Of these there are two species, Encelia Californica and E. farinosa. The former ranges from Los Angeles county westward and northward, while to the eastward the latter holds sway. They do not mingle to any great extent, their ranges meeting almost abruptly in the eastern part of Los Angeles county. The flowers of both would be no work for 10 per cent of the doctors, and if they had done this from birth there would be no work for 10 per cent of the dentists.

If you want to change existence into living, there is only one course for you to pursue. Fast absolutely from one to three weeks, according to the amount of impurities in your system, meantime breathing fresh air, taking moderate exercise, a sweat bath twice a week and twice a week a thorough flushing of the colon. Then adopt a temperate, two meal a day dietary, of simple non-stimulating foods, eaten dry, and thoroughly chewed. These meals will taste better than any banquets you ever sat down to. And for the first time you will know what it is really to live—you will experience the joy of life.

This does not mean that you should never eat a dinner at a friend's house, or attend a public banquet. By no means. It means simply that you should get out of the bad habit of habitually overeating. Feel faint? Of course you will, at first. If you had been accustomed to drinking a quart of whisky daily, as a great many people in this country were, and should suddenly reduce the amount to half a pint a day, you would feel faint, wouldn't you? Would you therefore conclude that a quart of whisky daily is necessary to your welfare?

Don't be either a captious crank or a human hog—that is to say, a civilized hog, for the wild hog does not make a man of himself. It is only when he has been trained by man that he is taught to acquire his master's habits, and habitually gorge himself.

Human Phonographs.

"WE HAVE all heard of the eminent physician who, on learning accidentally that his patient was the son of an old friend, bade him throw the prescription he had just written in the fire, and tell him all about his trouble," says the editor of a medical magazine in an article on "Raising the Standard of Medicine," and he speaks of the danger of the medical teacher becoming "a sort of human phonograph, grinding out lifeless information, which steeps the student in formal learning, but leaves him ignorant and helpless in the matter of ways and means" for the cure of disease. "The result is," continues the editor, "that most graduates of today know a great deal that 'isn't so' and doubt most everything that is."

Elevating the Stage.

Pasteurized Milk.

FOLLOWING is from "Autointoxication," by Henry Lindlahr, M.D.:

"Milk should be alive, or at least uncooked. Pasteurizing, that is, heating to a temperature of 158 deg. Fahrenheit, destroys the antibodies of milk. When the milk is heated to a temperature of 176 deg. Fahrenheit, the digestive ferments which it contains are destroyed. The boiling of milk modifies in a harmful way nearly all its ingredients, and considerably reduces its nutritive value. Rats fed on boiled milk grow to only half their normal size. Scurvy sooner or later appears in babies exclusively fed on pasteurized or boiled milk.

"The subtle alchemy by which milk is prepared in the laboratory of nature is upset by the crude process of cooking. Boiled milk will sustain the life of rats but it will not enable them to grow to full development, and reproduction fails altogether. Science is teaching us every day that the fine adjustments and adaptations of nature cannot be safely ignored. We are gradually learning through the loss of millions of lives which have perished through our ignorance, that

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM!
"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The Times wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 476-W Street, Hallowell, Maine. Send now, lest you forget! If not a sufferer, cut out this notice and hand this good news and opportunity to some afflicted friend. All who send will receive it by return mail without any charge whatever.

RADIUM
IN THE CURE OF DISEASE
The wonderful element that gives light, heat and electricity—
YES, AND RESTORES LIFE
Electro-Radium promotes the growth and multiplication of healthy cells.
Electro-Radium stimulates the activity of the digestive tracts, both in the stomach and intestines, and lessens chronic constipation.
Electro-Radium lowers the blood pressure.
Electro-Radium increases metabolism.
Electro-Radium soothes the nerves and relieves insomnia. Its application brings real and lasting improvement in anaemia.
Electro-Radium stimulates the activity of the liver. Should anyone doubt that emanation has power over bodily functions, a few minutes' trial will be thoroughly convincing, as the influence is immediately perceptible.
No medical man who has had experience with Electro-Radium Ore appliances can doubt its capability of stimulating the activity of the human organism.
The writer can give you a long list of names of modern people, who for decades have used the radio-active applications. They not only lived to a great age, but showed extreme freshness and activity at a very advanced period of life, hence on scientific data, only recently acquired, we can prove that emanation exercises a positive rejuvenating influence on man.
We manufacture Electro-Radium Ore Compresses (or pads,) Electro-Radium Ore Blankets, Electro-Radium Robes, with slippers, Electro-Radium Ore Socks.

The Chain of Her Strength—An Enigma.

BY ELIZABETH BUSH.

RHODA had almost violated one of the Ten Commandments. The memory of her near transgression was flooding her soul with penitence—her body with waves of scarlet shame. It had, of course, been her own fault. She had had no valid excuse—none whatever. Dick Ashton, her husband, had gone to South America to take a position. He had not been able to find one at home. The state of their finances had not permitted of his taking her and she had stayed behind, but she had resented the ease with which he had accepted the situation—the inevitable he had called it. Why, rather than have left her husband of her own free will—she would have starved; but he had made no attempt to find work in any other field except his own familiar one.

"You will stay here, Rhoda, and I will send for you as soon as I can," he had said with that tone of finality he so often used.

"But Dick, dear, couldn't we sell something, get money some way so I can go with you? We will be so lonely apart," she had faltered, tearfully.

"It's quite impossible, Rhoda. You must be brave."

She had wondered, half dully, why he had not said "We must be brave." She had seen that he had no need of encouragement to keep up his falling spirits. He had been quite cheerful and all eagerness to be on his way. She had gone to the station with him that morning ten months ago and had stood with uncontrolled tears scalding her face as his train pulled out. She had not seen him again after he had climbed aboard, but she had hoped. Oh how she had hoped that he would raise the window after he had found his seat and wave a last good-by to her! As she slowly left the station something in the upper part of her mind was consoling her with the thought that he had had difficulty in finding his berth, but someting in quite another part of her mental apparatus was resenting the cold indifference of the man to whom she had been married seven years when it might mean a separation of many months.

She had gone home and cried herself to sleep and was wretchedly lonely for the first month. Dick had written to her once just before sailing, then it had been more than six weeks before she had heard from him again. Both of those first letters were short, commonplace—but both had counseled bravery and patience. Rhoda was not herself, aware of it, but she hated her husband while she was reading those letters.

The monotonous petty drudgery of her household tasks became irksome because she had had no loved one to work for, and every day her heart had become more rebellious.

"A thing—that is all I am—a package placed in safe keeping—left until called for" she thought. And so it was that the pain in her heart became the labor pain of an inspiration and an idea was born in her brain. Why hadn't she thought of it before. So simple a solution of an apparently complex problem. Of course, Dick couldn't suggest it to her. She had wondered if he, himself, had thought of it and had gallantly kept the thought locked in his own mind. Why, of course, she would earn the money herself and go out to Dick and perhaps she could even find employment in that far country and they would save and buy a little home when they came back to the States.

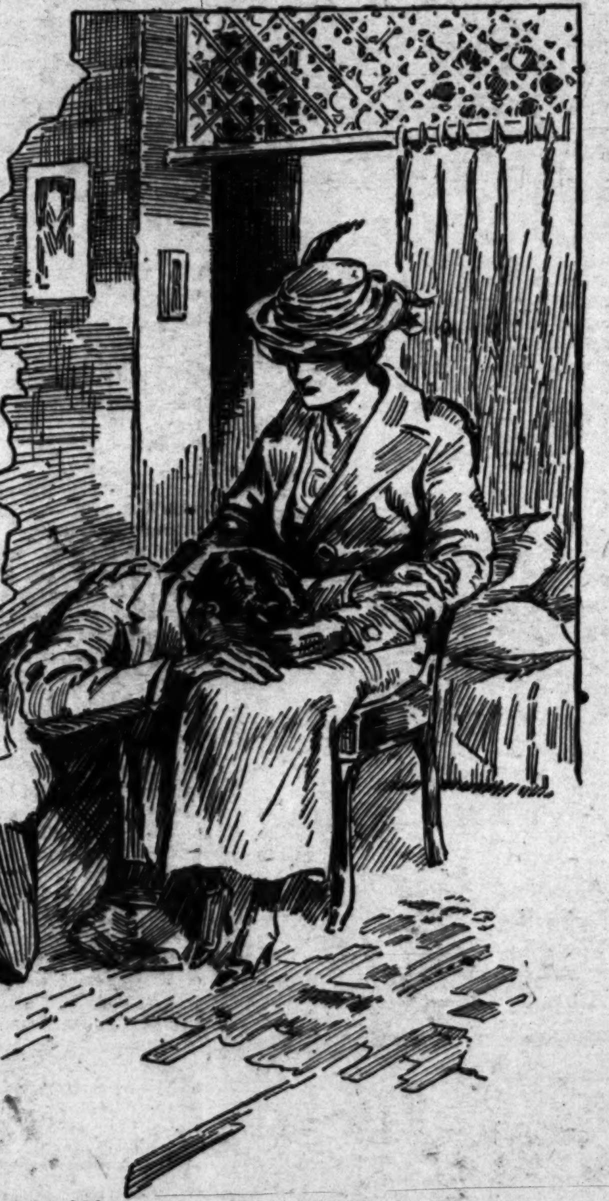
The happy thought had brought a flush to her cheek and her eyes had danced excitedly as she ran over in her mind the position she might be capable of filling. Teach? Oh yes, she could do that, but the season was nearing the end and anyway in their small town such desirable positions were all filled. Ah, the town paper lay close to her hand. She would search the advertising column. Here was something. She did not know if she would meet the requirements but she would apply. The advertisement read:

> "Wanted. Refined, capable assistant in dental office. No experience necessary. None but a sympathetic, tactful person need apply. Dr. Aimsley."

Rhoda had lost no time but had applied at once. Her heart sank as she saw the waiting line before her, but when the door opened revealing a tall, clear-eyed, earnest young man, his gaze had seemed to single her out of all the rest. He beckoned to her and she was the first to go in. When she left the office it was with the agreement that she would report for work the next morning.

The days that followed had been happy ones for Rhoda. Though quite unaware of it, herself, her mind was unusually receptive. She learned things so gracefully that there was never an awkward stage in her apprenticeship. The doctor was charmed. His burdens had so perceptibly lightened with her coming that he had wondered how he had ever gotten along without her.

Side by side they worked and the days had seemed wonderfully short because they had worked happily. They were young and in tune with life, and the inevitable happened. Rhoda, because she was the woman, realized it first.



Oh Rhoda! Rhoda! and like a penitent child he buried his head in her lap.

Dick's not very frequent letters were nearly always dull. He told her little of the country or of his life over there. He wrote complainingly of the discomfort of living. He was glad he had not brought her. He hoped she was braver than she had been at their parting. He was afraid that he could not send for her soon. Everything was very expensive in that country but she oughtn't to mind as she was enjoying comfort while he was having to undergo hardship and even danger. Rhoda had wanted to think certain things of Dick, his work and his letters, but of course the things she wanted to think evaded her—were in fact, driven out by the thoughts she had to think, and now with shame she had realized that she, the wife, had not been able to withstand the test of a few months' separation. Always honest with herself, she had not tried evasion. She knew she loved one man and was married to another.

She had brought out the abandoned tea kettle where her savings had found safe refuge and counted the little pile. She hadn't quite enough for her trip. What must she do? She did not want to go but for that very reason she sensed the urgent necessity for going. She placed the money back with a sigh. She sought her pillow and because youth and health were hers, sleep wooed her and triumphed over her waking, worried consciousness.

It was the following day when she had been trying the hardest to conceal the secret which her heart had revealed to her that her own hand raised the curtain which laid all bare. They were alone. The doctor was working on some bridge work and, while hammering, a small piece of hot metal flew up and entered his eye. Rhoda, with a tortured cry, ran to him and with lightning action pried his lids apart to discover that the metal had not touched the ball.

"Oh, thank God, thank God," she said, reverently.

A great wave of crimson fluid surged through the doctor's veins as Rhoda's ministrations brought relief from the intense pain he had been enduring. She, this beautiful, desirable woman, loved him. What else could her agitation at the threatened danger to his eye mean? Why had it not occurred to him before? His heart was pounding. He—he, too, wanted her. At that moment he thought he wanted her more than anything in life. He would have her. She, herself, wished it. He was sure of that now. No one need know of their relation and the husband who had been willing to leave her all these months to look out for herself, he deserved no better fate.

Rhoda was still working on his eye, her trembling fingers and blushing cheeks giving mute sanction to the logic of his thoughts. When she had finished he caught her up almost brutally and kissed her as no one had ever kissed her before. The reaction of her fear for him had left her weak and his action now swept her off her feet, both mentally and physically. She had feebly tried to struggle against him but her desire for him was, for the moment, greater than her desire for honor, and he was her master. She had returned his kisses freely, madly, but a knock at the door had torn them apart and her feet had found the firm ground again.

It was during that day that she had made a final decision. She would dispose of her engagement ring and would start for Buenos Aires and Dick at once. She had told the doctor of her resolve and he had argued the unwisdom of her decision. He pleaded his cause—the cause of a man's love, he told her, but she had been able to hold him at arm's length. She had tested the chain of her strength and had found its weakest link. No more should it be tried until the iron of patient endurance had made it whole again.

She was on the steamer now, sick with longing for the man she had left, yet yearning for the strength of him she was going out to meet, and those waves of penitence and shame were flooding her soul and body. In thought she was reliving every hour since her husband's departure and she denounced the weakness of her nature—the weakness which had threatened her loyalty to the man she had sworn to love until death.

Strangely enough the modern thought—that it was her right to seek the freedom which would legitimize her love for another than her present husband, had never entered her brain. Somewhere, sometime in her childhood's training the obligation of duty had been ingrained in her soul, so that now but one path lay before her—and it was most clearly defined. To find Dick again and start in a united pair on the long road of life. Just now there seemed no hope of happiness in the prospect for her, but it was not happiness that she was seeking. She must be true to her character—that was all. Live up to the ideal she had unconsciously set up for herself. And so the boat skimmed the blue waves, each day bringing her nearer to anchor. Strength lay in her thought. The romance of a new country was before her and subtly interest began to awaken in her heart. She was young and with plenty of life yet before her, she would—she must conquer this gnawing pain in her heart.

Her destination was the city of Buenos Aires. She had not cabled Dick that she was coming. She had feared that he would discourage the venture and she pictured his surprise when he should see her, and spent the last days of her voyage in anticipation and in visualizing the scenes in which she would play a part in this new strange setting.

When her feet had touched land again she was amazed at the hustling busy city which lay before her. She had somehow not thought of finding so beautiful a city, and Dick's letters had given her no inkling. To her surprise she was almost enjoying life again as she was being whirled along in the taxi to the address he had given her in his letters.

The vehicle came to an abrupt stop before a rather low white house which seemed to be built around what, at home, she would have called a court. She smiled as she mentally corrected "patio." A sweet faced old Spanish woman was standing in the gateway which opened into the patio. She paid the driver a bit reluctantly. She somehow felt that this lovely place could not have housed Dick all the months he had been writing those discontented letters, but she let the taxi go, and mustering the little Spanish she knew, addressed the woman,

"Dispenseme Vd., Senora. Puede decirme en donde esta el cuarto de Senor Ashton?"

"Si Senora." The old woman smiled kindly. "Con mucho gusto. Esta aqui." To Rhoda's great joy she pointed to the second door from the entrance.

She ran quickly to the door which was slightly ajar, pushed it open far enough to insert her head, disappointed at first because the room seemed to be vacant. Then, as her eyes became accustomed to the darkened room, they discovered a photograph of herself on the table in the center. It was—it really was Dick's room. She opened wide the door now and walked in and placed her small traveling bag on the table and was about to remove her hat when she heard a slight sound as of the intake of a painful breath. She turned quickly and faced the direction from which the sound had come and there in a corner back of the door, her stricken startled eyes beheld Dick, her hus-

CARE OF THE BODY.

"In my own case, while living solely upon fruits, nuts and cold water, during a period of nine months, I gained in strength and weight upon one meal daily, consisting of say an apple, two or three figs, an orange and a dozen walnuts. This was while living an active, out-of-door life."

In reply to a request for further information in regard to his experience, Dr. Latson wrote to me as follows:

"With regard to the dietetic experience to which I have referred, I may simply confirm the statement which you have quoted, with the modification that there were sometimes two meals a day, the second one of which was always lighter than the first, usually merely fruit. No milk, no eggs, and no beverage but water. I may remark that, on returning to the haunts of what we glibly call 'civilization,' and attempting to subsist on what we fatuously designate 'civilized fare' I experienced for about six weeks incessant attacks of pronounced indigestion, nausea and bowel disturbance."

Read carefully the following statements by eminent physicians. Dr. T. L. Nichols says, in "Diet Cures;"

"A man may be able to dispose of three times as much food as he really requires. One ounce more than he requires is a waste of force, a waste of life. We waste life in eating more food than we need, in digesting it, and then in getting rid of it. Here is a triple waste. We have other work to do in this world than eating unnecessary food, and spending our strength for naught."

Dr. E. H. Dewey says in his "No Breakfast Plan:"

"Think of it! Actual power involved in ridding the stomach and bowels of the foul sewage of food in excess, food in a state of decomposition, to be forced through nearly two rods of bowels and largely at the expense of the soul itself!"

Dr. Sylvester Graham says, in his "Science of Human Life:"

"Every individual should, as a general rule, restrain himself to the smallest quantity which he finds from careful investigation and enlightened experience and observation will fully meet the alimentary wants of the vital economy of his system, knowing that whatsoever is more than this is evil."

Dr. F. M. Heath says, in his "Why do Young People Die:"

"Thousands there are—yes, millions—who eat more than they can digest, and whose life power is so worn down in the endless struggle with the waste food, that existence is a hopeless, dragging misery."

Dr. Densmore has written: "Sickness and acute attacks of illness bear the same relation to diet that drunkenness bears to drink."

Dr. Dewey also said: "Every disease that afflicts mankind is a constitutional possibility developed into disease by more or less habitually eating in excess of the supply of gastric juice."

Comenting upon these statements Hereward Carrington writes, ("Vitality, Fasting and Nutrition:") "Instead therefore of pitying those who suffer from disease, we should rather consider that they have brought such upon themselves, and we should rather despise them. Disease should be looked upon not as an affliction and dispensation of Providence,' but as a disgraceful thing brought about by our own ignorance or willful neglect of the fixed and unalterable laws of nature."

Hippocrates said, nearly twenty-five hundred years ago: "The more you nourish a diseased body, the worse you make it."

In Japan, where the diet is excedingly simple and abstemious, statistics show that heart disease and nervous prostration are almost unknown, as causes of death.

There are several reasons why people overeat. Firstly, as above stated, they have inherited a tendency from their parents, especially from their mothers, and they have been taught to overeat from birth. Secondly, they eat too much soft, cooked foods, which are swallowed without sufficient mastication. Thirdly, they eat too many different foods at a meal. Fourthly—and most important—in such foods as white flour, and sugar and boiled foods, where the water has been thrown away, the valuable organic mineral salts are lacking, so that a person has to eat much more than is wholesome, in order to get the minerals necessary for the body. In other words, the body would be more perfectly nourished on half the amount of raw food, containing the mineral elements in the organic form.

It is not only from the view point of health and of loss of mental and physical power that we should regard this question of overeating—of food drunkenness—but also from the point of view of waste. Look at the vast amount of comforts and luxuries that might be produced with the money now wasted on food that poisons the system, producing illness and premature death, and thus further adding to expense and worry, in the shape of doctors' and undertakers' bills. Dr. Dio Lewis wrote as follows, in his book "Weak Lungs:"

"Few spectacles are more painful than the struggle often seen among the poor to keep their table supplied with the 'best in the market.' Foregoing books, periodicals, a good house, good clothes and the healthful luxury of a summer trip, they devote everything to supplying their table. They are ashamed to be seen eating plain, cheap food; not ashamed to live in a poor house, to wear insufficient clothing; to have no library, to have no pew in church, to have nothing, to be nothing, if only their table is well supplied! I declare it a low, vulgar ambition—pride on the lowest plane of life."

If people would cut down the quantity of their food to one-third or one-half of natural food containing the organic salts, eating dry and chewing it thoroughly, there

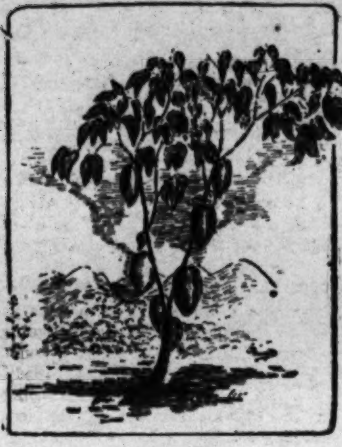
The Charm of Chocolate

BY DUDLEY S. CORLETT.



Cacao Tree.

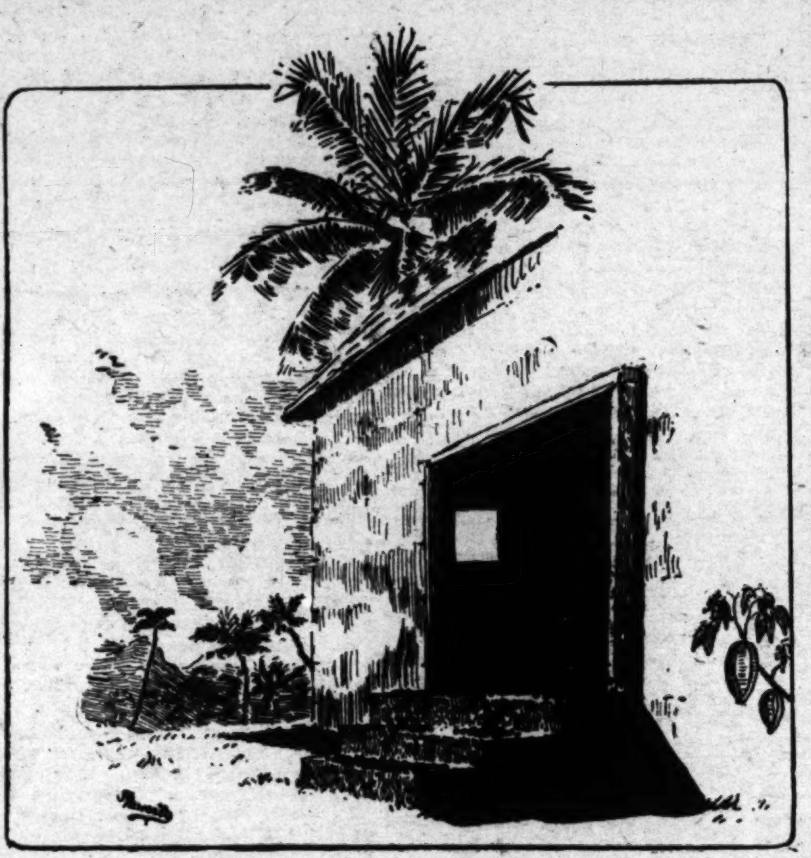
TO THE Parisienne mondaine luxuriously sipping her vanilla-scented morning cup of frothing cocoa as she reclines on her lace-trimmed couch, or to the busy shop girl in a New York store secretly nibbling her chocolate candy, how much of the knowledge of how their loved delicacies were garnered is ever given a thought?

The cacao tree, in the raw state it is spelt cacao—in its manufactured form cocoa, is grown only in the tropics proper. It is a lover of the hot, humid atmosphere of the great forests of the Amazon or the sheltered valleys of the Brazilian mountains where it is sufficiently sheltered from its deadly enemy, the wind. It is indigenous to South America, and was a favorite beverage with the old Aztecs and their cousins, the Incas of Peru. It was the early Jesuit missionaries, those infallible propagators of all the tropical economic products that they instinctively knew would one day become necessities to man's daily needs, were amongst the first to take up the cultivation of the cacao on plantation lines. The early Portuguese and Spanish settlers were quick to recognize its value, and introduced it into the European courts in the seventeenth century, where it was much esteemed for its flavor and for its satisfying qualities as a food. From South America it quickly spread to the neighboring West Indies, where it found a congenial home, and later on it was taken over to the tropical coast of West Africa and finally to the Far East. But its zone is strictly limited to those climates that possess a heavy rainfall and a high temperature that does not vary greatly. It grows from Central America down as far as the State of Bahia in Brazil; from Jamaica to Trinidad; from the Gold Coast down to the Cameroons; and in the islands south of India—Ceylon, Java, Sumatra, Borneo and the Philippines.

In the Depths of the Cacao Tree's Shade.

THE tree never grows very tall, about thirty feet or so, and has a handsome growth and foliage. Like so many of the tropical trees, when it puts forth its new foliage, the young leaves are deficient in chlorophyll, the green coloring matter in leaves, so that when they first make their appearance they are tinted a curious pale pink or terra-cotta and hang limply down. However, in the strong sunlight they soon gain their natural green and stiffening.

To those who have seen the big twelve to fifteen inches long pod of the cacao, its tiny flower appears ridiculous. These little white starry flowers blossom in groups from what are known as "cushions" on the trunk itself or on the branches, so that the fruit appears to be growing directly from the bark. The pollination of these small flowers is still a puzzle, for they are not visited by bees or other flying insects, though ants and thrips will do so. Neither is there sufficient wind to carry the pollen far under the dense canopy of foliage. The fruit grows into a large pod, which, as it ripens, takes on the most lovely colors of orange, red and yellow in every shade and mixture, so that the heaps of gathered fruit appear a very beautiful sight. They are gathered by men and boys armed with sharp knives and hooks on the ends of long bamboos for those on the higher branches. The pods are heaped and women and children break open the thick outer covering and expose the seeds inside. These are of a dark purple color and encased in a white substance which is sharply sweet and pleasant to suck. Oddly enough the seed in the raw state has no taste whatever of chocolate, and it has to undergo a considerable preparation before it does so. It is rather puzzling therefore to think how its use was first discovered to the American Indians.



In West Indies the Poorer Natives Dry Their Beans on Their Steps.

The Creole Dance of the Cacao Bean.

THE women scoop out the seeds, or beans as they are called, and they are then taken to the barbecues, where they are placed in vats or boxes and allowed to ferment for a period of from three to six days, being turned over several times to insure an even fermentation. This operation is of the greatest importance, for by its means is the good or poor "break" obtained, that is, when the bean is broken it shows a good chocolate color and appears crisp and fresh, giving forth a rich aroma. After the fermentation, the beans are either given the eastern method of a light washing to get rid of any of the mucous substance that may still adhere to the beans, it is placed as it is in the sun to dry, a process of several days. On the bigger plantations artificial drying is resorted to when, as too frequently happens, the sun does not appear for weeks from the raining skies. This method does not give to the bean that bright red color so desired by the buyers. In the West a solution of red clay is poured on the beans when they are partly dry and danced on with the naked feet to color and polish the beans. It is quite a sight to show the stranger this cacao dance, as the pretty Hindu girls with their high-held skirts and their silver anklets jingling on their feet or the saucy Creole girls smiling with their white teeth as only a West Indian girl can, merrily dance on the beans for the delectation of their fairer sisters of the North. This claying of the beans is held by those that advocate the process, to not only improve the looks of the product, but that it acts as a preservative against the damp which is so fatal to the cacao bean. But there is another side to the question, for the small planter is apt to be tempted to so heavily clay his beans so as to very considerably add to their weight. This clayed skin does not hurt the cocoa for it is removed with the skin after roasting before the bean is ground to the powder in the factory.

The Caracas is the Aristocrat of Chocolate.

THERE are numerous varieties of cacao, but that with the most delicate flavor commanding the highest price, comes from its original home of Caracas in Venezuela and from Nicaragua. Transported to other countries it has proved too delicate to thrive. The seeds are sown in pots before planting out under the shade trees already established, for so delicate are the young plants that they have to be very carefully protected against wind and strong sun. With careful cultivation, pruning and manuring, the cacao tree will bear in four years, but too often, as in the old days, little or no attention was paid to scientific cultivation, and it is generally six years before a crop is gathered. The life of the cacao is as much as a hundred years, so that careful planting in the first place is of the utmost importance. In Grenada, for instance, the trees are grown without any shade at all, but they are given a high state of cultivation whereby they reap large crops of excellent quality. The Portuguese Island of Santo Thome also pays great attention to its cacao cultivation, and has made a world-famed name for itself. But the majority of the other cacao-producing countries, have sacrificed quality to quantity. Especially so is this the case with Brazil, whose State of Bahia produces a considerable portion of the world's cocoa. Here the soil and climate of the province of Illious is particularly suited to the production of cacao, but so unscientifically have the plantations been planted and so scarce is labor that there is scarcely any attempt at cultivation and the preparation is so ill-attended to that the fermentation is faulty and the drying insufficient, so that a large percentage of the beans become moldy or attacked by weevil before they reach their destination. In fact the merchants take the poor cacao that contains say 30 per cent bad beans and mixing it with that of 10 per cent make a marketable article for the United States of America to buy as first-class cocoa. For it is North America that buys the bulk of Brazil's crop. It is extremely unlikely that the apathetic Brazilian government will ever make a serious effort to correct this unsatisfactory state of things or check the disease which is already threatening the industry. The cocoa from the West Indies mostly goes to Europe, save a certain proportion that America has to buy in order to leaven up the poor stuff she buys from Brazil and for use in the higher grades of chocolate; for while the Brazilian product is good enough to make the cheaper chocolates, it is deficient in the delicate flavor of that from other countries, and being of a strong type it cannot absorb such delicate flavorings as vanilla, which is often added to the better types of cocoa.

The Germans Have Made a Success in the Cameroons.

A NEWER field for the growing of this product is the West Coast of Africa and from this source the cocoa is not much better than that of Brazil, as it is all grown by ignorant natives who have no care for its proper cultivation or scientific preparation. Disease too is rampant. But in the Cameroons, the plantations were laid out by the Germans and in conjunction with the cultivation of the oil-palm is proving a great success.

In the West Indies the cacao plantations mostly belong to the old French and Spanish Creole families. But, since the indentured immigration from India has ceased, it has been so difficult to obtain sufficient local labor at a reasonable rate, that many of the plantations appear to be in a sadly neglected state of weeds and parasites of moss and fern on the branches, and neglect encourages the spread of the many diseases to which the delicate cacao is a prey, so that the future of the industry in Trinidad and the neighboring islands does not seem too bright. Cacao cultivation does not lend itself readily to the introduction of mechanical cultivation to replace the lack of labor, nor were the old plantations, made in the days when slaves were plentiful, laid out with regard to the conserving of labor.

The manufacture of the cocoa beans into the powdered product of commerce is interesting. The beans are first roasted and the thin shells removed. They are then subjected to crushing and the rich oil, or cocoa-butter as it is called, extracted, for were this to be allowed to remain the product would be apt to become rancid, and in the cocoa brewed for drinking purposes the oil would float on the top in an unpleasant way, besides rendering the cocoa indigestible to many people. So this oil is removed and cooled into moulds and forms a very valuable product for the drug trade. The crushed beans are then allowed to dry out before crushing into powder to which is added certain fats to take the place of the oil that has been removed, and a certain amount of sugar. For the manufacture of chocolate, the powder is subjected to a great deal of rolling and beating in order to reduce it to as fine a paste as possible before putting it in the moulds, for no sense of grittiness must remain.

The Flavor of Chocolate is Enhanced by Proper Making.

IN THE West Indies we have watched the Creole women patiently crushing up the beans by means of a round stone rolled on a flat one. The chocolate thus produced they roll into little sticks for sale in the local markets. It contains of course all the oil, and is therefore much the richer in food value. The way to make this into a perfect cup of delicious cocoa is to crumble the chocolate stick into the cup, add the boiling water or milk and then use the swizzle stick. By this method no sign of the oil appears and the drink retains all its full richness and aroma. This applies to the making of all cocoa—never boil the chocolate but first add the sugar and then the boiling milk, beating the whole up till it froths. The value of a cup of cocoa thus made is very great as well as exceeding comforting on a cold day. Thus this product of the tropics finds great favor in the cold countries of the north, and is one of the CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

Too Much Food.

IT MATTERS comparatively little what you eat, if you eat no more than you can digest and assimilate, and that you need to maintain heat and energy, and to replace the small amount wasted by the body. Ninety-nine per cent of "civilized" persons eat from two to three times as much as this. Hence the prevalence of sickness, suffering and premature death. And the surplus food eaten would feed every starving person in the world.

I tell my consultants that it is much less harmful to undereat of bad food than it is to overeat of good food. Of course, you need not do either.

We have heard much about temperance in drinking, but little is said about temperance in eating. Yet consider this! For every person who becomes sick or dies prematurely from excessive drinking, there are a thousand who become sick or die too soon from overeating. Some of these people—may we say unfortunately?—don't die, but linger on for many years, getting dyspepsia or rheumatism, according as their digestion is weak or strong, making life a hell to themselves and to all around them. Surely, therefore, we are justified in saying that intemperance in eating does vastly more harm than intemperance in drinking. Moreover a condition of chronic blood poisoning from excessive waste matter in food may easily lead to a condition of mind in which a man gravitates naturally to deeds of violence.

A man who all his life had been what is known as a "moderate drinker" was in the habit of boasting that he had never been drunk in his life. He gave up alcohol altogether, and a few weeks later told a friend that he had been under a delusion—that he had never been sober in his life. This is as true of food drunkards as of liquor drunkards—of those who habitually overeat, going to the table simply because it is meal time, or because they have paid their board, of people who eat a variety of ill assorted sloppy foods at a meal, turning their stomachs into fermenting vats. And this includes a large majority of men and women.

Such people pass through life after a fashion, but they don't really live. They only exist. They are never quite up to the mark, physically, mentally or morally—never capable of doing the very best that is in them. They suffer from a chronic form of more or less severe auto-intoxication, with partial paralysis of the internal organs from gas pressure.

During a recent hot spell in New York State, more than half of a company of National Guards succumbed completely to heat and fatigue, during a five mile march. Those who eat too much, and who eat largely of stimulating foods, can never expect to begin to be able to successfully undergo any unusual test of endurance like this, although it would be easily borne by one who habitually leads the simple life, and adopts a truly temperate and natural dietary.

How often we read of people collapsing during an excessive heat spell. This is not at all surprising. What would you think of a man who, on a warm Fourth of July, would light a big fire in his parlor stove, put on a fur overcoat and sit in front of it? Yet, that is just about what people do who continue to take into their body in summer the same amount of heat-producing fuel that they consume in winter, when they are probably eating even in winter two or three times as much as they should. No wonder people get sick. It would be a miracle if they didn't get sick. Yet again, how often we hear or read about some fine looking, big, bulky, fleshy man dropping off suddenly, like the snuffing out of a candle. Watch your weight.

As I have said 99 per cent of what we call "civilized" people eat from two to three times as much as is necessary or desirable, the working off of the surplus matter involving an immense strain upon the system. Sometimes, when the depurating organs are not vigorous enough, the surplus is stored up in the shape of fat, which is potential disease matter, to make trouble later on.

This surplus of food is the cause of more than nine-tenths of our ailments. It immensely reduces our mental and physical power. By eating half as much, and chewing it thoroughly, we could do twice as much work, with more ease and comfort. The careful and complete investigations made at Yale, by Prof. Chittenden, have shown that a man possesses vastly more endurance on one-third of the amount of proteid usually consumed.

Isn't it strange, you may say, that the members of the medical fraternity never tell, their patients about these simple, yet striking facts? Well scarcely, because a great majority of them have no knowledge of the rudimentary facts in regard to food and food values. It has not been taught them in their college routine. And since leaving college they have devoted themselves to doping sick people, or cutting them up. Then again, if every one learned that by cutting down their food half or two-thirds they might get well and stay well, it would not be a very profitable sort of a proposition for the doctors, would it?

It is true that some physicians are beginning to pay attention to the important subject of diet, in treating their patients, Most of these, however, still impress upon their patients the idea that dope is the main thing, and diet only a side issue.

Surely, even a fool may see that the weight and strength of a person does not depend on the amount of food that person inserts into the hole in his face, but upon how much of that food is digested and assimilated. How often do you meet thin, cadaverous looking people, who eat two or three times as much as some of their fat friends. Remember, however, that all fat is potential disease—stored up effete matter.

Every ounce of food swallowed that the gastric juice cannot digest and the lungs aerate is a poison. And remember this: Nature does not furnish an amount of gastric juice sufficient for the food you may eat, but only for the food that your system requires at that moment.

dhem-etttini-suctsserndigestrciSHRLDURDL

Following is from "Diet in Disease" by Dr. Linda Hazzard:

"Digestion requires expenditure of vital force. And every manifestation of vital force exhausts a portion of daily supply. He who pursues a sedentary vocation, and eats three meals each day, must perforce expend one-third to one-half of his vital power in the labor of digestion, and of eliminating a surplus of material, since his body needs are low in comparison with those of the day-laborer, yet his vital organs are given work far in excess of their ability to perform. The banker, the shopkeeper, and the clerk, more often than not, shorten their lives, exist in comparative misery, and go through their allotted days with two-thirds or one-half the energy they might possess were they to adopt a diet proportioned to actual necessity. In these instances, food rubbish in excess quantity ferments and putrifies in the alimentary canal, its products are absorbed into the venous circulation, already vitiated by tissue refuse, and the subject is continuously stimulated by septic poison—is auto-intoxicated, or drunk with the results of his own decomposition."

Is it wonderful, however, that so-called civilized human beings eat too much, when, for hundreds of generations, their forefathers have eaten too much before them, when their mother has been urged to eat two or three times too much while carrying them in her womb, and when as infants they have been grossly overfed, this being the sole cause of a vast majority of "infant complaints." Dr. Charles E. Page, in his book "How to Feed the Baby," shows conclusively that three daily feedings of moderate quantity—and none at night—are all that should be allowed the infant, from birth. Dr. Page brought up his own exceptionally healthy and robust baby on two meals a day. Compare this with the ordinary feeding of infants. Poor little tots!

Whenever there is any reference to diet, you are sure to run across the figures of Voit—about four ounces of albumen daily. These writers either do not know, or else ignore the fact that later Voit reduced his figures to a little over one ounce, or not more than one-fourth of the original estimate. Think of the harm that must be done by this enormous overconsumption of proteid food, that cannot be utilized by the system. It is, indeed, the cause of most of our ills.

You may say this is all right for a man who sits in an office, but it would not do in the cast of a hard working man. Nay! nay! Pauline. The hardest work of the world—the greatest feats of continued endurance—are performed by those who eat the least food. A bowl of grain and a handful of fish is considered an ample meal for the Japanese coolie, who is called upon to perform ten or twelve hours of hard manual toil in a day, sometimes running at a dog trot for thirty or forty miles, hauling a white man, who, on his three big meals of rich food daily, could not begin to think of performing a third part of such a task.

Cornaro was a good example of what true temperance in eating will do for a man. Cornaro was an Italian nobleman, who lived about four hundred years ago. Before he was 40 years old his dissipation and riotous living had brought him to a point where his doctors gave him up as a "goner." He determined to fool the doctors and to save himself, so he adopted a most temperate dietary, which he has described in a charming book that he wrote. He reduced his food to twelve ounces a day, with fourteen ounces of light Italian wine. These twelve ounces did not probably represent more than about six ounces of water-free food, or only from one-half to one-third of what the average person consumes. Cornaro lived to be over a hundred years of age, retaining his faculties and thorougnly enjoying life until the end.

Here is a communication sent some time ago to the editor of the Care of the Body by a well known Los Angeles man. The correspondent added that during the period referred to he had been doing a very largely increased amount of hard mental work:

"For sixteen months my wife and I have been following the no-breakfast plan, and often one meal a day plan, especially on Sunday. Tea and coffee have been eliminated from our diet, and only about one-fourth the amount of meat and milk consumed. We would not go back to our old plan of living for any consideration. Net result for myself:

"1. Perfect health. A keener relish and thorough enjoyment of all my meals.

"2. I have control of myself, instead of being controlled by my several habits.

"3. No doctor bills to pay, nor one ounce of medicine taken during the period.

"4. Have accomplished more than I ever did during the same period.

"5. Catharrhal affection removed.

"Net result for my wife:

"1. Very poor health with all hope of recovery abandoned, to begin with. Not an ounce of medicine taken nor a dollar doctor bill.

"2. One-third saved in labor in household duties.

"3. Indigestion cured in three months.

"4. Severe headaches cured in three months.

"5. A most obstinate case of constipation of ten years' standing completely cured at the end of thirteen months of hygienic living.

"6. A keen appetite for each meal, without that ever present fear of suffering from the effects."

Dr. J. H. Kellogg, who presides over that great institution, the Battle Creek Sanatorium, wrote to me as follows, in regard to his own dietetic habits:

"I am writing at 6 p.m.; I have just finished my first and only meal for the day. My meal has consisted of one-half ounce of butter, a cup of bean broth, the equivalent of two moderate-sized potatoes, a half-dozen rice biscuits, a small dish of spinach, a small bunch of grapes, and one slice of zwieback. I took this morning a small cup of thin tomato broth, a tablespoonful of malt honey, and a small dish of stewed cherries. This is my total ration for the day. On some days I eat more, but I am sure I never eat so much as 1800 or 1900 calories."

The late Dr. W. R. C. Latson of New York, formerly editor of Health Culture, one of the sanest writers on dietetic subjects, wrote in answer to a correspondent:

NERVES

AMETROPATHY is the most modern, the least understood, yet the most rational method of dealing with disorders of the nerves and internal organs. It is not suited to conditions due to organic lesion or infection. It cannot, for instance, cure tuberculosis (though it may remove the cause of the depletion that brought on consumption;) but it will produce positive results in cases of Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Heart, Epilepsy, St. Vitus's Dance, Stuttering, and in functional derangements manifested by states of Fear, Despondency, Headaches, Insomnia, Asthma or Indigestion.

Persons who (in spite of sound organs) are suffering physically or mentally, particularly those subject to spells of unnatural fatigue, and to whom the known methods of treatment do not bring lasting relief, will probably find in AMETROPATHY the solution of their difficulties.

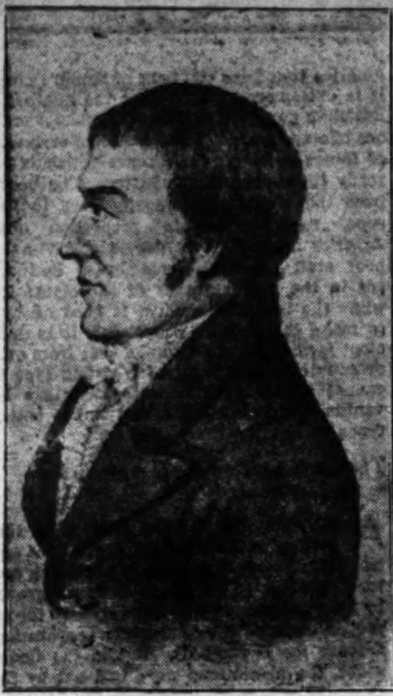
HEALING TO ALL LININGS

Robert Tannahill, Poet and Song Writer.

BY JAMES MAIN DIXON.



Robert Tannahill, Scotch, Poet and Song Writer.

YOUNG people in Scotland are often better acquainted with the popular songs of the land of the heather than with the biblical lore that their teachers in Sunday-school insist upon. There is a well-authenticated story of a boy in a class which was going through Bible history, and which had come to the story of David. "Now, who was Jesse?" inquired the teacher of this boy, who at once replied: "He was the flower o' Dunblane." The musical lines of this century-old song are in truth very familiar to the Scottish ear. Born in that "nest of singing birds," Paisley on the River Cart, Robert Tannahill is true to the musical note. There is an anecdote of the great Prof. John Wilson, himself a Paisley man—perhaps better known to the literary world as Christopher North of the Noctes Ambrosianae—which throws light on the matter. Another Paisley poet and writer, Hugh Macdonald, was visiting Edinburgh when Wilson was at the height of his fame and the Noctes Ambrosianae were in full swing. He was able to make an appointment with the big man, one Sunday in August in the year 1846. "In course of their conversation they came upon Tannahill's 'Lass of Arranteenie' and Wordsworth's 'Lucy.' Macdonald expressed himself favorably for the words of Tannahill.

"The professor at once allowed it was lines, and asked Macdonald to repeat them. Macdonald repeated Wordsworth's first:

"'She dwelt amongst the untrodden ways,
Beside the springs of Dove:
A maid whom there were few to praise,
And none at all to love.*
A violet by a mossy stone,
Half-hidden from the eye;
Fair as a star when only one
Is shining in the sky.'"

---

*Misquoted: "A maid whom there were none to praise, and very few to love."

The professor thought the transition from the violet to the star was perhaps too violent or too far-fetched. Tannahill's lines are:

"'Yon mossy rosebud doun the howe,
Just opening fresh an' bonny,
Blinks sweetly 'neath the hazel bough,
An's scarcely seen by ony;
Sae, sweet amidst her native hills,
Obscurely blooms my Jeanie—
Mair fair an' gay than rosy May,
The lass o' Arranteenie!'

The professor at once allowed it was very beautifully expressed, at least equal to Wordsworth's. It will be sung, whereas the other will not." I have taken the anecdote from the editor's notes to the standard edition of Tannahill's "Poems and Songs," by David Semple. It is unfortunate that he misquotes Wordsworth, however, in making the point. Arranteenie is an exquisitely situated hamlet on the Kyles of Bute.

Jessie Tenant, "His Lass" for Three Years Inspired this Song.

BUT of course it is by his "Jessie, the Flower o' Dunblane," that Tannahill is best known to the world. It was addressed to a real Scotch lassie from this Perthshire town; once an episcopal see, whose cathedral, now a parish church, contains an artistic little window that was Ruskin's delight. Jessie Tenant was born there in the year 1770, and came when a girl, with her mother, to Paisley. There she became acquainted with Robert Tannahill, and was "his lass" for some three years. As in the case of Annie Laurie, the course of true love did not run smooth. Jessie was a blithe girl, full of animal spirits, and poor Robert, quiet and retiring, perhaps a little moody, proved too mute and dull a companion in their lovers' walks. The first two stanzas alone seem to belong to the period of his courtship:

"The sun has gone doun o'er the lofty Benlomond,
And left the red clouds to preside o'er the scene,
While lanely I stray in the calm simmer gloamin',
To muse on sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dunblane.

How sweet is the brier wi' its saft faulding blossom,
And sweet is the birk, wi' its mantle o' green;
Yet sweeter and fairer, and dear to this bosom,
Is lovely young Jessie, the flower o' Dunblane."

The rupture came about in this way. Tannahill was Jessie's recognized beau at the dances held in New street, in the hall of the Masonic Lodge. An annual dance was to be given in a neighboring district, and one of the local beaux invited Jessie to be his partner for the evening. She had first to ask Robert's permission, which was given; but he became so uneasy at her receiving other attentions, that he concealed himself in the passage leading to Jessie's residence, awaiting her return on the fateful evening. As she said goodnight to her escort, who had greatly enjoyed her company, he planted a kiss on her rosy lips. The sound was carried to the ears of the unhappy eavesdropper, and he left for home in black despair. Next day the fair one received these two quatrains:

"But when I knew thy plighted lips
Once to a rivals prest,
Love-smothered independence rose,
And spurn'd thee from my breast.

The fairest flower in Nature's field
Conceals the rankling thorn;
So, thou, sweet flower! as false as fair,
This once kind heart hath torn."

Jessie ran off to her favorite friend, and in tears showed the bitter lines, sobbing out: "See what Bob has sent me!" The break was final; and a year or two later she was married to another. She survived the poet by about a quarter of a century; and lies buried in the old West Relief Church (now United Free) on Canal street, not far from the Tannahill home on Queen street. It is the church of which Dr. George Hutton, afterwards Principal Hutton of Edinburgh was for many years pastor—a prominent ecclesiastic in Scotland during the latter half of the nineteenth century.

Some of Jessie's children who emigrated to Canada kept up the family tradition, and every New Year's Day were accustomed to sing the two songs, "Jessie, the Flower o' Dunblane," and the "Farewell."

Popularized by Jack Shaw at the Paisley Theater.

THE first two stanzas were suppressed at the publication of the first edition of the song, which appeared in the Scots Magazine two years before the poet's death. R. A. Smith, the well-known Paisley composer, with whom Tannahill became friendly in the year 1804, set the lines to music, which was published in 1816 by the Glasgow firm of Stevens. It was made popular largely through the vogue of Jack Shaw a comic singer and comedian attached to the Paisley Theater; the Harry Lauder of his day, who sang in the Brahm's Concerts in Glasgow and London.

The third stanza of the song is an unfortunate insertion of later date; we should read on without break from the second to the fourth:

"Sing on, thou sweet mavis, thy hymn to the e'enin,
Thou'rt dear to the echoes o' Calderwood glen;
Sae dear to this bosom, sae artless and winnin',
Is charming young Jessie, the flower o' Dunblane.

How lost were my days till I met wi' my Jessie,
The sports o' the city seemed foolish and vain;
I ne'er saw a nymph I would ca' my dear lassie,
Till charmed wi' sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dunblane.

Tho' mine were the station of loftiest grandeur,
Amidst its profusion I'd languish in pain,
And reckon as naethin the heicht o' its splendor,
If wantin' sweet Jessie, the flower o Dunblane."

My father, the Rev. James Main Dixon of the Free Martyrs' Church of Paisley, situated just a few blocks from the West Relief Church on Canal street, was a friend of Dr. George Hutton, whose eldest son George and I were in the same class in the "Big Schule" or Neilston Institution. When we went home together, as often happened, it was hardly a detour to pass by the interesting Tannahill home at 6 Queen street, built by the poet's father in 1775, when Robert was a lad of 11. James Tannahill was one of four brothers who went north from their native town of Kilmarnock, in the year 1756, and settled in the flourishing town of Paisley, where the manufacture of textile fabrics was rising in importance. The two leading manufacturers at the time, as it happened, were Ayrshire men, Humphrey Fulton from Beith, and Andrew Brown from Kilmarnock. The Tannahills were workmen of a superior type, and James Tannahill, the poet's father, a man of gentle ways and considerable personal pride, held positions of civic trust, being one of the directors of the hospital in New Sneddon street.

Contrast in Building Costs Striking as Compared with Present.

WE HAVE a record of the money it took to build the Tannahill cottage, which may be interesting in these days of high prices. If we reckon the pound sterling at its present value of $4, then the wood cost $55, the windows $21, the wright work $15, the mason work $66, the roof and thatching $23; and the total amounted to $244. Here James Tannahill lived for twenty-six years, and here he died; and his eldest son Robert continued to occupy the house with his widowed mother and younger brothers. When his mental and physical health began to fail alarmingly in 1810, he was watched carefully by his anxious mother; but on the night of the 16th of May he eluded her watchful eyes, and disappeared in the darkness. Next morning his dead body was found in the neighboring canal, where he had thrown himself. He was in his forty-sixth year at the time of his death.

For many years Tannahill had the intense gratification of hearing his songs sung wherever he might chance to be, by persons quite unknown to him. "Perhaps the highest pleasure ever I derived from these things" (his compositions) he wrote to a friend the year before his death, "has been in hearing, as I walked down the pavement at night, a girl within doors rattling away at some of them." There were thirty-three songs in the first edition of his poems, published in 1807. Two of the most popular, "Loudon's Bonnie Woods and Braes," and "Jessie, the Flower o' Dunblane," appeared subsequently in the pages of the Scots Magazine, in October, 1807, and March, 1808, respectively.

A trip made to Lancashire with his brother during the hard times of the year 1800, in search of better-paid work, did his health no good. By the year 1804 he had a chronic ailment of the chest, which affected his spirits; for he wrote these lines to a friend in Perth:

"But, ere a few short summers gae,
Your friend will mix his kindred clay;
For fell disease tugs at my breast
To hurry me away."

Totally Failed in Writing of Songs Set to Irish Airs.

THE poet, whose forte was the writing of musical songs in the Scottish vernacular, made two blunders which weighed on his sensitive spirit. He tried to write appropriate songs to Irish airs, when he neither understood the motive of the original song nor of the old air to which it properly belonged. And so his fourteen Irish songs were pronounced failures. Moreover, always an admirer of the drama, he imagined he could write a powerful play in standard English, overestimating his powers, and when it was rejected, despair took hold of him. Tannahill remains to posterity the author of such immortal songs as "The Bonnie Wood o' Craigielee," "The Braes o' Gleniffer," "Gloomy Winter's Now Awa," and "The Braes o' Balquither," songs with the very lilt of nature in them:

"Let us go, lassie, go,
To the braes o' Balquither,
Where the blaeberries grow
Mang the bonnie Hielan heather;
Where the deer and the roe,
Lightly bounding together,
Sport the lang summer day
On the braes o' Balquither."

The lines are set, like many of his songs to a Gaelic air, "The Three Carles o' Buchanan." During the last six years of his life he had the constant help of a musical composer of merit, Robert Archibald Smith.

Never was a more fortunate association than the comradeship in song of the writer Tannahill, and the composer, Robert Archibald Smith, which began about the time that the poet's health was breaking down. Smith had come from the south of the Tweed, from Reading in Berkshire. His father was a Lanarkshire man, from West Kilbride, who came to Paisley early in life and took up the trade of a silk-weaver. When times got bad, he left for England, and settled in the town that has since become famous the world over for biscuits. Here he met and married Ann Witcher, who brought him some property; and to the pair there was born, in 1780, a son, Robert Archibald. He early showed a predilection for music, which he much preferred to the loom; and joined the church choir. He also played the flute or clarinet in a volunteer regiment that was formed. In 1800 the family removed to Paisley, and became muslin-weavers and there in 1802 Robert married a Highland girl, Mary MacNicol, from the Isle of Arran. He was active in volunteer bands and all kinds of musical activities, composing the band's marches and quick steps.

The Poet Was Exceedingly Shy by Nature.

WE HAVE from Smith's own pen an interesting account of their friendship. The poet was often a little moody and difficult to handle. "Tannahill," Smith tells us in his "The Harp of Renfrewshire," was particularly averse to enter the company of people above his own station of life. As an instance of this I shall relate one little anecdote: "Miss — of — was particularly fond of the Scottish melody, 'Lord Balgownie's Favorite,' and had expressed a wish to see it united to good music. I accordingly applied to my friend, who produced his song, 'Gloomy Winter's Now Awa,' in a few days. As soon as I had arranged the air, with symphonies and accompaniment for the pianoforte, I waited on the lady, who was much delighted with the verses, and begged of me to invite the author to take a walk with me to the house at any leisure time. I knew that it would be almost impossible to prevail on Robert to allow himself to be introduced by fair means, so, for once, I made use of strategy, the only alternative in my power by beguiling him thither during our first Saturday ramble, under the pretense of being obliged to call with some music I had with me for the ladies. This, however, could not be effected till I had promised not to make him known, in case any of the family came to the door; but how great was my astonishment when Miss — came forward to invite him into the house by name. I shall never forget the awkwardness with which he accompanied us to the music room. He sat as if he were quite petrified, till the magic of the music and the great affability of the ladies reconciled him to his situation. In a short time Mr. — came in, was introduced to his visitor in due form, and with that goodness of heart and simplicity of manner for which he is deservedly esteemed by all who have the pleasure of knowing him, chatted with his guest till near dinner time, when Robert again became terribly uneasy, as Mr. — insisted on our staying to dine with the family. Many a rueful look was cast to me, and many an excuse was made to get away; but, alas! there was no escaping with a good grace, and, finding that I was little inclined to understand his signals, the kind request was at length reluctantly complied with. . . . I believe that, when we left the mansion, the poet entertained very different sentiments from those with species are yellow, but the Californica has a dark-brown center while the farinosa has an orange one. The stalks and foliage of the latter are "floury," whence comes the specific name. The encelias have substantial woody bases, usually two or three feet in height, above which there is a generous top that is largely herbaceous. They are not classed by the Forest Service even among the unimportant chaparral species. But I think this must be an oversight, at least in regard to the species of the Coast Ranges, which in many places is copselike in its development.

"What is that cactuslike bush covered with small wild roses?" I'm sure I should hear you exclaim when you go out into the foothills in April or May for the first time.

That! Why, that's a gilia. Or rather it was a gilia, until the botanists a few years ago discovered that it wasn't altogether orthodox. Now they call it Leptodactylon—Leptodactylon Californica. But common people such as you and I call it phlox, "prickly-plox." The "phlox" comes from its belonging to the Phlox family, and you find out where the "prickly" comes in when you try to gather some of it. It doesn't look anything like the "Sweet William" of the eastern woods, yet when I came to California I immediately transferred to it the allegiance which I once gave to the wild blue phlox (Phlox maculata.) I think it was partly on account of the way in which the flowers held themselves, although their delicate perfume may have had something to do with it. When in bloom the shrub is a beauty, sprinkled as it is with a shower of pink. The flowers look as if they grew in clusters; but they don't. Each one is at the tip of a prickly stalk of some length, and these stalks have the habit of thrusting themselves upward in close company, as if they were vying with one another in a race to see which can reach the highest point before blooming. It may be, however, only because of a sociable nature. This sociable habit makes it easy for us to gather an armful of the flowers. But we must be careful how we go about it! The stems are brittle—which helps some—but the prickles are long enough and strong enough to win our respect, and to make us put on gloves before we tackle them. The flowers are fragile, too, and careless handling spoils them. After all, they look better as natural trail decorations than when crowded together in a vase.

The prickly phlox is at its best from March until June, but we are likely to find stray blossoms almost any time of the year we have a mind to look for them. The shrub grows quite generally throughout the Elfin-Forest, but is nowhere plentiful enough to be classed as of any considerable importance as a forest-cover. But nevertheless it adds some little to help make up the great whole. And as a decorative feature of the chaparral landscape it is justly entitled to a high station.

On the seaward side of the coastwise mountains in the chaparral belt we find another decorative shrub. This is the cliff aster (Malacothrix saxatilis.) It has a woody trunk two or three feet in height and a crown of brittle, semiherbaceous stems, and is endowed with an abundant fringy foliage. On bright sunshiny days nearly the whole year through the top is plentifully set with white composite rosettes an inch and a half or two inches across. These composite flowers are made up of rays only—after the pattern of the dandelion—which gives them a fringy appearance in harmony with the foliage. At night and during foggy days the flowers close up and take on an elongated, bud-shape form, and are almost completely lost among the foliage. During continuous heavy fog they may remain closed for days at a time, only to open with the coming of sunshine. It is a generous winter bloomer. One of the finest bouquets I ever gathered of it I brought in during the Christmas holidays from along the ocean cliffs near Santa Barbara.

Away from the ocean, Malacothrix tenuifolia takes the place of the cliff aster, but it is in no way the equal of its fog-loving sister. Its stalk is straggling, the foliage very sparse, and the flowers much smaller. In every way it suffers in contrast with the Malacothrix of the sea cliffs.

It may be observed that some of the shrubs dealt with in this chapter have quite a little of the herbaceous in their makeup. I wish to add that there is a numerous group of those which are even more herblike. These will be taken up in the next chapter.

which he entered it. . . . when Mr. —'s name happened to be mentioned in his hearing afterwards, it generally called forth expressions of respect and admiration. 'Gloomy Winter's Now Awa,' became a very popular song, and was the reigning favorite in Edinburgh for a considerable time."

Popularity of Tannahill's Songs Due to R. A. Smith's Music.

R. A. SMITH has been described for us as a "musician of sterling talent. His compositions are tender, and tinged with melancholy; simple and unpretending, and always graceful and unaffectedly elegant. His music is entirely free from scientific pedantry." We are all fond of the graceful and euphonious descant of "Jessie, the Flower o' Dunblane," with the beautiful and happy final cadence resting on the name. Other songs of Tannahill that he has set to music are: "Langsyne Beside the Woodland Burn;" "Loudon's Bonnie Woods and Braes," adapted from the air, "Earl Moira's Visit to Scotland;" "Despairing Mary;" "The Witless Wish;" and "The Poor Maniac's Song."

Sometime after Tannahill's death he became precentor in the ancient Abbey Church of Paisley, where there are three royal tombs; and inauguratd there sacred musicals, which became quite a precedent. The first great Tonic-Solfa schoolchildren's gathering held in Scotland—which I myself attended—was held within the time-honored walls of the Abbey.

In the year 1820 he began a musical compilation, the "Scottish Minstrel," which appeared in six volumes during the next three years and is still a standard. Before the final volume came out he had moved to Edinburgh, where he associated himself with a musical circle of which the Rev. Dr. Andrew Thomson was a leader, being precentor in the domed St. George's Church of which Thomson was minister. Thomson was deeply interested in psalmody, and composed appropriate music for the Twenty-fourth Psalm, still a favorite in Scottish churches, and known as St. George's, Edinburgh: "Ye gates, lift up your heads!"

R. A. Smith also contributed several favorite tunes to Scottish psalmody; notably the moving strains of Invocation, sung to the Forty-third Psalm: "O send thy light forth and thy truth. Let them be guides to me." Also the tune of St. Lawrence, and of St. Mirren's, named after the patron saint of Paisley, His anthem, "How beautiful upon the mountains," is still sung and enjoyed. Smith was active as a teacher of music, and in 1826 brought out an excellent "Introduction to Singing." Two years later he published "Sacred Harmony of the Church of Scotland," which made a name a household word over Scotland. He died the following year, worn out with his labors, before he had completed the half century.

To conclude with Tannahill; the name has not yet died out. A former president of the Celtic Society of Los Angeles, Mr. Andrew Chaffey, active in banking circles as head of the flourishing Home and Hibernian Bank, numbers among his friends, Lieut.-Col. Tenant Tannahill of Greenock, a grand-nephew of the poet, and visited him some years ago at his home on the Clyde. A daughter of Col. Tannahill's, Miss Patie, was married to Francis Clyde Chaffey, an engineer resident in Edinburgh, and a cousin of our townsman. There is also a Robert Tannahill, manager of the Bank of Montreal branch office at Belleville, Ont., Can., and well-known to many residents of Los Angeles, who keeps alive in the Dominion, the name of the gifted Paisley poet.

It Pays to Advertise.

Does it pay better to lower prices a little bit here and a little bit there, a little bit today and a little bit tomorrow, or to make only one bite of the price-cutting cherry? It would seem as if the best results have been scored by those who acted decisively and then make a noise about their courageous course. The public likes to think they are getting bargains. When they read a big ad that at a certain store prices have been slashed all round; they are inclined to swoop down and take advantage of the lower prices. The merchant who takes such a stand reaps a lot of credit, whereas another merchant whose price levels may, on the whole, be just as low, will get no applause if his reductions have been made piece-meal and unspectacularly. There is a story to the effect that a young debutante was placed next to Chauncey M. Depew at a party and that in her nervousness she knocked an egg from the table. Turning to the veteran Senator, she nervously exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Depew, whatever shall I do? I've dropped an egg." "Cackle, madam, cackle!" was his retort. The merchant or manufacturer who drops his prices should do a little cackling these days. It helps to win the applause and to move goods.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

September Reverie.

Blue are the waters of Big Bear Lake,
  Blue, the September sky:
    The rowboat seems
    Like a boat of dreams
  To the oarsman's idle eye.

Brown are the hills at Big Bear Lake,
  Brown, in September's sun:
    The subtle haze
    Of autumn days
  Bespeaks the summer done.

Sweet are the pines at Big Bear Lake,
  Sweet, in Semptember's breeze:
    The pungent scent
    Of sage is blent
  With the odors of forest trees.

Clear is the air of Big Bear Lake,
  Clear, in September's dawn,
    Like the glorious birth
  Of the fragrant earth
  After the storm has gone.

Free is the heart at Big Bear Lake
  Free, in September's reign;
    Free from the strife
    And the cares of life,
  Free from convention's chain.

Dear are the thoughts of Big Bear Lake
  Through September years to run;
    The lake, and the breeze,
    The mountains, the trees,
  The memory of—someone.

band, the anchor she had crossed the sea to find, seated on a low divan, struggling to free himself from the embrace of one of the most beautiful girls she had ever seen. It seemed to Rhoda afterward that none of them had moved for an hour after Dick had succeeded in unwinding the woman's arms from about his neck. It was in reality but a few seconds. Dick said a few words in Spanish to the girl (the only one which she caught was "esposa") and swift as a snake she glided from the room. Then they faced each other, the husband and wife, silently, across an absence of ten months, their faces white and drawn.

The wife's lips moved but no sound came from them. Wounded and stricken she had journeyed to a far country to find—this! Searching for strength, she had found only weakness as great as her own. As great as her own! Ah! She, too, had failed to be strong, and Dick—Why, he had been out here in this strange country alone! He had been sucked in by the quicksand of temptation, as she had been. It seemed as if a sudden light had flashed, illuminating Dick's soul and her own. She saw. She knew. She understood.

Rhoda was the first to speak.

"You—you—are—not—glad—to—see—me, Dick?' she said haltingly, with a plaintive uncertain smile.

"Glad?" The unleashed sweat broke out on Dick's brow. "Glad?" He repeated dazedly. "Why, Rhoda, I—you—you—you—the woman—you will let me explain?"

"There isn't anything to explain, Dick. I understand." She said dropping wearily into a chair. "I felt that you needed me. That is why I came."

"Needed you? Oh, Rhoda! Rhoda!" And like a penitent child he buried his head in her lap.

Some Interesting California Indian Myths.

BY KATHLEEN S. BECK.

AS IS well known the Indians of California as a whole are not of a high order, yet at the same time some of the tribes of the northern part of the State may, both physically and mentally, be favorably compared with virile tribes in other sections of the United States. The reasons for this general lack of development have not been well established although numerous theories have been advanced to account for the condition. But with that phase of the subject we are not immediately concerned, but rather with two myths, the first of which originated with a branch of the Klamath tribe, which occupied the region in the neighborhood of Mt. Shasta; the other coming from the Yocuts of the Kern and Tulare River basins.

These two myths have been chosen as companion stories because they both account for the building of three prominent physical features of California, Mt. Shasta and Shastina, the Sierra Nevada, and the Coast Ranges; and also because they illustrate the intellectual superiority of the northern Indians over their neighbors who occupy a more southerly part of the State.

While the myths and legends of any of the Indian tribes of California are replete with interest, yet literary merit has never been claimed for them. In general they are lamentably lacking in imagination.

A glance at a map of California will show those not fully conversant with the topography of the State that Mt. Shasta is located in the extreme north, and that with the exception of Mt. Lassen it is the most southerly prominent peak of the Cascade Range.

Mt. Shasta is an extinct volcano, and Shastina is the largest of the small craters that from time to time have been built up on the flanks of the larger mountain. None of these craters has erupted within historic times, as counted in Pacific Coast history.

Mt. Shasta has an elevation of 14,380 feet. It has a number of glaciers, the largest and most of which lie on the northern and northeastern slopes of the mountain. The southern and western slopes are well watered, and here innumerable springs and several large rivers originate.

These few points are mentioned that the factual background of the myths may not be overlooked.

The Mythical Origin of Mt. Shasta

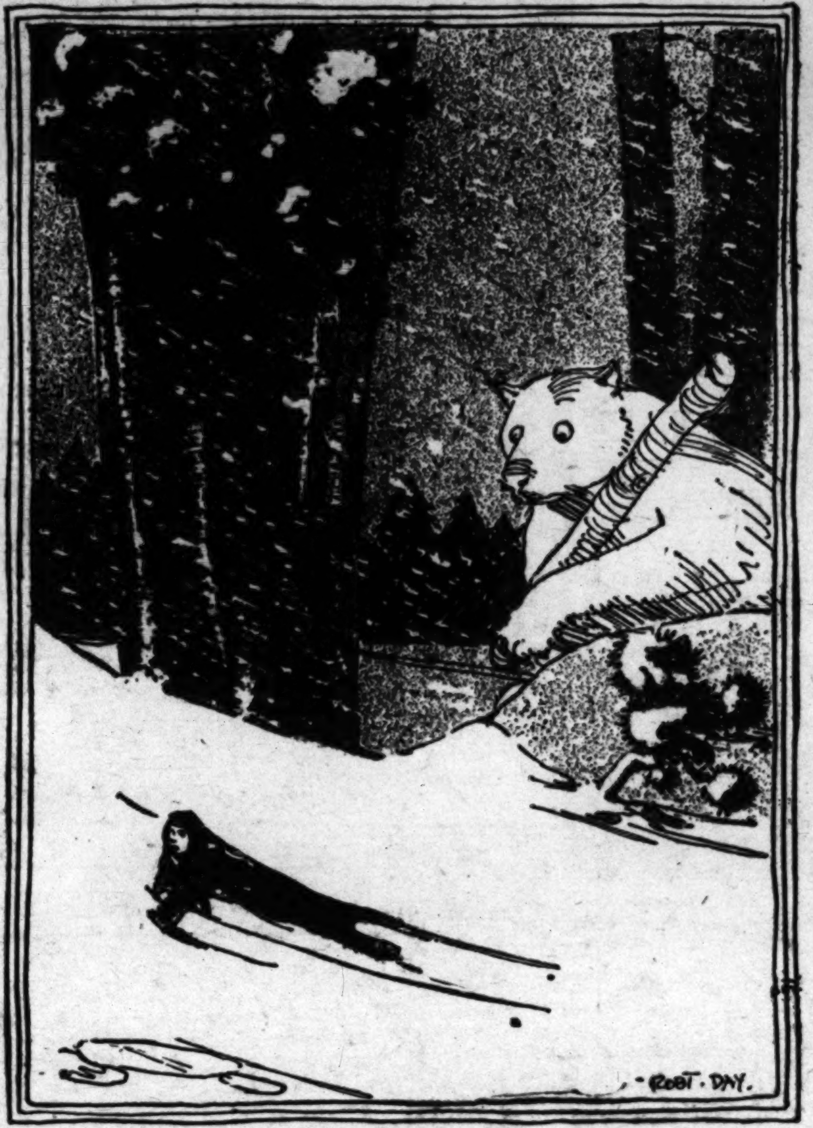
TAKING a large stone the Great Spirit bored a hole in the sky, having determined to come down to earth. Through the great hole he pushed quantities of snow and ice until it was heaped up to the clouds. Then he stepped from mound to mound down to the great white mound, and from it descended to the earth.

As the Great Spirit had planned to make the earth a place fit for living beings, he caused the sun to shine on the south side of the mountain, when the ice and snow melted, running down to the more level places. Then the Great Spirit stuck his finger into the ground many times, and in each place a tree grew up. Taking the fallen leaves of the trees he breathed on them and birds fluttered off into the air.

Next the Great Spirit took a tapering stick and broke it into pieces. From the small end he made fishes; from the middle section all animals with the exception of the grizzly bear. This huge animal he fashioned from the large end of the stick.

To the grizzly was granted special privileges. He was allowed to walk upright, to use his fore paws as man uses his hands. Also he was gifted with cunning, and the power of speech. After the Great Spirit had completed the creation of the grizzly he found him so large and so powerful that he himself feared him, and taking his family he withdrew to Mt. Shasta, wherein he established himself as within a wigwam, with a hole in the top for a chimney from which the smoke was soon seen curling up into the heavens. Here the Great Spirit lived long and happily, quite undisturbed, and he still lives there, but since the white man's coming he has let his hearth-fire burn out.

After many, many snows of peace and happiness for the Great Spirit there came a late and very cold spring with great wind storms. One day toward evening the wind blew so terrifically that the Great Spirit was much annoyed and sent his little girl up to bid the wind cease, cautioning her not to put her head out in the blast, but to reach out her little red arm, make a sign and then deliver her father's message. The little girl ran lightly up the ladder to the hole in the roof, and did everything just as her father had bade her do. Then as she was ready to return, curiosity got the better of her and going one step higher she put her head out to see what was going on. But the wind caught her long hair and she was lifted from her feet, carried through blinding rain and snow until she reached the base of the mountain, where she lay exhausted.



The Father of the Grizzlies Saw the Great Spirit's Daughter.

Now near where the Great Spirit's daughter lay panting and frightened, lived a family of grizzlies, and as it was almost dark the father grizzly was making his way home. Over his shoulder he carried a club and in his hand an elk. Not far from his door he saw the little child lying, and pitying tis misery carried it home to his wife. The mother grizzly also felt sorry for the poor little girl and took her as her own. She brought her up as her child, and when the little girl had grown to be a young woman, the mother grizzly married her to her oldest son.

Now the children of the strange pair were neither like their father nor their mother, they were neither spirit nor animal, but were man.

The whole grizzly nation were delighted with the new race, and as an expression of their pleasure built for the family a wigwam near the home of the Great Spirit. This home of the new race is what is known as Little Shasta, or Shastina.

The grandmother grizzly was by this time quite old and felt that she would soon die. Her conscience troubled her for she had long known that the girl she had brought up as her own was the daughter of the Great Spirit. So she now determined to send word to him that his daughter still lived. Then she called the whole grizzly nation together at the new lodge and told them her story, together with her determination to make amends to the Great Spirit. Her oldest grandson was dispatched with the message.

When the Great Spirit heard the news he was very glad and immediately rushed down the south side of the mountain. He ran so swiftly that the snow that had remained on the southern slopes melted and has so remained to this day.

Now the grizzlies had prepared a worthy reception for the Great Spirit. They stood in two long rows, one on each side of the lodge door. They stood very erectly and carried their great clubs over their arms. But the Great Spirit became very angry and scowled so fearfully at the poor old grandmother grizzly that she dropped dead. At this all the grizzlies set up a terrible howl of sorrow, but the Great Spirit was not moved at their grief. Instead, he took up his long lost and dearly loved daughter on his shoulder, and turning to the howling grizzlies cried, "Peace! Be silent forever. Neither stand upright any more, but use your hands as feet, and look downward until I come again!"

Then he drove all the bears out of the wigwam and shut the door of Little Mt. Shasta, and, still carrying his daughter on his shoulder, passed on to his own mountain. Since then no one has ever seen the Great Spirit nor any of his family.

This legend accounts for the fact that no Indian who counts himself descended from the family of Shastina will ever kill a grizzly bear. And if by some accident a grizzly kills a man, every passer-by places a stone on the spot until a great mound is built up.

Another look at the map will remind one that the mountains that flank east and west California meet at the north and south in great curves, forming the Sacramento-San Joaquin Valley, 400 miles long and fifty miles wide. To the west are the lower mountains, known collectively as the Coast Ranges. On the east side of the State is the magnificent Sierra Nevada. This mountain range does not extend so far north as is commonly supposed, as it terminates at the north fork of the Feather River, a short distance south of Mt. Lassen. To the south the Sierra Nevada meets the Coast Ranges at Tejon Pass. But the myth accounting for the origin of these two mountain ranges makes no boundary distinctions other than east and west. It runs as follows:

How Sierra Nevada and Coast Ranges Were Built.

IN THE beginning the earth was covered by water. At this time there existed a crow, a hawk and a duck. The duck dived to the bottom and brought up a billful of mud. Then the duck died. The crow and the hawk each took a half of the mud and beginning at the Tehachepi Pass commenced each to build a mountain range, working toward the north, the crow on the west side and the hawk on the east. They labored for a long time and finally met at Mt. Shasta. When the honest hawk viewed the two ranges he found that he had been cheated, for the crow's mountains to the west were much higher than his. The crafty crow had robbed him of much of his material.

Then the honest hawk fell to thinking, wondering how he might devise a plan to defeat his enemy, but after thinking for a long time he could not hit upon a scheme. Then picking up a leaf of tobacco he chewed upon it. The tobacco gave him wisdom, and digging his claws deep into the mountains he began turning the great mountain in the water like a great waterwheel. Finally he had reversed their positions, the higher chain lying to the east, and standing to this day as a monument to the hawk's superiority.

The Deer of Yosemite.

The morn in crimson mantle clad,
  Kissed the white crest of old Half Dome,
And smiled on the river dancing glad
  As it bathed the ferns in sparkling foam.

Then out of the lacy green pine woods,
  Three deer with beautiful lustrous eyes,
Came to the river bank and stood
  Gazing at me in awed surprise.

God's creatures, through kindness unafraid,
  Came and ate from my outstretched hand,
And oh the joy in my heart it made
  To know that they seemed to understand

That I was one of His creatures too,
  Weak and sinning, and homeless as they,
Who loved the woods and the lake of blue,
  And worshiped alone in my own wild way.

When the crimson sun had turned to gold,
  And the evening sky is tinged with red,
Come, Children of the Sylvan Wood,
  I'll feed you again ere you go to bed.

And when my Perfect Day is done,
  Loving, rejoicing, undismayed,
I will gratefully say, "Thy Will Be Done"
  And, like the deer, through kindness, be unafraid.

HORTENSE HARDY.

Are You a Leader in Your Town?

Have you ever stopped to consider the value of being the first to do a thing in your town? Think of the free advertising, John Wanamaker got, to say nothing of the tillsful of cash, by being the first to boldly advertise "20 per cent off." And did you notice that Henry Ford, by being the first to start cutting automobile prices, was given free advertising on the front page of almost every newspaper in the land, many of them going so far as to print in detail the old and new price of each make of Ford car? It often takes courage to blaze a new trail, to embark upon an important experiment, to dare to be a pioneer. If you have simmering in your mind an idea which you feel would make a ten-stroke with the public, but which you hesitate to bring forth until circumstances may compel you to do so, just think of the experiences of Wanamaker and Ford. The people admire a leader more than a trailer.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

A little girl stood at the bottom of the stairs calling:

"Here, Fido! Here, Fido!"

A man who likes puppies stopped a moment to see what kind of a pet the little girl had.

When the pet made its appearance he exclaimed in surprise:

"Didn't I hear you call it Fido?"

"Yes," the little girl replied complacently. "I know it is a cat, but I am having it for a dog."—[Youngstown Telegram.

CALIFORNIA COURTESY.

BY NO-MATTER-WHO.

IT SEEMS part of the air. The very atmosphere is impregnated with it. The dainty lady stepping from the not-less-dainty interior of her limousine radiates it, the tired clerk in the busy department store exudes a patience and politeness which does not appear to be the variety that is paid for by her Saturday night's check.

The street-car conductor, the policeman, the bootblack and the newsboy are her close rivals; politeness everywhere, courtesy, attention and patience, and the latter, at times, under most trying circumstances, I am sure.

The heart of California beats in unison with the pulse of humanity, the high lights of the City of the Angels outnumber the shadows.

In a hurried street-car trip of a few miles to the city one day last week this was illustrated to me.

A gentleman boarded the car, not having his car fare ready, and commenced a diligent search in all the pockets he apparently possessed, for it, but failed to find it; resurrecting a penny he handed it to the conductor, "Here is a penny anyway," he said, with a humorous twinkle in his eye—continuing to look for the illusive nickel to add to it. The conductor beamed back and said, "That's fine," and just here the nickel was found and handed over to take its place beside the penny; the waiting conductor beamed again, an answering gleam shone from the gentleman's eyes and he passed on to his seat; the transaction had occupied several minutes, but the waiting conductor did not forget himself. We will admit that the gentleman's kindly out-reaching attitude toward life and the world won courtesy and it was easy to be polite to him. The same gentleman (a stranger in Los Angeles as well as I) had been seated but a few moments when a wee maiden of about eight summers boarded the car and passed demurely down the aisle, holding tightly in her hand three or four old fashioned flowers. The seats were filled so she stood, endeavoring the while to pin three of the flowers on her simple little white dress. She finally succeeded and then still held a fourth one in her hand, a dutch pink it was with ragged petals and a pink and white heart.

The gentleman of the penny incident smiled and touched his coat lapel; she looked at the flowerless lapel of his coat, lifted shy brown eyes to his face, and then leaning over slipped the flower in the buttonhole.

A dour-looking man sat across the aisle. I had noticed his tired eyes and lined, weary face, and thought they gave him a bitter expression that he was never intended to have and I remember wondering if something had made him forget how to smile.

When he saw the golden-haired, brown-eyed child lean over and with deft, graceful fingers fasten the flower in the coat lapel, he smiled and his face was beautiful!

"One touch of kindness, sympathy, makes the whole world kin" (with apologies for the alteration.)

A few minutes later I passed through a busy market. A very short gentleman was endeavoring to make his way through the throng, and was succeeding very badly; a tall man (perhaps he was six feet two) happened to be behind him. Smiling, he placed a hand on either shoulder of the shorter man and guided him this way and that until he had reached an open space, when he dropped his hands and passed on through the crowd. Evidently they were entire strangers, just as the gentleman on the car and the wee, brown-eyed maid had been.

A little later I happened to be at a glove counter in one of the busy department stores where some one was waiting for a pair of freshly cleaned gloves. The gloves were handed her wrapped up. She started to unwrap them when the clerk took the package and slipped the gloves out. The lady examined them and then put them back in the envelope.

The clerk looked at her anxiously. "They were afraid you would not be pleased with then," she said. "Oh, yes," smiled the possessor of the gloves, they were very much soiled, and they look very well." They exchanged smiles and the lady left the store.

These little scenes from real life, all flashed before me in a brief half hour's time.

A little while before a lady and gentleman were awaiting a car on the corner of one of the boulevards, when a young man hardly out of his teens drove by—then stopped—looking back, he said, "Are you going to the city?" "Yes," I heard them say. "Won't you ride?" he asked politely. They thanked him, got in, and drove off. No it was not much, just a trifle, but trifles make up the life we live. Is it any wonder that California is a mecca for those who are battle scarred, those who bear the marks of struggle with grief and pain and the many heart-breaking circumstances that existence brings to us all?

WILD ANIMALS CURE THEMSELVES.

BY EDWARD T. MARTIN.

MUCH that is known of healing herbs and roots, of the curative powers of certain barks and gums, has been learned from wild animals. The medicinal springs at Bath in England were discovered by a drove of semiwild hogs afflicted with an itching skin disease. The springs near Saratoga in York State were shown to the Indians, so legend says, by a rheumatic old wolf who, coming for his daily baths, went away so much improved that they were prompted to try the waters themselves, and receiving much benefit therefrom, communicated the news to their allies, the English.

Several of the sulphur springs in California were originally deer licks; and forty years ago there was no way so sure of catching wild pigeons as by setting a net over some muck hole strongly impregnated with sulphur. The birds would fill up on the thin black mud. They were so crazy after this that I have seen them pile one on top of another to a depth of a foot or more, sinking the under birds into the ooze so that many perished. This, after the eggs were hatched—the mud being an important factor in aiding the old birds to form the curd with which the young were fed.

As eminent a man as John Wesley, in his directions on the art of keeping well, wrote that "many of the medicines used among the common people of my time were first discovered by animals using them to cure their aches and pains." He said also: "It looked reasonable that if they would heal animals, they would also heal man."

Bears are the wise people of the wild. What they do not know about the art of self-healing is not worth knowing. As an instance: Some years ago there was a big brown bear that was a terror to the ranchers and homesteaders in the Olympic Mountains. No hog was safe when he took a notion that he wanted fresh pork, no smokehouse when he preferred it smoked. To upset a beehive and eat the honey it contained and even the bees themselves was a favorite trick, and on such pickings, together with salmon in fish time, and berries during the fall, this bear got very fat and impudent.

A homesteader, fearful that the bear would take a fancy to one of his children after the pork supply had given out, laid in wait for the animal and one afternoon put a big bullet from a Springfield rifle clear through him—in one side, out the other. The bear ran leaving a double trail of blood, but darkness came before he could be run down. Early next day dogs were obtained and, with quite a party of men, the hunt was resumed.

There was no trouble in following the trail the bear left for some eight miles, until it led into a low, wet place that was full of briars and bushes, as the animal had continued to bleed from both sides.

A hundred feet in, the dogs began baying loudly and the men, with guns ready, felt sure of a nice piece of fur and bear's meat and grease enough to last well into the winter, but alas, for their hopes—it was only the place where the bear had been. There was no dead bear, nor one that was dying. They found where he had lain for some considerable time, taking the water cure in a hole he had scooped out; saw where he had clawed up great pawfuls of black mud and leaves—of what variety they did not notice, evidently some that were cooling as well as healing—and then gone into a windfall where neither men nor dogs could follow.

"Too bad," the hunters said, and "too bad" it was, but it couldn't be helped. "Good thing, though, for we have got rid of the bear," they all agreed.

The next year there was no sign of a brown bear in the neighborhood, and this incident of "Old Brownie" was all but forgotten. But the year following he showed up again, and half-grown hogs began to disappear once more. Finally Brownie was seen. A white patch on the breast showed it was he—moreover, he was near enough so that the rancher could see the scar of a bullet on each side; spots where there was no hair.

The next day a hunting party was organized. Dogs followed the bear's trail into the same marshy thicket and to the same windfall where the dogs were called in and the hunt again abandoned. That bear is undoubtedly alive today, for had he been killed anywhere in the Olympics I am quite sure I would have heard of it.

Many animals when injured use spruce gum to cover the wound so that it may heal, and also to keep the flies from infecting it. Gum will not wash off as does mud and is, besides, very healing, as I have seen proved by actual results.

It hardly seems possible that animals can carry their knowledge of surgery to the extent of curing a sore or wounded eye, yet such is the case. One so injured will find a dark room—a cave or a hollow tree or perhaps a burrow in the ground—lie on its back and continually licking one of its forefeet, apply the damp paw to the injured optic and, between the darkness and the poultice-like application of the moistened paw, will recover as surely and as rapidly as if in a private hospital attended by an eminent surgeon; with the advantage of having no excessive bills to pay.

Monkeys are very human in their desire to help one another, and quite skillful in their rude surgery. An African explorer tells a story of a female monkey that was shot by one of a camping party that he was with. Several of the tribe of which she was a member came as close to the tent where her body was lying as they dared, holding out their arms and making mournful cries, as if begging that she should be given back to them. Then a gray old man monkey, probably the chief, came still closer, chattering and one could imagine almost weeping. When given the body, he took it in his arms, examined the wound, then walked away, the others trailing him in single file, thus forming a regular funeral procession.

Nor are birds one bit behind animals in their skill as surgeons, particularly the waders, whose legs are long, slender and easily broken.

I once killed a greater yellowleg whose leg had been broken, healed, and beyond a little lump and a scar, was as good as ever; and later in the same year, a smaller bird of the same species, with one leg broken but healing—the surgical bandages still on. No doctor could have done a neater job. Soft grass was wound around the leg as a sort of splint to hold the broken bones together. Then a very fine stringlike grass was bound around the first—perhaps woven would be a better term, for there seemed neither beginning nor end to this grass. The whole was then plastered with a cementlike mud, baked hard by the sun. In a few weeks the injured leg would have been as good as ever had not the bird, unfortunately, been shot. By rights this specimen of bird surgery should have found its way to a museum, but it was too far away and there was no chance of letting the doctors compare the work of the birds with their own. Had it been done, the birds would not have suffered by the comparison.

Several times I have seen wild ducks with old wounds on the back or sides, all but completely healed, but still covered with down which was held in place by a gumlike substance perhaps obtained from some aquatic plant.

As a trapper, I have known mink, raccoon and muskrats to gnaw a foot off outside the jaws of a trap holding it, and so escape. There is nothing remarkable in this, for the foot was numb and the gnawing gave no pain. The remarkable part was the way the stump was treated after the animal was free.

For example, a crippled coon was tracked to a hollow tree and when the tree was felled and the coon captured, it was found to be minus one front foot, evidently the one left in the trap. The stump of the leg was covered with gum—apparently spruce—and was healing fast. The gum was hard, and as good as a leather case to protect the injury.

Once I found a flint arrowhead in the breast of a passenger pigeon. It had been there for years, for the wound had long since healed and the bird was plump and fat. At another time I found three buckshot hanging inside the breastbone of a wild goose. An injury in the same proportion as either of these must have resulted fatally in the case of man. The buckshot would be equivalent to three leaden bullets of an ounce and a quarter each, penetrating his breast and entering his lungs. Yet the bird's treatment and its knowledge of healing herbs effected a cure where man would probably have died. So, all in all, it is very safe to say that birds and animals can heal themselves, and man is often able to learn much from their ways.

A WOMAN OF TOMORROW.

"Not hard!" she cried passionately. "Not hard! Ah, it is a hard, hard thing to be a woman!"

With a sudden desperate movement she broke from him and fled along the dusky turnpike.

Once in her room the sense of oppression became unbearable. She went over to the window and, kneeling beside it, laid her hot cheek against the sill. All was dark and quiet, save for a faint stir in the room below and a faint stream of light cast from an open window upon the graveled path. Far away the mountains stood like phantom sentinels guarding futurity. "I cannot bear it!" cried Patricia; "I cannot bear it!" Then the question rose and faced her blankly. It was a moment of supreme indecision. On one side all the womanhood within her quivered with desire; on the other, a man's ambitions struggled to survive. It was the new woman warring against the old—the twentieth century rebelling against the nineteenth.

Love or ambition? With love went the inheritance of ten thousand centuries, the heart that had beaten out the brain, the passion that had strangled reason to thrive in rank luxuriance. With ambition warred the strong young intellect, fresh from its swaddling bands—the intellect that had quickened and been born with bitter pangs.

Love is not for you, said Reason. But reason was checkmated. Passion, like a loosened tiger, pinned it down.

"I want him! I want him!" she cried, "and I must have him! Yes, I must have him!"

Yes, she would have him, she would come to him, as he had said. She would become a woman for his sake, suffer as other women suffer, be patient as other women were patient. She would merge her identity into his and, letting the world go by, think only of him and his child, as it lay upon her breast. She would give up her profession. She would let ambition go. She would—yes, she would clean the house in gloves, like Hannah Fairfax, and churn the butter. She saw herself growing old and wrinkled, saw the faded calico wrapper and the rice powder.

"Ah!" cried she, suddenly, "What a life! What a life!" She rested her head upon her arm, still kneeling beside the window. A luxuriant wistaria vine that grew without peeped shyly in at her, its purple blossoms just brushing her cheek. She looked across hill and plain far into the grayish distance. The freshness of twilight came stealing in upon her, mingling with the faint odor or purple wistaria.

In the turnpike, a strong, straight figure was moving along. Patricia raised her head and leaned far out, straining her eyes to catch the last outlines of the straight figure as it vanished beyond the somber stile.

"Ah!" said Patricia again, and left the window.

That night Patricia wrote a letter.

"You have asked me to decide," it said, "but I cannot. Love is stronger than I, but is love as strong as ambition? I do not know. Time must decide. I am going away. Do not follow me, do not seek to find me. You say you love me; then you must bear with me. Love will last. If I want you I will come back to you; if not—my life must be lived, and as yet my life means my work.

"You may not understand, for women of today are different from the women you know—the women you have read of. In the nineteenth century a woman would have stayed; in the twentieth she must go."

And the next morning at daybreak she was driven to the depot. As she passed Fairfax Place her eyes sought eagerly for some trace of life. The house was dark and still. The shutters were tightly closed. A bony hound, lying upon a shuck mat in the hall, howled dismally.

Behind the gabled roof of the house a glorious herald of the dawn was rising. Over the meadows a heavy morning fog lay damp and chill. As the glimmer of day touched it, it glistened and deepened with a thousand iridescent rays. How chill it seemed and how desolate!

Then as Patricia looked, a figure appeared in the narrow path leading from the pasture—a figure in a faded cotton gown with a milk pail in her small hand. Patricia could see the frothy whiteness of the new milk.

A pathetic figure it was, all alone in the desolate, chilly morning, with the fog creeping damp and heavy to her feet and the first rays of sunlight revealing the old wrinkles in the young face.

"Ah, what a life!" cried Patricia breathlessly.

Then the cart jogged along and the figure was lost in the foggy distance.

. . . .

Ten years later a woman sat alone in her office—a tall woman with a beautiful dark head.

She was sitting before a small square desk, upon which some loose papers were scattered. Upon the paper under her hand was written "Brown vs. Battle," followed by a summing up of evidence.

The woman leaned her head upon her hand and looked thoughtfully through the open window.

Along the street people were passing hurriedly.

A square or so away a hand organ was grinding out a discordant air, the tune of an old-fashioned polka. She breathed quickly, pushing the hair from her brow as she did so with a firm, white hand. A letter lay upon the floor at her feet. Suddenly her eyes lowered meeting the written lines.

"Your name was been suggested," it said, "in connection with the office of—"

She frowned and placed her foot upon it with a half displeased gesture.

"So I may become an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court," she said. "And—I am tired."

For a moment she was tired. People still passed hurriedly in the street. The hand organ was moving farther away: its air grew fainter. Suddenly a baby's cry sounded fitfully without. Her gaze reached the window. A beggar woman had stopped upon the sidewalk, her shawl blown in the wind and upon her breast a child.

The woman on the inside leaned forward. A little cry escaped her; all the wonderful instinct of motherhood, which is strong and in proportion to the weakness of women, swelled within her. There was a passionate leaping of her pulse. She longed to tear the child from the other woman's breast—to fel its soft lips against her own. The letter lay trampled underfoot. Suddenly she spoke.

"My God!" she said. "What have I missed?"

The firm, flexible mouth softened.

"Oh, to know what it means," she cried. "To have one word, ever so little, only to know what his life has been—his life and mine—and mine. I would not change it," she cried. "I would not change it. And yet—and yet—"

She rose suddenly, some loose sheets of paper fluttering to the floor. She stretched out her arms with a wide, free movement.

"I will go to Virginia today," she said.

As the sun was setting she stepped from the train at the little station and walked rapidly across the fields. She felt strangely restless. Now that the journey was ended, the vague impulse that had prompted her to undertake it seemed to fail her. By the act she seemed to have put the ten long years aside—to have come back to her girlhood and undisciplined passion—to nature in its free, primitive state.

Once again she paused upon the hillside, resting her arms upon the rotten fence, her gaze sweeping the tangled fields and resting upon the gabled roof of a house in the hollow below. A warm color had risen to her cheeks and her eyes had dimmed and softened. She felt a sudden timidity—the sweet impulsive shyness of ten years ago.

In the turnpike below she almost thought to see the strong, straight figure passing along.

For a moment she wavered upon the hillside, then, with a firm step, she followed the winding path.

The house was quiet. From the kitchen chimney smoke was rising. It was near the supper hour. There was a sound of clinking plates and a faint odor of steaming coffee.

About the grounds the old sense of desolation asserted itself. The paint upon the shutters which had been fresh ten years ago was almost worn away; some of the front steps had rotted and were gradually sinking in; and the gate had fallen from its hinges and lay overgrown with weeds at a little distance.

Patricia leaned against a post that had once supported the gate. She was filled with sudden yearning for the neglected old place. The ten years which had wrought in her young life such buoyant changes seemed to have touched so lightly this quiet spot in its [illegible] broken age. With her, time had meant [illegible] tion and advancement, here it meant merely the passivity of decay. Had she thrown in her destiny with that of the old place, what would it have brought her? The old words awoke from somewhere, winging upon her ears: "Come to me here—perhaps for ten—perhaps for twenty years!" Twenty years! Why, in twenty years decay would feed upon the rafters.

Then a man came quickly from the garden and stood in the graveled path. In one moment all the latent passion within her took fire and flamed hotly forth. At first she saw only the aggressive manliness—all the straight length of him. The womanhood of her being had asserted itself after ten years of sexless suppression.

She went toward him—a beautiful, advancing presence—one capable hand outstretched, a hint of awakened passion tinting her cheeks.

Then, as she neared him, her eyes cleared. Looking upon him, she saw that the years had passed him as they had passed the old place. She saw that his bronzed face had reddened and roughened, that the glow had left his eyes—saw that they were dull and content, as he was content. The direction in which she had progressed he did not know; he had taken no step forward for ten long years.

With a little gasp she met his outstretched hand, looking with passionate, groping eyes into his face—looking for something which she had not found, and could not find—something which was not and had never been.

"Patricia!" There was a pathetic awkwardness in his speech. "Patricia—I—I never thought that you would come back."

Then suddenly their hands fell apart and they stood silent, for a woman had come from behind the house and neared them—a small, tired woman in a soiled gown, with a child upon her shrunken breast—a woman who had borne many burdens and whose strength had not been sufficient for her need.

The man wavered.

"I—I never thought that you would come back," he repeated, "and this is my wife."

A while later and Patricia walked rapidly away. She no longer felt the restless stirring of her pulse. The warm red had faded from her face. It looked white and set.

At the fence on the hill she halted and looked about her, drawing a long, quiet breath. She saw with clear eyes the landscape. She saw the ragged, rolling plains. She saw the distant mountains. She saw the sun, a fiery ball, setting beyond their summits, flooding the hollow below with a roseate glow. The gray fog had not risen, softening the prospect. She saw it as it was, ragged and barren. And looking inward, she saw her own life, with its strong, bold lines unaltered. The old romance had fallen from her like a shadow, melting [illegible] from her that had [illegible] among the many [illegible] within the past. The woman held her head [illegible] muscle quivered. She stretched out her arms with a gesture of thankfulness.

"Oh, thank God!" she said, "thank God!"

Then the great head fell upon her arms and she burst into tears.

And the sun went down.

A Prophecy.

I.

And I walked alone up the canyon road,
  And my guide was the full moon's light,
When the temple's portals swung close on me
  And I was alone with the night.

II.

And I stood spellbound for the canyon wide
  Was alive from the hills to the skies,
And the most tremendous theater play
  Was passing before my eyes.

III.

And the angels of light and the demons of dark
  Were struggling their world-old fight,
And the Canyon's heart in the virgin soil
  Was beating with wild delight.

IV.

And I saw the elves in their moonshine wells
  Dance music's eternal grace,
And it seemed as if the whole universe
  Was mirrored into this space.

V.

And while I was wrapped in the mysteries,
  It grew light before my eyes,
And I felt the soul of our wonderful land
  And I saw its genius arise.

VI.

Then it pointed to heaven and pointed to earth,
  And blessed our country free,
And I knew that the vision that I had seen
  Was a future prophecy.

VII.

And I knew that heaven would give its light,
  And earth would give its heart,
And I knew that the two are uniting here
  For the highest expression of art.

Bide a Wee.

Art thou lone and sad, my Dearie?
Bide a wee, and dinna weary;
  Brighter days will dawn for thee—
  Golden days, and thou shalt see
  Love's red rose abloom for thee—
Bide a wee, and dinna weary.

Does thy life seem dull and dreary?
Speak a message, kind and cheery
  To another on thy way;
  Do a kindness, now, today;
  Smile, and teach thy lips to say,
"Bide a wee, and dinna weary."

Art thou fair discouraged, Dearie?
Do thy plans gae tapsel-teery?
  Dinna fret o'er what is past;
  Nail thy colors to the mast,
  Thou shalt come to port at last;
Bide a wee, and dinna weary.

About Face!

"THERE'S a lawyer in my town," says a member of the Chicago bar, "who is sometimes forgetful, but never at a loss to right himself in the worst predicament.

"Once he had been engaged to plead the cause of an offender and he absentmindedly began thus:

"'I know the prisoner at the bar and he bears the character of being a most consummate and impudent scoundrel."

"At this point some one whispered to him that the prisoner was his client, when he immediately continued:

"'But what great and good man ever lived who was not calumniated by many of his contemporaries?'"

Expert Mechanic.

WITH a wail of distress she threw the horrible thing from her. It was too much—too much.

Her recently acquired husband heard her sobs and rushed into the kitchen.

"What is it?" he asked tenderly, as he put his arms around her.

"I can't do it!" she cried. "I can't do it!"

"What?"

"Get that chicken apart," and she pointed to a fowl which lay on the table.

A light of stern resolve shone in the man's eyes as he rolled up his sleeves.

"I'll do it!" he vowed. "I've never tackled one before, but it seems to me that if I can take a motor car to pieces I shouldn't be beaten by a mere hen, and anyway, I won't have to put it together again."

Improvement.

"WELL, that's enough to try the patience of Job!" exclaimed the country minister, as he threw aside the local paper.

"Why, what's the trouble, dear?" asked his wife.

"Last Sunday I preached from the text, 'Be ye, therefore, steadfast,'" answered the good man; "but the printer makes it read, 'Be ye there for breakfast.'"

His Alibi.

"EVERYBODY expects a Kentuckian to tell a feud story," stated Gov. Morrow of Kentucky, recently. "The thing has really been much overdone, but the story of Lige Parsons may be worth telling. Lige dropped into the Courthouse to see his friend the probate judge.

"'Howdy, Lige!' greeted the judge.

"'Howdy, judge!'

"'What's doin' down your way, Lige?'

"'Nuthin' judge, nuthin'.'

"'T'other evenin' I was a-settin', areadin' of my Bible, judge,' spoke up Lige, 'when some shootin' begun. One of my gals said 'twas the Harris boys down by the middle pasture. Now, judge, I didn't mind them Harris boys a-shootin', but I was afraid a stray bullet might hit a calf or one of the kids, so I picked up my rifle and dropped a few shots down that way and went back a-readin' of my Bible. Next mornin' I went down that way an' they was all gone 'cept four.'"

Proud Hint.

HE WAS a very popular curate and when he gained his earthly reward of a pleasant living and left the country parish he was much missed. His successor, not much of a countryman, went to call on Mother Brown one Monday afternoon, who at once took his parochial education in hand.

"I be main sorry t'other curick's gone," she said, "for this I will say for that there curick, he allus did know when 'twas washing day."

Too Much Jazz.

DORIS, aged 4, was alarmed at a terrific thunderstorm which raged with increasing violence one afternoon.

Hoping to ease the child's mind, her mother told her it was only "God's music." Whereupon the youngster retorted, beating a sofa cushion furiously the while:

"Ask God not to play such loud tunes, mummy. It is not wight to fwighten little girls!"

An Ebony Motor.

SHE was a buxom mammy. She was crossing Broadway moving slowly. She waited for a car to pass. Engrossed in her thoughts, she started on again to cross the rest of Broadway and stepped directly in the path of a motor truck. The truck driver emitted a startled yelp of warning and threw on his brakes hard.

Mammy had resources of speed. With amazing agility she leaped toward the curb, just clearing the front wheels of the truck.

The truck driver leaned over with a bawling: "Hey, you—"

Mammy whirled on him: "Yo low down no 'count trash. Whaffo yo mean tryin' to hit me, yo' wuffless white trash. Ah'll—"

What she would do nobody knows; the truck driver didn't want to find out. For when mammy started, the truck driver started first. Mammy's big jump showed him. He shot the truck up Broadway, leaving mammy glaring like an ebony Nemesis.

Two of a Kind.

FOR some years before his death, and during his period as Secretary of State, the late John Hay would hie himself away to the New Hampshire hills of a summer time and spend a few months on the farm.

There was, some miles away, a more or less gentlemanly farmer who furnished Hay with milk. Sometimes, help being scarce, the gentleman farmer proceeded to deliver the milk himself. Hay knew him, as did the villagers, as William Vandergrift, commonly called Bill.

There was a minstrel show arranged for a benefit of some concern or other, and Hay, as patron, attended. The milkman appeared as one of the end men. He proved a joker of infinite wit; and Hay, following the performance extended his congratulations. A few minutes later a friend discovered him contemplating nothing at all in a more or less wondering manner.

"What's the matter, Secretary?" he queried.

"I was just wondering what that milkman of mine meant," Hay replied. "I went up, you know and said, "Why, hello, Mr. Milkman, you ought to be on the stage."

"And what did he say?"

"Why, he returned: "Come off; you ought to go into politics.'"

The friend chuckled. Then: "Do you know who he is?" he asked.

"Certainly," Hay answered. "He's William Vandergrift, the milkman."

"Sure he is, and always will be," answered the friend. "But you know him on the stage as Billy B. Van!"

Thus fame pursues the lowliest in hidden places.

Supreme Court.

A GREAT many folks in the District of Columbia do not know the judges of the Supreme Court, hence these dignitaries sometimes are treated just like us other mortals.

Recently Justice McReynolds started to board the front end of a street car, and the motorman, who had opened the front door merely to talk to a friend, shouted:

"Hey, there, you, don't try to get on this front platform! Go back to the rear."

The justice calmly obeyed the order of the higher court, the motorman muttered something under his breath, clanged his bell viciously and the car passed on.

Not Too Stylish.

"I WANT to build a doghouse on my lot."

"Yes, sir," said the fashionable architect. "We have plans and specifications for all kinds. Now, here's the plan of a poodle's bungalow we designed for a prima donna only last week, architecturally beautiful yet comfortable and sanitary."

'You don't understand me," said the disgusted caller, with a glance at the architect's drawing. "I don't want a canine drawing-room. I want a plain, old-fashioned doghouse that a self-respecting dog can worry a bone in, if it suits his pleasure, and not feel like apologizing to every stray mutt that passes."

More Important.

A COLORED doughboy had just received his discharge and was making tracks at all possible speed for the station when he caught up with another one of his company, who demanded: '"Hello thah, Jackson, whah yo' goin'!"

Jackson paused just long enough to shout back:

"Ain't goin' nowhere, but, oh, man, look where I'se comin' away from."

Worried.

THE ship on which they were crossing the Atlantic was not a dry one, and the revelers consumed considerably more than was good for them, only retiring finally when the stewards began to lay the tables for breakfast.

Later in the day one of the roysterers sought out the organizer of the affair in his cabin.

"Hullo, old bean!" he exclaimed, "How are you feeling?"

"Oh, I'm all right!" lied the man addressed stifling a groan. "In fact I'm top hole. I wasn't really drunk, you know. I remember everything that happened, except one thing."

"What was that?" asked his friend drinking his seventeenth glass of water.

"I can't think who paid for the taxi."

Try This.

A PROMINENT tradesman over on the East Side expostulated with a gang of road repairers regarding a small mountain of wood blocks dumped in front of his premises.

The protest being ignored, he surreptitiously stuck a card, bearing the inscription, "Please take one," on the offending heap.

The philanthropic suggestion was quickly acted on by passersby, and more than half of the blocks had disappeared before a vigilant policeman removed the card.

Such is Life.

COUNTRY BOARDER: I suppose we'll be getting some of these nice fresh eggs for breakfast.

Farmer: Yep, these very eggs; but not till ye come down here next year. Ye see, I've got to sell them to the local commission man, and he sells them to the jobber in the city, who in turn sells them back here to the fellow who runs the country grocery, and I buy them from him."

That's Right.

MISS ELIZABETH MARBURY, at a tea in New York, said of marriage:

"Too many married men regard marriage as a contract of 'Heads I win, tails you lose.'

"In Belgium one day I heard two American business men talking about married life.

"'Do you think,' said the first man, that a husband should take his wife into his confidence about his business affairs?

"'Yes, if he isn't making any money,' said the other man with a cunning look."

The Park Bench—An International Forum.

BY HAMILTON MERCER.

CAMPAIGN slush funds, league covenants, world unrest, the high cost of living, suffrage, the relation of the peritoneum to the appetite for pie, analytical profiteering, St. Vitus dance from the standpoint of the shimmie—all are settled in the Forum of the Park Bench.

Savants of all types and of all temperaments gather as the twilight falls—men from the highways and the hedges, derelicts, ne'-er-do-wells, the flotsam and the jetsam, the wise and the mediocre, find common ground here and a freedom to express their sentiments which is hedged by no parliamentary conventions or "senatorial ethics."

They arrange themselves along the benches in the order and position as best serve their inclination to rest, whereupon the floodgates of their wisdom are opened and the ambient and defenseless air is deluged with eloquence.

No subject is too abstruse, no problem too complex, for this forum to attack. The gentlemen in the upstanding straw hat and white collar introduces the question of unemployment, having given notice by repeated clearings of the throat that he would speak upon a subject obviously distasteful to the forum. He postulates the theory that an inherited or acquired disposition to underestimate the dignity of toil is the causative force behind our national state of idleness.

He is profound, but that is not confusing to his colleagues. Nevertheless, to be on the safe side, they hasten to admit everything he says and in due course of time arrive at the conclusion that men are idle because they are idle.

The forum has, with vociferous unanimity, arrived at this same conclusion on divers other occasions, giving all of their time to the task without hope of material reward. Meanwhile, the men they are discussing—the constitutionally disinclined fellows who are idle because they wish to be—are going ahead producing what the world must have.

On the other hand, the man with the bifurcated whiskers makes it plain that the axioms of nature preclude a sentient first cause since they are what they are because they are. The reasoning is logical and the conclusion obvious.

Still, the bold young man with the cap tilted at the usual 45-degree angle, is disposed to take issue on the ground that two times two equal four only where there are two twos, but is quick to see his mistake and make suitable apologies when the cadaverous gentleman with the sad eyes and solemn countenance rebukes him with a side-swipe and a verbal admonition that his hypothesis is absurdly untenable.

Until now, the forum had never suspected that the man with the bifurcated whiskers had traversed the field of philosophy in the university. Nor had they suspected that the bold person in the tilted cap had been a janitor's assistant in a Los Angeles skyscraper until easy money had made him indifferent to all forms of work.

The gentleman in the upstanding straw hat had crossed the desert behind an oxen team and remembered much of the tortures of a four-months' voyage from the Missouri River overland to the coast, albeit he was a babe at his mother's breast, even after their arrival.

In his usual place toward the end of the bench crouched Hank Maines, languid and taciturn, except when reminiscences of the forty-niners were broached. Hank in his youth had known a man who had read of the exploits of the gold-hunters and was qualified to speak with authority on any phase of those early adventures.

Opposite Hank sat "Crutch" Wilford, whose virgin chin whiskers clung with the fondness and tenacity of the honeysuckle to his exposed upper thoracic region. Though he belonged to the great army of unrest, he usually came out boldly in defense of plutocracy in a modified form. He was for a conservative form of government, "an emasculated democracy," as he delighted to put it.

"Crutch" drew from a side pocket a bundle of papers bearing various dates and containing luminous art layouts of Irish scenes. "I submit," he began with becoming gravity, "that Terence MacSwiney has made no new world's record."

Hank Maines parked his pipe on the bench beside him, gazed artlessly at nothing in particular, cleared his throat and observed that since MacSwiney had fasted to make the world safe for democracy he had an object in view, and that, having an object in view, he might live in the hearts of the Irish people and in the memory of the British prime minister for years to come. He had himself fasted for thirty years without any object in view other than the eternal quest for a square meal, and, behold, he had recovered his health by it.

On Hank's left sat a squat little man who "went out" with the saloons in a prosperous valley town. He had lived by his ability to panhandle and was known in the haunts of the down-and-outers as the "Piker."

Any reference to food or the lack of food always appealed to the "Piker" as a challenge, so he took up the gauntlet with Hank.

"Recoveries like that can not be regarded as official, since they are not recognized by the medical profession." The Piker spoke reservedly because he did not wish to involve himself in any demonstration of force with his colleague by applying the "shorter and uglier" word to Hank.

A concrete case was then cited by Hank of a doctor who had chosen the career of a tramp in preference to a life with the pillbags, wandering for years without any definite schedule as to meals and sleeping fully dressed in haymows and out under the Milky Way. He never had a pain or an ache, regardless of the singular fact that he still had possession of his "uniform appendix," his tonsils, both of his kidneys and several other normally essential parts of his original anatomical equipment. "And, mind you," the speaker observed, "this bird was a physician."

To which the squat little man replied that the case cited proved nothing beyond the obvious fact that the "guy was a silly ass, plus a quack, for gadding about the country with all that excess baggage."

"Crutch" toyed reflectively with his cane and chewed on. From all the evidence, both circumstantial and direct, a thought had struck him. He was prima facie in a state of confusion. No fatted calf had ever been slain for him on his return home for two reasons—first, he never had a home; and, second, he had not been there in twenty years. Wherefore, he was qualified to sympathize with the Lord Mayor in a dietetical sense merely; as to the Irishman's vision, well, he could have no part in that, for had he not been moved by other motives, viz.: to make democracy safe for the park bench?

Early in "Crutch's" argument the forum became aware of his incompetence to engage in a discussion of that kind and they took up other subjects. The whole range of world affairs, from the silence of Col. House to the Plumb Plan, and from 2.75 per cent to the missionary enterprises of Wall street, were carefully canvassed, with Crutch's voice interrupting in a sonorous obligato.

Social service as exemplified at the "Dead Rat" came next on the calendar as a special order. It was taken up in connection with post-bellum problems as they relate to the street-lighting system of fashionable Paris and the whole referred to the committee on ophthalmology with instructions to report back on the probable effect upon the cornea of the naked truth per kilowatt.

In the preliminary discussion it was established beyond peradventure that many of the young men and women who wasted their substance in pursuit of the hectic pleasures of the boulevards may have died from loss of sleep. An attempt by a precipitate member of the forum to suggest a remedy in the form of curfew ordinance failed when Hank reminded his colleagues that this country had not yet been named mandatory for France, and that if it should ever be in all likelihood France would escape punishment on the part of the forum by some sort of action challenging our jurisdiction.

Whereupon, the forum shifted to the question of immigration when Hank submitted that of all animate beings the dog (caninus canidae) is the most assimilable. Crutch leaned over heavily and looked at the squat little man's wrist watch. The moon had receded some distance from apogee and had cast a deep shadow around the somber figures on the fountain. A phlegmatic policeman sat with his chin on his chest in one of the rustic seats under the bows of the drooping palm.

"There is this consolation; when the night falls the day always breaks," Crutch interpolated this remark designedly. He wished to prevent a long siege in a profitless discussion in the possible hearing of the "law," even though the "law" might be in the deepest of slumber. Park policemen have been known to awaken under provocation.

However, the squat litle man insisted that Hank had said a mouthful when he commended the dog's assimilability, whatever that was, seeing that no animal is quite so adaptable to environment or so discriminative as to the human company he keeps.

"That is due to his intense democracy," Crutch added as he shot a glance in the direction of the sleeping Titan under the palm. "If human beings were as indigenous as the dog—if the spirit of democracy was as well developed in the genus homo as it is in our brute allies there never would have been any fourteen points and Germany would still be functioning as the pretzel nation de luxe in spite of the high cost of flour."

"But," Hank interrupted, "did not Germany also have dogs?"

"True enough; but they were the wrong kind of dogs. The German dog is per se the dog of warfare. If you will make a survey of his angles you will find he is laid out on the plan of an H-406 or 7, with his nose standing for the torpedo and his tail the periscope. Taking him by and large, his underslung chassis and his wide wheel-base suggest something plus, something more than mere dog—something sinister like the frightfulness that gave rise to Article X."

The Piker snored gently in measured cadences as the conversation died into a soothing diminuendo. He was blissfully unconscious of the fact that his colleagues were deserting him one by one as the gray twilight began to break through the shadows cast by the park foliage.

Hank and Crutch had exhausted their powers of endurance in a prolonged burst of eloquence that ran predominantly to dog and were gathering themselves together for the usual morning invasion of Shinbone alley. A few minutes later the park policeman —after due consideration of the evidences at hand, satisfied his conscience that his beat had been free of vagrants during the night.

THE CASA GRANDE RUINS OF ARIZONA.

BY ROBERT A. BAKER.

FOR many people the great Southwest has a peculiar charm—a charm akin to magnetism. The vastness of its miles upon miles of desert land with its unbroken silence; the barren, rugged hills and desolate mountainous regions; the giant cacti standing like lonely guards; the streams, few in number, but carrying within their channels untold possibilities for producing wealth and causing the "desert to bloom like a garden" when man shall utilize those waters—these are some of the more commonplace things that go to make up this indescribable charm of the Southwest.

Then there are the extraordinary things. One of these is the Grand Canyon of Arizona—that wonderful bit of nature to which no artist's brush, much less pen picture, ever did justice. The cliff dwellings of New Mexico and Arizona, relics of a primitive people, belong in this latter class, as do the Casa Grande ruins located in Southern Arizona. These ruins are said by archaeologists to antedate the cliff dwellings. It is the mystery of these latter things, the spirit of awe and the conjecture they arouse that adds to the spell or charm that is cast over one who visits these regions.

It is of the Casa Grande ruins that I shall write, as they are not so widely known as the Grand Canyon or the cliff dwellings. These ruins are located in the northern part of the Casa Grande Valley and are known as the Casa Grande (Great House) Ruins. The land whereon they stand has been set aside by Congress as government property. A custodian resides near by and visitors to the ruins are courteously shown over the ruins and explanations freely given.

This group of prehistoric buildings was discovered in 1694 by the Jesuit missionary, Father Eustebio Kino. When discovered by Father Kino they were a deserted ruin, appearing very much as they do today. The elements have, of course, wrought some change in their exterior appearances. The Indians of those regions at that time told Father Kino that the ruins had not been occupied so far back as they could remember, nor had any legend been handed down to them concerning the builders or inhabitants of the ruins.

Apparently the ruins are those of a walled city, similar to the walled cities of the Old World. The city appears to have comprised three rectangular compounds only a short distance apart. Each compound measures about 300 by 200 feet and each was protected by an outer wall two feet thick.

The compounds vary somewhat in interior arrangement. Each, however, contains numerous rooms, halls, courts, ter-

A New Way to Treat Colds

TRY this new way to break up a cold.

Eminent physicians endorse it. Scientific research has proved that "catching cold" is due to millions of cold germs breeding in the sluggish membranes of the nose and throat—and, that the surest way to break up a cold is to stimulate the action of these membranes by energizing the motor nerves.

Hyland's 14 acts directly on this principle.

It differs vastly from the old time cold remedies, which physicians now know are wrong. Thousands of people have adopted Hyland's 14 and found real relief.

The Thief—A Tragical Tale of a Proper Beauty

By Eden Phillpotts

J[illegible]OMS came of very respectable parents and was the top flower of the bunch, her mother always said. She had five sisters and four brothers, so it was a tidy sized bunch; but when Jack Toms fell off his hoss and died of it, his children, that were not already out to work, had quickly to set about it. Because, with such a family, Jack never had much chance to put by a penny, though he made good money as huntsman to the Dart Vale Harriers for twenty seasons. But there it was; the pitcher went once too often to the well and in his middle age—a bit over 40—he came a bad purler, and two of his ribs pierced the poor man's lungs, and he languished from January till April and then went home.

Most of the children were earning their living by then, save the younger ones; and Joanna by rights did ought to have been out to work, for she was 18; but she was ever Jack's pet, and he contrived to have his will and kept her to home. I think it was because she was so pretty and favored him. For a handsomer man than her father never crossed a hoss. Clean cut, clean shaved, clean limbed, and clean every way, with dark curly hair, gray quick eyes, and a gracious way with him that won all hearts, high and low. In fact, the folks at his funeral surprised even his wife, and it was no small consolation to Mary Toms to see who was there, and the proper flower show of beautiful hot house stuff the quality sent. But a man who showed good spot for twenty years deserved such a funeral, and also the brave tombstone the Hunt put up over his grave.

Joanna favored her father—a bowerly maid with a gentle temper like him; and much in his pattern—modest and quiet and seemingly not alive to her good looks. She faced her first great sorrow pretty brave; but the world was a mighty different place for her when Jack died, and she weren't sorry to leave home and get away from a place haunted by her father.

There was one bright thing in her life, however, for she was tokened to a sailor boy and loved him very dear; but that was a secret, and Joanna had promised him faithfully not to tell about it till he came back home again and could make a home for her.

The Toms family lived at the lodge gates of Holne Chase, and when Farmer Turtle's lady offered to take Joanna, to be maid of all work at Four Ways, near Buckland, Mary Toms was glad, because the Turtles were godly, prosperous people and well thought on; and it also meant that Joanna would always get home for a bit on her day out.

So she went—both glad and sorry—and about five months later fell out this very tragical tale. The Turtles were a small family—just Thomas Turtle and Alice, his wife; and one daughter, tokened to the Rev. Blades, a Baptist minister at Ashburton; and one son, young Tom Turtle. His father being called Thomas, he was always called Tom—a very sharp young fellow and thought a bit stiff necked by his own generation, though held to be an example for it by his mother, who loved him better than anything in the world.

Young Tom helped his father, and Four Ways being a freehold, he meant to follow in his parent's footsteps. He was held a bit self-righteous for such a young man; but nobody ever found a fault against him, and them as admired his father and mother doubted not that with years and experience, he'd grow so large minded as them. He was a fair, freckled man, very obstinate in opinion and a terror to the evil doer; but his sister, Susan, had a gentler sort of mind and more charity. They was all Primitive Baptists and the only thing as ever made them doubt about Joanna was that she belonged to the Church of England.

However they hoped that with time and example she'd join their persuasion, and very like she might have, for the sake of pleasing them, for she took to them from the first, and praised the kindness of Mrs. Turtle and was proud of the friendship of Susan. For the girls were near of an age and the farmer's daughter found Joanna just such a one as she could care about. Joanna was quick minded and cleverer than Susan, and in a month the girls were grown to be great friends; and though, in a manner of speaking Mrs. Turtle felt her daughter was taking more to Joanna than might be seemly between the future wife of a Baptist minister and a maid of all work, yet she couldn't say anything for she liked Joanna a lot herself and admired her good sense and her steady work and the way she looked at life. Mrs. Turtle was put about a little, however, because when she found the girl such a proper beauty, she had fears. In her experience them right down amazing pretty girls be troublesome, because the men won't leave 'em alone, and spoil 'em and turn their heads and give 'em wrong ideas. But Farmer Turtle didn't worry, because he said it weren't fair to doom a young creature for a beautiful face, and he'd known a properly lovely creature turn out very well more'n once.

"She's no giglet wench," he said. "She's self-respecting, so far as I can see, and though she's got a bit up her sleeve and had from the elder generation, as all young things have, I wouldn't call her sly or up to no games. And as for Tom, if you're thinking of him, he haven't got no use for the females yet. He's too busy. In fact, he's a bit down on women so far as I can see, and I've never known him to say much in favor of 'em."

"'Tis them that think they stand, be surest to fall, however," argued Mrs. Turtle, "and if she was 'the glad eye' sort I'd send her going for future peace; but she ain't; I grant that. And Susan likes her and tells me that she don't seem particular interested in the males. She's had an offer or two, but turned 'em down."

"Then you've no call to fret," he answered; and Mrs. Turtle, who thought well of her husband's judgment, ceased to trouble about Joanna's good looks. For she worked as well as the plainest.

Things went on very easy for a good bit and Joanna was content and happy, as her mother soon found. She liked the place and the people, and her spirits rose presently, for the most loving young creature can't mourn a good father forever. But then Mary Toms marked a gradual change and felt that a cloud came over Joanna now and then. She asked if anything was amiss and her girl declared there was not.

"They're all kindness alive," she said, "and I'd do anything in my power for any of 'em. All the same life's life, and it can be a bit difficult seemingly. Miss Susan has asked me to be bridesmaid when she's married next October; and she'll pay for the dress, she says; but I won't have that. 'Tis a great honor for me, and if her mother agrees, I must have a flame new hat and dress for certain."

"They'll miss her."

"Yes, they will—especially her father. She's to him same as I was to dear father myself. He puts her first. He's a thought afraid of his son; and not the only one. A terrible strong will Master Tom have got."

"I should have thought he'd be proud of such a son."

"So he is; but you can be proud of a thing and a thought feared of it, too. Look at hosses."

"You ban't feared of him I should hope? No child of your father's was ever feared of anything on two legs, or four either."

"No—I ban't feared of him. I'm sorry for him."

"Why then? I'm sure he ain't sorry for himself."

"You never know. He's a curious young man and keeps himself out of sight of everybody but himself. He's got his secrets."

Her mother regarded Joanna very keenly.

"D'you like him, or don't you?" she asked.

"Yes, I like him. He likes me, too."

"You be terrible careful, Joanna."

"I shall be."

"I'd be glad, in a way, if you was engaged to a good man. You'm wife old and very near so handsome for a woman as your father was for a man."

"Don't you feel no fear about me, mother, I want to be married to the right one some day."

When Joanna went back to Four Ways that night, Mrs. Turtle was in tribulation.

"I've lost my brooch," she said. "The gold one with a lock of my mother's hair let in behind it. Look around sharp tomorrow, Joanna. 'Tis a very great treasure."

"So I will then. Where was you today—in the garden or in the village?"

"Neither, I've been making jam and scarce out of the house."

But a great hunt failed to find the brooch and Mrs. Turtle grew melancholy. Then, not a week later, if she didn't miss another trinkrum—a little silver chain that she wore Sundays and a little locket as hung on it, with a tiny photograph of her children when they was babies. She made a great outcry, and, slowly but surely, began to fasten on Joanna—not to her face, but behind her back. Because there wasn't another soul indoors at Four Ways barring an old woman, up home near 70, who'd been in the family for more than half a century and was like one of themselves. Farmer Turtle wouldn't hear it at first, and more would Susan, and more would Tom Turtle. But then a thing happened to the young man himself, and he had to confess that he'd lost a very fine breast pin made of gold with a carbuncle set in it—a gift under his grandfather's will and an heirloom in the family. It was gone out of his room and, along with it, he'd also lost a silver cigarette case—a prize he'd took in a vegetable show for the best early potatoes two years back.

Joanna fretted as much as anybody under these disasters, and presently she began to see that with all the will to do otherwise, the family was beginning to feel uncomfortable about her. Nobody can say how she felt about it; but Susan warned her before the crash came that her parents were terrible uneasy in their minds, and when she did warn her, Susan said after, Joanna didn't flare up or nothing like that, but kept very quiet and only said that afore God she knew nothing about the lost treasures. And Susan most steadfastly believed her.

The sequel came all in a hurry on a September evening when the family was together and Mr. Turtle axed his son what was amiss; because that was another trouble and the young man had been glum and queer and unlike himself for a day or two. For the minute they'd put by their losses and, as Susan was going to be married next month, her wedding filled the air. But now young Tom told 'em bluntly that he'd missed two pounds in gold and two half crowns.

"If you must know that's what I'm fretting for—not for the money, but what it means. 'Twas on my table along of my watch three mornings ago, I will swear," he said; "but I was in a hurry and a thought late for breakfast. So I pitched on my clothes, and came down, and left my watch and chain and money on my table. And when I went up later, my watch was there and the money was not; and the mischief be that nobody but Joanna Toms went in the room between the time I left it and the time I went back. She always does my room when I'm to breakfast."

"Then that brings things to a crisis," declared farmer. "We can't have no more of this, and I'll face her so soon as she comes in the house tonight. Nobody wants to find her guilty. God He knows; but 'tis time she saw the position that we've been too soft hearted to put before her. She must clear herself, because things can't go without hands, and what hands are there but hers?"

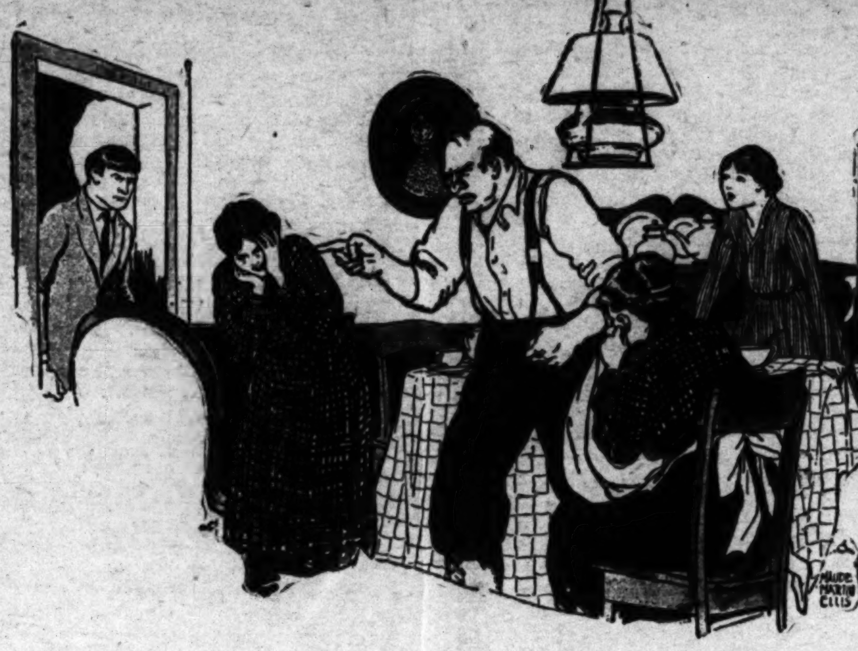
They didn't make no suggestions and presently Mr. Turtle said he knew what he'd do. But before he had time to tell them, Joanna came back from her afternoon out. Then Thomas Turtle called her into the kitchen before the family and spoke straight as to what had happened.

"Things have been getting a long sight too hot in this house, Joanna," he said, "and as a clever creature with plenty of wits, you know that as well as I do. Now there's only six souls in this house, and people's don't steal from themselves, so you can leave out Mrs. Turtle and me and Tom and Susan. And that leaves Jane Slocombe and you. Well, Jane's one of us—worked for my parents before me—and her good's ours and our good hers. She wouldn't take nothing. So we be all clear but you, my dear, and you've got to clear yourself, if you please, because nobody else can do it for you. We've all marked you was a good bit troubled of late, with something on your mind, and we've wondered why."

Then he mentioned his son's money.

Joanna changed color and gave a bit of a gasp fronted like that afore 'em all. But she soon come to herself.

"I see 'tis terr'ble difficult, master," she said. "I've feared more'n once you was looking at me doubtful, so I'd best to go, I reckon. In fact me and mother talked it over today, and she thinks the same. And if Master Toms have lost money—but there 'tis. I'd best to go. In fact I was going to say the word to missis tomorrow."



"I be Going to Spare You, Joanna. Go Now. Be Out of My House in Five Minutes."

"That's for you to decide," answered the farmer. "You swear afore God you've not took nothing, Joanna?"

"I do."

"Very well then. We want to believe you. But if you're innocent, then you'll be wishful to prove it."

"I can't prove it. I can only take my oath. I didn't touch anything. I'm my father's daughter, and that ought to be enough."

"So it ought. All the world knew him. But the little you can do, Joanna, you did ought to do."

"And thankfully. But what can I do, Mr. Turtle?" she asked.

"You can do this," he answered. "You can let Mrs. Turtle search your pockets this minute; and then you can do one more thing."

Joanna flushed as red as a rose. Her lips shook and her eye flashed.

For reply she went to her missis, put her little handbag into her hands, and spoke.

"Search me, ma'am," she said.

And Alice Turtle done so.

There was nothing in her bag but a handkerchief, a key and a small bottle of lavender water she'd just brought home from her mother; and there was nothing in her pockets but a bit from a newspaper—a bit of a rhyme she'd cut out, because she liked it. It was a hunting rhyme and minded her of her father.

"All very good so far as it goes, Joanna," said Mr. Turtle. "And now what might that key be?"

"The key of my box, master."

"Then you'll let my wife look in your box, if you please. You can trust her."

Again Joanna grew pretty hot.

"O my God! My father's daughter, to be thought—"

Her knees quivered under her; but whether 'twas shame of being suspected, or fear of being found out, none watching her could say. Susan stood up for her and protested against such a harsh deed, but Thomas Turtle told her to shut her mouth, for he was getting angered now. He said what was true enough, that if Joanna was innocent she needn't mind the search, and it would be no dishonor to her father's memory.

"I don't mind the search, master," she answered very quiet; "but there's a packet of leters in my box and they be private letters and I don't think you ought to look of letters in my box and they be private "That depends, Joanna," replied Mrs. Turtle. "Be very sure I shan't read nothing. Your letters are your own; but, at a fearful time like this, you didn't ought to make no difficulties, in my opinion. If there's letters, a third party shall read 'em—not us. Us'll take 'em to parson, or anybody you like to name above suspicion."

"The letters be from my lover," said Joanna quietly. "Take the key, ma'am, I'll bide here."

She sat scrunched up. She'd gone pale as a dog's tooth by now; and farmer said afterwards that guilt was on her face if ever he seed it.

Young Tom went away then and out of doors. He'd got restless about it, and he confessed to Susan later that he feared for Joanna and couldn't stand and see her worsted. But Susan sat by her and took her hand and spoke kind words and told her not to cry. Though she was feared, too, because for all their confidences, Joanna had never said nothing to her about a lover.

Mrs. Turtle wasn't away ten minutes. Then she came down, blew out her candle, with never a word, went to the table, and set upon it her golden brooch, her silver chain and locket, young Tom's breast pin, and his money.

"Good God!" cried Mr. Turtle, and he glared at the things as if they was a live serpent.

"Altogether at the bottom of her box under her shifts," said his wife. She was deathly pale, too, and breathing so deep as a cow. Susan give a gasp and jumped up. Joanna screamed once and then went off in a faint and fell off her chair on the ground. If thunder could have brought her to, it would have done so, for Farmer Turtle was a fiery man, though a just one, and now, at this dreadful discovery, he let himself go and roared out what he thought about it. Susan ministered to Joanna and fetched her round; and then young Tom came in again to heard the fatal news, and his father spoke like the trump of doom to the sinner. He thanked heaven as the poor fox hunter was took from the evil to come and hadn't lived to see his daughter a thief, and then, after a lot of fierce justice that fell like hail on the ears of the frantic woman, he inclined to mercy as his way always was.

"You're young yet, and for your sake," he said, "and for your mother's sake, and your father's memory, I be going to spare you, Joanna. I say this in the solemn words of the Savior of us all—I say, 'Go an' sin no more.' Go now—this instant minute, Joanna Toms. Be out of my house in five minutes, and I won't proceed against you. The awful wickedness you've done shall be hid in your heart and ours, and I pray God to have mercy upon you and turn your soul to righteousness before it's too late. And you can send for your box in the morning."

Then she spoke.

"I'll go," she said. "But I say here afore you all, and I'll swear to it in the name of my dead father, that I never touched one of them things and I don't know more than you how they got in my box."

"I could wish for your peace and hope of heaven you'd take another line," replied her master, but she only shook her head. She was calm now and steadfast as a rock. Then she went up to her room, under the roof of Four Ways, took her packet of letters, and went straight away out of the farm without another word to any of 'em.

But the night work wasn't done with, for while the girl trampled home, with death in her heart, no doubt, Thomas Turtle debated on the matter.

To her parents' great astonishment, Susan stuck up for her ruined friend, and despite the glaring facts, vowed that Joanna never could have done it.

"'Tis beyond her nature," she said. "And I wouldn't believe it if an angel said she'd stole our things. She couldn't—she's not built to do it. There's a wicked plot hatched against her, for she couldn't tell a lie, or act a part. I never knew such a downright truthful girl in all my life."

"Then, if not her, who?" asked Mr. Turtle. "Who under this roof would seek to ruin her this way?"

But Susan couldn't tell.

"I'll never believe it. We've got her word," she answered. "And her word's her bond. And God will right her," she declared.

But Farmer was impatient at this, and who shall blame him? He thought he'd been uncommon Christian about it and gave it as his opinion that few would have acted so kindly as he had. They talked to no purpose and was just going to their beds, when old Nat Lucas, head man at Four Ways, come running in to 'em from his pallet, where he slept over the stables. He was clad in his trousers and shirt and no more.

"God's goodness!" he said. "Us be afire! 'Tis the new ricks in the corner of Jacob's field, or else 'tis the cow byre down under."

They ran to the door and there, sure enough, they see red fire blazing not half a mile off and lighting half the sky. The farm sloped down to Dart vale, and on the edge of the hill, where was Jacob's field—a five acre croft under wheat that year—rose up a great glare with flame flickering through it. The night was still and starless and the blaze arose steady out of the dark.

Farmer got into his boots so quick as he could, and Susan ran and roused her brother, who'd gone to bed, and Lucas called up another man that dwelt hard by. Then they went down to find the two brave wheat stacks, only piled a fortnight before, was both alight and burning to the heart.

They could do naught, for the fire had got a start of 'em and their buckets of water only turned to a puff of steam afore they reached the trouble. Indeed none durst go very near, for the heat was tremendous, and, even so, young Tom got his mustache very near burned off and Nat Lucas was singed, from his scant thatch to his knee, all down one side.

I don't think in the full flush of the fight, nor yet after, that anybody ever connected Joanna with their great disaster. Certainly if any heart harbored the thought, it was on no lip till other things happened; but at cocklight Farmer Turtle went down to his burned out corn ricks, and Nat Lucas with him, and it was Nat, poking about in the char, as found what threw a cruel, ugly light on the job. For he come across a piece of paper half burned with writing upon it, and he also picked up a handkercher, and he gave them to Thomas Turtle.

Farmer looked at 'em, then put 'em in his pocket and stood like a stone man staring at the rising sun. He could hardly believe his own eyes; but there weren't a shadow of doubt, and, after he'd sent Nat off to Lower Town for the police, he went in his house place and called his wife, and put the handkercher in her hand.

"Who's be that?" he asked.

She looked at it and answered.

"One belonging to Joanna Toms. There's 'J. T.' worked in the corner. Susan gave her six for her birthday last July."

"And read what be on this scrap of paper, mother, please."

Mrs. Turtle took the burned sheet and read so much as was left to read.

"'My darling Jo: I may get home a bit after Christmas and then with luck it's—'"

"Turn over," said Mr. Turtle.

His wife done so and read.

"'No more sea for me then, but farming and a cottage and Mrs. Joanna Truscott. Then we'll—'"

"Found alongside where the stacks was," said Farmer. "That's how I've been paid for my mercy. But now 'tis all over and she'll go where she belongs—wicked, young devil."

And that night Joanna slept in clink at Ashburton lockup.

She stood her trial at the Assizes and the case went against her from the first. Everything came out of course, and to them skilled in such affairs, who only look at the facts and don't take no count of human character, there could be but one end to it. She said, so far as the things in her box were concerned, that she knew naught about 'em and had never put 'em there; while, as to the stacks, she could only swear that she knew naught about 'em neither. She said that when she come to look at her lover's letters one, the last, was missing from her parcel, and, as for the handkercher, she said she'd never used any of 'em, but kept 'em stored among her treasures as being too good to use, and for that matter the other five was found in her box, and they had not been used. Her mother took her oath that Joanna came home on the night she was sent off from Four Ways, by 11 o'clock, and Nat Lucas swore he'd first caught sight of the fire through the little window in his sleeping place at a bit after 10, so the time fitted exactly right, and nobody in his senses ever doubted that she'd gone off in her rage and set fire to the ricks on her way home. It was a simple, everyday sort of arson, according to the law, with everything in its place, all very orderly and according to human nature and no mystery anywhere. But arson is a very serious business, as the culprit found, for she got three years and no sympathy from anybody on earth but her mother and Susan Turtle.

The poor girl vanished accordingly, and when Bob Truscott came home from sea after the New Year and went first thing to the lodge where Mrs. Toms still dwelt, he didn't surprise her by no means so much as she surprised him. 'Twas a very cruel shock for the poor chap when he listened to the girl's downfall and heard she was put away for three mortal years. He was a good sort of man and wouldn't believe a word. In truth, he properly raved about it and didn't rest, hand or foot, till he'd got permission to see Joanna. And he did see her, with two policewomen in the room, and found her calm and steadfast, but thin and longways less beautiful than when last he'd said good-by.

She told him she was innocent, and no doubt 'twas a great light in her darkness that he believed it, and swore he'd wait for her and leave no stone unturned meantime to right her against the world.

So he left her and took work on the land not far from Ashburton; but as for righting her, or doing anything to clear up the business at Four Ways, of course he soon found that no power of man could work that.

"'Tis a case for God Almighty," said Mrs. Toms, "and you know she's innocent, Bob, and so do I, and so do Mrs. Blades—her that was Susan Turtle. She was a very faithful friend to Joanna and never believed a word against her to the last. And, trusting in Providence, same as I do and same as my husband always did, I believe a time must come when Joanna will be cleared."

Mrs. Toms, you see, had great faith, and she was so well thought upon that, despite Joanna's disgrace, none turned away from her mother, though none but felt only too sure that things were as they seemed to be. For if Joanna had looked to be married before long, what more terrible likely than that she wanted a little bit of money against her young man's return and had took this wicked way to come by it?

But then wonders were done in the land and the widow of our huntsman Jack Toms was proved to be in the right; for she'd trusted to Providence through thick and thin and believed that in the long run Providence never let down nobody that really trusted.

It came about, of all places, at the little tabernacle of the Primitive Baptists at Ashburton, and them most concerned in the business heard with their own ears and saw with their own eyes. And a very great lesson I'm sure, to all unbelieving people and such as say the Lord of Hosts be tired of mankind in general and weary of their goings on.

There was a revival meeting, and Mr. Blades had got down a very fine gospeller with a wonderful flow of speech and a way of searching to the heart. He was a big success from the first evening, for he had the blessed gift of throwing light into the dark places and waking the sleeping soul with the trumpet of righteousness. A big-hearted, hard bitten man, but genial and not puffed up; because he'd been a bad 'un himself in his time, and only saved from the burning by the voice of God in the mouth of his fellow man. And now it was his pride and privilege to do to others as he'd been done by and bring old and young to the penitent bench and help the good work of gathering souls to the harvest. 'Twas his third evening and, of course, Farmer Turtle and his wife supported the chapel, because their daughter was married to the minister.

Their son went also, and being turned a good bit more serious of late, had took to showing an interest in the business of the soul, which ain't common among young men with their way to make in the world.

Anyway he attended the revival meetings with his parents, and Susan always sat beside 'em when they came. But much to the amazement of his family after the discourse on the third evening, when the people who had caught the holy fire rose to go to the bench, or testify, if young Tom didn't rise up also! As he'd had the light for years, there didn't seem no reason why he should do any such thing, and I believe his father was a bit annoyed with him for the moment; but young Tom didn't go up; he went out, and so Farmer's mind was set at rest, for he doubted not the youth had business elsewhere that called him.

If he'd known, however, what that business was, Mr. Turtle might have been a good bit surprised, and indeed he was so before the night had ended.

In a word, the heart of the amazing young man was smote at last. He'd gone to the police station, as a fitter place for him in his opinion than the penitent's bench; and there he'd told his story so far as the details was concerned, though all the fire and agony and horror behind it he never told. It was left for understanding men and women, who know where love may land a man, to see his sufferings and his madness through the veil darkly.

Young Tom had fallen into a frantic passion for Joanna from the moment she set foot in Four Ways. He'd made love to her fierce and terrible from the first, and she'd told him from the beginning that it couldn't be and she didn't love him. She'd made it clear also that her heart was not her own; but since her engagement to the sailor was a secret and she'd promised Bob Truscott never to speak of it, she didn't; and young Tom didn't believe it, or wouldn't believe, when she spoke of an understanding with another man. In secret he fought for her with all the fire and fury of first love and made her life a very difficult business no doubt; but he hid his heart from his parents' eyes and her sense of right was such that she felt she couldn't do anything about it, or tell her trouble, but only appeal to him to spare her. He was deaf and blind, however, and didn't see that he was persecuting a woman who'd got no use for him and never would have. He kept on hoping against hope, as lover will, and at last the time came for Joanna to go, for she couldn't stand no more. She never for a moment thought that love would drive the man into crime, nor did she guess that after he'd made her mad one evening and she had spoke bitter words to him and called him a mean coward and bid him leave her alone, that his baffled passions would turn into bitter hatred. But so they had done, and all the flood of love in him turned to bitter gall and he set out to ruin her.

Which he had done.

His unsleeping fires drove him to this wickedness and he made his plot according, stole the things one by one, and then planted 'em upon her. He knowed, when dallying with her in the past, that she kept the key of her box in her little handbag, and when she was in the dairy and the house empty he'd gone to her room and got an impression of the key in a bit of dough and had one made far ways off, where he wasn't

Thursday—
NONE SUCH MINCE PIE Day

NONE Such Mince Pies just naturally fit into Thursday's lunch or dinner. There may be one or two big reasons. We know there are several smaller ones—all home from school and on deck to get a man's-size slab of Thursday's None Such Mince Pie.

Even in the days when housewives went through all the drudgery of preparing mince meat, their mince pies were considered well worth while.

But now we do nine-tenths of the work in our model kitchens, sterilizing the fruits before cooking, and leaving only the finishing touches for you to add.

None Such Mince Meat saves you all the work of cooking the wide variety of choice ingredients that go into None Such, and the ingredients used in None Such Mince Meat are the best obtainable.

None Such Mince Pie on Thursday is such a widespread institution at American tables that few persons even comment on it. Like Sunday's ice cream, it's just accepted.

Turkey and None Such Mince Pie for Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's—None Such Mince Pie and any other good dish every Thursday. Arrangements have been made with bakers, hotels, and restaurants throughout the country to specialize on None Such Mince Pies on Thursday.

WHEN DID YOU GET THAT COMIC VALENTINE, DEAR?
IT'S NOT A VALENTINE, MUTT! IT'S "THE PHILOSOPHER" BY MICHAEL ANGELO!
HE'S A FUNNY LOOKING BIRD!
ARE YOU SURE IT'S A GENUINE ANGELO, DEAR?
CERTAINLY! IT'S BEEN IN MOTHER'S SIDE OF THE FAMILY FOR FOUR GENERATIONS!
DIDN'T YOU SEE MIKE'S SIGNATURE ON IT?
DEAR, I'M NOT GOING OUT EVENINGS ANY MORE! AND I'VE CUT OUT JEFF FOR GOOD!
SMACK!
OH, MUTT; WE'LL BE SO HAPPY IN OUR NEW HOME!
MUSH!
SO THAT'S A GENUINE MICHAEL ANGELO PAINTING! IT OUGHT TO BE WORTH A NICE PIECE OF CHANGE!
WELL, — OF ALL THINGS! MUTT!
FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE, WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT APARTMENT?
I LIVE HERE NOW, MUTT, I JUST MOVED IN TODAY! AND WE'RE GONNA BE NEIGHBORS! WELL, WELL!
I HOPE MY WIFE AND LITTLE CICERO ARE IN THE KITCHEN! JEFF LIVING NEXT DOOR HAS GIVEN ME AN IDEA!
LISTEN, JEFF! TAKE THIS OIL PAINTING DOWN TO THAT OLD CONNOISSEUR'S SHOP! DON'T TAKE A CENT LESS THAN A HUNDRED FOR IT. BRING THE COIN TO THIS WINDOW!
AS I LIVE! IT'S "THE PHILOSOPHER" BY MIKE OLD DEAR!
MUTT SAYS HE'S STAYING IN NIGHTS NOW OR HE WOULD TAKE THIS PAINTING DOWN HIMSELF!
DEAR, BURGLARS ARE BUSY IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD! IT WOULD BE A SHAME IF THEY STOLE THAT OIL PAINTING BY MIKE!
CICERO, PLEASE ANSWER THE PHONE!
SURE!

OH THEY'VE GOT THE SWELLEST PICTURE OVER AT THE FREESTONE TODAY — WESTERN PICTURE INDIAN'S IN IT AND EVERYTHING — IT ONLY COSTS A QUARTER — WILL YOU GIVE ME 25¢ PAPA?
25 CENTS THAT'S A LOT OF MONEY SON
YOU KNOW WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE I DIDN'T KNOW WHAT A QUARTER LOOKED LIKE — A QUARTER WAS A WHOLE LOT OF MONEY TO MY FOLKS — I'LL TELL YOU THAT I NEVER EVEN SAW THE INSIDE OF A THEATRE TILL I WAS TWICE YOUR AGE — THEY DIDN'T HAVE PICTURE SHOWS IN THOSE DAYS
AND WHEN I WENT I HAD TO EARN MY OWN MONEY TOO — WHEN I WAS TEN YEARS OLD I SOLD NEWSPAPERS — CUT GRASS ALL DAY LONG FOR A DIME — PEDDLED HAND BILLS —
NEVER FORGET THE FIRST CIRCUS WENT TO — WORKED ALL DAY — CARRIED WATER FOR THE ELEPHANTS TO GET IN AND A PAIL OF WATER IS JUST A TASTE FOR AN ELEPHANT — SO YOU CAN IMAGINE HOW HARD I WORKED —
YOU BET YOUR LIFE WHEN I GOT HOLD OF A NICKEL I WENT FIVE PLACES TO SPEND IT — I KNEW THE VALUE OF MONEY — I HAD TO WORK TOO HARD TO GET IT —
I DIDN'T GET MY START GETTING MONEY FOR NOTHING — IT WAS ALL HARD WORK — GATHERING UP OLD RAGS — SELLING OLD IRON — I WAS A THRIFTY KID I'LL TELL YOU THAT
I'LL NEVER FORGET THE FIRST DOLLAR I SAVED — I GAVE IT TO MY MOTHER TO PUT AWAY FOR ME — I REMEMBER HOW PROUD I WAS WHEN SHE PATTED ME ON THE BACK AND SAID — THERE'S MY LITTLE MILLIONAIRE
YOU'VE GOT TO LEARN THE VALUE OF MONEY, SON — I'D LIKE TO GIVE YOU THIS QUARTER BUT I'D JUST BE DOING YOU AN INJUSTICE — YOU'LL THANK ME IN AFTER YEARS AND SAY — MY FATHER DIDN'T SPOIL ME
HERE DARLING DON'T CRY — GO ON TO THE SHOW WITH THE REST OF THE CHILDREN
BOO HOO!!
HO! HO! THERE'S THE MILLIONAIRE THAT SAVED HIS DIMES AND PENNIES AND HIS QUARTERS — SLAVED IN THE SWEAT SHOP — SOLD PAPERS AT THE AGE OF 3 — YOU COULD WRITE A WONDERFUL BOOK ABOUT YOURSELF IF YOU LEFT OUT THE LAST CHAPTER
THAT'S RIGHT — JUST GO AHEAD AND SPOIL HIM — MAKE A SPENDTHRIFT OUT OF HIM — I HOPE YOU'LL ALWAYS BE AROUND TO HAND HIM MONEY WHEN HE NEEDS IT — THERE'LL COME A DAY IN HIS LIFE WHEN IT'LL TAKE MORE THAN A GOOD CRY TO GET HIM MONEY

Little rules that help you look your best

You can make the powder stay on two or three times as long when you use the right powder base

OCCASIONALLY you meet girls who are beautiful without effort; but most lovely people are lovely because they know the rules. To make the powder stay on, to prevent roughness, dullness, lines — require intelligent care. Here are two simple rules, approved by skin specialists, which every woman would do well to follow:

Never permit your face to look shiny

Powder — Yes. Just enough powder to have that soft, natural look. And when you powder do it to last. Powdering in public is an admission that you are uneasy about your appearance.

The only way to make powder stay on is — not to put on an excessive amount — but to begin with the right powder base.

For this you need a cream which will not reappear in an unpleasant shine. Pond's Vanishing Cream does not contain a bit of oil. It disappears instantly never to reappear. Before you powder take just a little Pond's Vanishing Cream — a tiny bit — on your finger tips. Rub it lightly into your face. Notice the instant smoothness it gives your skin. Now powder as usual. See how smoothly the powder goes on — how natural it looks. You will find that it will stay on two or three times as long as ever before.

If you would have a clear skin do not neglect the nightly cleansing

The bedtime cleansing that brings a clear skin. Never retire without it

The chief reason for a "muddy" look in the skin is the dust that gets lodged deep within the pores.

The only means of keeping the skin clean is to remove deep-seated dust. For this cleansing you need an entirely different cream from the one you use for a powder base. The right cream for cleansing is one prepared with an oil base. The formula for Pond's Cold Cream was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil to give it the highest cleansing power. At night rub Pond's Cold Cream into the pores of the face, neck and hands, and wipe it off with a soft cloth. Give your skin this cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream regularly and you can keep your skin clear.

Every normal skin needs both of these two creams.

Get a jar or tube of each cream today at any drug or department store. You will realize for the first time how lovely your skin can be.

THE STORY OF FRENCH PERFUME

One of the most picturesque figures of the 17th Century was the strolling perfume vendor of France. His preparations were most inferior, but he stimulated sales by ascribing to his perfumes marvelous powers of healing and warding off evils of all kinds. Today, the exquisite, inimitable scent of Houbigant Quelques Fleurs is the only reason for its tremendous popularity. Wherever the best is desired or appreciated there will be found this aristocrat of perfumes - Quelques Fleurs.

Conspicuous nose pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores. These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores: Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Notice the improvement the very first treatment makes—a promise of what the steady use of Woodbury's Facial Soap will do. But do not expect to change completely in a week a condition resulting from long continued exposure and neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

RESULTS OF THE COTTON TESTS

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

AT THE present season the garden owner's thoughts lightly turn to things to grow, and among those the succulent vegetable easily standeth first. It is not given to all to choose the soil they will work, but if there be any choice, it should be light rather than heavy. If it be heavy, two courses are open, either to convert the soil or grow the crops known to do well in heavy soils, buying your sweet potatoes and other things that thrive best on sandy soils.

If soil is very light it will be deficient in plant food and humus. Do not mix with it rough, undecayed organic matter. Dairy manure will prove best, but if other manures are used, those which contain much straw should be thoroughly decomposed or the soil will be too much held "open" and dry out quickly. Organic matter in sandy soil decomposes slowly, unless kept in a moist condition at all times. When soil is very heavy, plenty of stable manure, well rotted, should be thoroughly mixed with it some time before planting and spaded in again and again. After crops are planted the season's tillage will be much aided by a good mulch of manure that may be from time to time mixed with the surface soil through hoeing, etc. This will prevent baking or crusting of the surface.

Atichokes, asparagus, horse radish and rhubarb are some of the roots that may now be planted, and the following seeds are timely: Beets, Brussels sprouts, cabbages, carrots, cauliflower, garlic, kale, Kohl-rabi, lettuce, onion, parsnip, peas, radish, spinach and turnip. Many seeds are small and germination weak, therefore cover them shallowly, not more than one-eighth inch, because the sprout must have air and light. If this is denied, it dies before reaching the surface.

In order to assist small, weak seeds it is advisable to plant plentifully, because many seeds will aid in raising the soil where one could not. This is applicable to all small seeds. It is easy to thin out the surplus. A good general rule is to plant seeds to a depth equal to from three to five times their diameter. In beds where small seeds are sown thickly, sprinkle the beds—never flood them. During winter months sprinkle only in the morning, when water is warmer than the dew. This allows the heat that accumulates in the soil during the day to be retained and radiated far into the night. During the hot months, it will be necessary to sprinkle in the evening to revive the plants. If you closely follow this advice you may still have the "Garden Beautiful," though composed of vegetables.

Potash Supply.

Unless composted, brush, weeds, etc. can be burned in one place and the ashes joined with those from the house for use in garden and orchard. There are many planing mills where shavings and sawdust are used for fuel and ashes from these places may be available in sufficient quantities for top dressings for lawns, rose beds and all flower and vegetable crops, for wood ashes may with profit be applied to all crops or mixed with compost or potting soil. The addition of bone meal to the soil at the same time will furnish a fair balance of plant food for garden plants in general. Protect with cover wood or vegetable ashes, also farm manure. Every ton of farm manure contains ten or more pounds of potash, so that we have millions of tons produced annually in California. Keep both ashes and manure covered so that rains do not wash away this wealth.

Gigantic Italian cypress at Bakersfield.

Start Right.

Do not start a new place without a definite plan or conception of what you wish, or at least what you have decided to have and do. If you get the proper ideas regarding the place and have the ability to carry them out, you need not fear the result and will get more satisfaction from working out your plans than from contemplation of the finished product. Get the fundamentals thoroughly fixed, position of buildings and main objects, the drives and paths, and you are ready to proceed; the details may be worked out as the garden building goes on.

The Chayote.

The chayote is a tropical American vegetable, closely allied to the cucumber. The vines have somewhat the same appearance, though the chayote is much more vigorous than its near relation. It is also much more of a climber and may be seen in scores of California gardens, clambering over fences, outbuildings, trees, etc. The fruit is an excellent substitute for summer squash and by many considered quite superior in flavor. The vine makes a good, rank-growing, rough covering, and though somewhat tender, still if frozen down, readily sprouts again from the yam-like roots. The flowers are also rich in honey.

Fertilizer Constituents.

Garden fertilizers usually consist of but three elements, which are all that is needed by the average plant. These are nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid, the two latter are retained by the soil. Even though soluble in soil water they do not spread by such means and therefore must be mechanically distributed to insure uniformity. They are not volatile, nor do they leach the soil. The full year's supply may be applied at once with the assurance of not losing any. On the other hand, nitrogen should be applied at several different distributions, and it will also be quite easily spread uniformly through the medium of soil water. Nitrogen is obtained from organic matter which decomposes when exposed to the air and a portion of its nitrogen volatilises is lost, the remainder, unless quickly absorbed by plants, will wash or leach away.

Substitute for Boxwood.

In place of boxwood for borders, hedges, box or vase plants, use a privet that in local market is found under the name of Ligustrum nepalense. It has small box-like leaves, is hardier than the box under any treatment or conditions, is subject to fewer pests and diseases, and if injured will more quickly replace such parts. It is more easily grown, transplanted and maintained, is cheaper and more attractive.

Proper Parkway Planting.

There is urgent need everywhere, of concerted planting and care of parkways, for unless this work is carried out on a co-operative basis it is never as a whole satisfactory. If the whole street cannot be organised, "Block Beautiful" clubs should be formed by residents on both sides of the street of each block, thus insuring a uniformity and thoroughness in the work, attaining a standard quite impossible under individual effort.

Collection of Climbers.

The collection of plants of one family rather than an indiscriminate assortment is commendable—there is such an added interest. Take the Tecoma family (climbers mostly,) a large place could use them all. In the local market may be obtained: Tecoma Capensis, from Cape of Good Hope; T. grandiflora, China and Japan; T. filifolium (Campsidium,) from the Andes; T. jasminoides, Australia (also a white variety;) T. radicans, from the United States; T. Smithii, a garden hybrid; T. stans, a shrub from Mexico; T. Ricasolina (Mackenii,) South Africa; T. velutina, from Guatemala and the true, but rare, T. violacea. Others could be obtained." The colors range from white to pinks, yellows, reds, to purple. Very close to the tecomas are our two bignonias, Tweediana and venusta.

Garden Walks.

Many places are planned so that the only sensible position for a walk is directly through the middle of the lawn, for a walk should be direct, if anything. If, however, the walk can be placed at the side, so as not to make a line across the lawn, the beauty of the place is enhanced. In most cases it is better to have only a straight walk, but if there is an opportunity to curve it somewhat, though making it still direct, the walk will appear more interesting and artistic.

Poultry Practices Across the Atlantic.

SOME PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

IN ENGLAND the Feathered World publishes annually a rather elaborate Year Book covering the poultry industry of Great Britain and affording a general review of poultry operations. From its plethoric pages we cull the following paragraphs of general interest to poultry breeders everywhere:

Essential Soluble Fats.

Housewives have always regarded an egg as one of the most valuable articles of food. They have no scientific justification for their faith. Chemists might contend that analysis proved they were wrong, but the housewife and the cook knew. Probably the most important discovery of recent years is that of Dr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, who, after twelve years' research, has found that for human growth and health a soluble fat is essential which, so far as is known, is only found in butter, egg yolk and certain glandular organs of animals, thus confirming the housewife's knowledge. A new respect for the egg has been engendered, which has enhanced its value and will increase consumption very largely when sufficient supplies are available (in England,) as these soon could be if producers, present and prospective, would deal with this branch of food production constructively and adequately.

Growing Poultry Meat.

In catering to supply the markets for birds weighing three and one-half pounds, a quick grower and a bird that puts on flesh rapidly is wanted. The best we have found for this purpose is a White Leghorn male mated to Faverolle females. A White Leghorn or Houdan male mated with any of the following females will be almost as good: Rhode Island Red, Sussex, Wyandotte, Buff or White Orpington, Dorking, Faverolle, Barred Rock. The strongest chickens are always obtained from hens in their second season, but there is always a likelihood of getting more eggs early in the season if young birds are used. If pullets are used they must not be less than seven months old and well developed; the male must be at least nine months old, healthy and vigorous. The best results are obtained from stock birds that have been reared on free range; the number of females should not exceed twelve and not be less than seven to each male. If table birds that weigh from four and one-half pounds to six pounds are wanted, the best crosses for this class are Faverolle male to Rhode Island Red, Wyandotte or Buff Orpington, females. Other good crosses are as follows (male named first:) Indian Game, Dorking; Indian Game, Sussex; Dorking, Buff Orpington or Rhode Island Red, Sussex, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red or Faverolle. There should be about the same number of females to each male as stated in the former crosses. If possible, allow these breeders free range. Two-year-old hens mated with a yearling cockerel give the best result for this class of birds, although young birds can be used. The chief point to watch in one's breeding stock is stamina and vigor.

The Russian Orloff.

In England during the past two years, the Orloff has become numerous, and during that time we have been able to watch the breed's behavior under many and varied conditions—indeed, under all sorts of conditions, good, bad and indifferent; on free range, on restricted range, and also under semi-intensive conditions. During the past winter we have had more trying climatic conditions than I ever remember experiencing before, and the egg shortage has been acute. But those who have owned Orloffs have had an unfailing supply of eggs. In most cases the April hatched chickens began to lay at the end of October—some were earlier—and they have laid to date (the first week in February.) We have paid particular attention to the hens; nearly all of them moulted early, and the majority were in full lay again when the moult was completed. It was found that Orloffs lay remarkably soon after renewing their feathers, and while the pullets may not be so precociously prolific as those of some breeds, they are far more reliable "stayers" on the egg-laying course. We have been impressed with the Orloffs' prolificacy under back-yard conditions—housed in a tiny lean-to abode, and with only a few yards of run to exercise in.

Consumption of Hen Fruit.

It is refreshing to learn that the consumption of eggs, even at present prices, has been growing. According to the New York Produce News, the four cities of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago averaged 175,000 more cases of eggs in September of 1920 than they did in the corresponding month of 1919. We believe it is quite safe to say that the food value of eggs is being recognized more and more by the average consumer; the high cost of living has stimulated a study in nutritive values of foods in the human dietary, which has resulted in a higher appreciation of the sustaining food values of the product of the American business hen.

Barred Rocks in England.

For breeding, exhibition and egg-production purpose select birds of good type and color, with as fine barring as possible, provided that the bars are distinct and even, and as near the medium color as can be got. If the male is of the light shade of color, select females of the dark shade; and if the male is dark, mate him to females of the lighter shade. The chief things to avoid in mating a pen of Barred Rocks is smuttiness or the brownish dull color in the black bars, and too much white undercolor. Sometimes a Barred Rock appears to be really well barred, and is so on the surface color, but if the feathers are turned up a little, they are seen to be nearly all white near the roots. Another point is to choose birds which stand well on their legs, as some Rocks which are good in many ways stand somewhat in-kneed never looks well in a show pen; and visable, as a bird which stands badly or in-kneed, never looks well in a show pen; and moreover, in-kneed females are never much good as layers. As a popular breed the Barred Rock easily takes the first place among all breeds of poultry. They have now stood the test for about forty or fifty years, and the demand for them seems keener now than ever. If a fancier has the luck to breed a real good one or two, and wishes to sell, it is generally an easy matter to do so at prices anywhere from $50 to $100. and some years much more than that has been paid. And the birds which are not good enough for breeding stock or show birds always pay well as utility birds.

Poultry in Philippines.

The advent of a branch of the American Poultry Association in Manila has greatly increased the breeding of standard poultry in the Philippines, and more particularly the American breeds. Up to the period of the American occupation, and for some time afterwards, poultry culture there was limited to the breeding of fighting games—not for eggs, nor for meat, but for sport pure and simple. The cock pit was a feature wherever people of the rural districts congregated, and the betting was always liberal and was the exciting feature of the contests. With the advent of western civilization, however, and educational work, which was started immediately after we took control of those islands, and through the efforts of the officers of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Commerce, of the insular government, the native farmers have become interested in the raising of fowls for egg production as food. Rhode Island Reds, Rocks, Leghorns and other utility birds have been successfully introduced. The officials and others who are engaged in the work of educating the natives along these lines are confident that cock fighting will gradually die out just as bull fighting has.

Pricing the Birds.

We have sometimes wondered if it would not be good policy for those offering breeding stock to boldly announce prices in their newspaper and magazine advertising? In a specific manner, this would hardly be feasible, because but few birds possess the same values. It is not with live stock as it is with soap and saleratus, that each package or item of a given thing possesses the same value; Nature in her operation produces no exact duplicates. Every clutch of eggs hatched produces birds of varying values, from market poultry to showroom specimens. But a tentative value could be announced, affording intending purchasers considerable latitude in making a choice. For instance, John Doe might announce that he had breeding Barred Rock cockerels to offer from $7.50 to $25 each: exhibition cockerels from $25 to $150; pullets from $5 to $20, and exhibition females from $25 to $100. Such an announcement conveys a sense of values, and to our way of thinking possesses a larger pulling power than Richard Roe's announcement that he had breeding and exhibition Black Minorcas for sale, with an invitation to write for particulars and prices. The four pivotal points of an advertisement should be "what, when, where" and the price.

An Isolated Place for the Ailing.

All poultry farms above the ordinary should enjoy the privilege and advantages of a hospital ward. It matters not how careful the management may be, nor the observance of good sanitation and cleanliness, disease will make its appearance. To this ward all ailing ones should be removed immediately it is discovered that there is disease present. This will avoid contagion, and at the same time afford better opportunity for intelligent treatment. Isolation calls for no expensive quarters, but it does call for physical comforts, freedom from draughts, well-ventilated quarters and an environment that is sanitary. To do this, disinfection at regular intervals is advisable; particularly after being inhabited by ailing fowl.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

The Cotton Tests

DOUBTLESS the low price of both long and short-staple cotton will have its effect in a decreased acreage set to this crop in California next year. But a lessened interest in cotton culture will not detract from the lasting value of growing experiments, carried on during the past year in many counties, for the purpose of deciding where cotton, especially the Durango and Egyptian long-staple varieties, could be grown profitably. It is to be regretted that many planters of test plots lost interest in their experiment as the price of cotton began to fall, for, as a result, no fair test was made in some localities.

Regardless of momentary price fluctuations, the business of producing extra long and extra fine cotton in California, Arizona and the northern district of Lower California is bound to be continued and to grow. It may even in time become California's most important single agricultural industry. The demand for cotton of extra length, which is grown only in California and Arizona, as far as the United States is concerned, will continue to grow, and it is quite possible that short varieties of cotton will be entirely abandoned, in those districts where long-staple cotton can be profitably grown, in favor of the Egyptian variety.

In coming years, when the acreage of the long staple spreads permanently outward from the great valleys of the Lower Colorado River basin, the hundreds of tests made this year will be a guide which will be invaluable to planters. The behavior of experimentally handled plants in the various districts this year will give farmers a line on cotton culture, when the price of cotton rises to a point where it can be grown right along with as great a profit as there is in raising alfalfa, sorghums or grains. And that time will come with the development of uses and a market for our fine staples and with the better organization of the growers for their own economic interests.

Two years ago, Kern, Tulare and Fresno county growers demonstrated, by good crops of long-staple cotton, the error of the opinion generally held that the growing of cotton outside the Lower Colorado River Basin was unprofitable. This year other districts were added to the profitable cotton area.

Cottonseed germinates readily, under a wide range of climatic and soil conditions, and the plants thrive, up to a certain stage, in almost every county in California. But high summer temperatures are necessary for the profitable growing of cotton of any sort, and a growing season of from eight to nine months is necessary for the profitable production of Egyptian cotton. Tests this year have shown that profitable cotton growing weather and a really pleasant summer climate are opposites; the cotton will stay in irrigated regions, removed from the atmospherical influence of the ocean, and which are otherwise adapted to the requirements of this exacting crop.

Why Nuts Move Slowly.

IMPORTATION of European walnuts amounting to 60 per cent of the consumption in the United States this year has resulted in a sluggish movement of California walnuts, despite the lowering of the price of the local product 30 per cent. C. C. Teague, president of the California Walnut Growers' Association, has issued a statement to walnut growers, stating that it will take the coming year to sell all the crop because of the reluctance of grocers to stock up beyond immediate needs.

Imports of walnuts in the year ending May 1 were 73,101,907 pounds and the California crop 55,042,700 pounds. Thus California growers are competing, with little hindrance in the way of duty, with the cheaply produced walnuts of Europe. Do the men who sit in the halls of Congress believe that the California farmer should be placed on a par with the European peasant and that the California walnut picker should be compelled to reduce his scale of living until he is on a level with the agricultural laborer of Europe?

TESTS SHOW COTTON CULTURE AND FINE SUMMER CLIMATE DON'T HITCH.

HIGH prices obtained for cotton of all varieties in 1919, combined with the enthusiasm for long staple growing, due to the expansion of cord-tire manufacturing, and the establishment of a large tire factory in Los Angeles, created unusual interest this year, in the growing of cotton in districts outside proven growing zones in California. As a result, scores of test plots were planted in four counties of Southern California, and in districts in the San Joaquin Valley, where cotton had not already become established as a profitable crop. The agricultural extension service of the United States Department of Agriculture and the University of California combined, assisted in the cotton-growing experiments, sending out selected seed and planting information. Interest in the experiments decreased with the price of cotton during the late summer, and some of the plots were abandoned entirely. Others were intelligently cared for, and the data thus gained will be of great benefit to cotton culture in all districts in which the growing of the crop may from now on be undertaken.

Experimental cotton planting in California has been spasmodic ever since 1856, when the State Agricultural Society offered a large prize for the best acre of cotton. In that year a farmer in the San Fernando Valley raised a patch of cotton, but there is no data to show whether the crop was successful. In 1865, a farmer "near Los Angeles" raised 108 acres of cotton, but again history does not specify whether the crop was worth picking. In 1873, more than 22,000 pounds of cotton were grown in Merced county and shipped to Liverpool.

Observation of test plots planted in the past and during this year prove that cotton will make a good start almost anywhere in California outside of mountain regions. The seed sprouts under greatly varying conditions of soil, moisture and climate, the plants spring up like corn, and blossoms and bolls invariably follow. However, cotton growing under present conditions cannot be profitable unless a large number of bolls open before frost kills the plant. The question of whether districts in Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino and other counties can grow cotton profitably is largely one of length of growing season, absence of early fall rains, high night temperatures during the summer.

TESTS NOT UNIFORM.

In many districts cotton growing was not given a fair test this year, owing to the inexperience of the farmers, late planting, early frosts, and winds. It is believed that Federal and State agriculturalists will continue the tests next year. It is pointed out that, in a State free from the major cotton pests which create devastation in fields of the Southern States, with a climate adapted to the growing of long staple cotton in many districts, the determination of the limits of cotton culture is a most important undertaking.

Generally speaking, those semi-arid districts in Riverside and San Bernardino county removed from the direct climatic influence of the ocean, with warm summer evenings and a growing season of at least 250 days, were indicated as adapted to cotton growing by this year's tests. These districts include the Perris Valley, the Armada, Moreno and Corona districts in Riverside county, and certain parts of the Mojave Desert. In the region of Bakersfield and south of Fresno and in other parts of the San Joaquin Valley, including parts of Tulare county, the growing of long staple cotton is now on a stable basis as far as production is concerned as a result of the crops of 1919 and 1920, and these districts are now in the California cotton column with the Imperial, Coachella and Palo Verde valleys. Whether cotton of desired varieties can be grown successfully in a number of districts outside of these districts is still problematical.

FROST DATA IMPORTANT.

The most important consideration to the cotton farmer, next to an assurance of high temperatures during the growing season, is the length of the growing season itself. Temperatures of less than 30 deg. are fatal to the cotton plant under ordinary conditions. Often no killing frost visits certain sections of the Imperial and Coachella valleys, and the cotton stalks are cut off near the ground and a new growth starts, giving the earliest cotton. However, frost data kept by the United States Weather Bureau shows that only in these two valleys is this condition possible, for frosts sufficiently severe to put an end to cotton growing occurs in other sections of Southern and Central California each year.

The length of the growing season determines to a large extent the profitableness of the cotton-growing venture. A growing season of less than 260 days is not sufficient for the production of long staple cotton, experts advise.

The Weather Bureau has frost data on the following districts in California, where cotton is or has been growing this year: Bakersfield, Brawley, Blythe, Corona, Elsinore, Fontana, Fresno, Hemet, Indio, Pomona, Porterville, Riverside and San Jacinto. Records of the last killing frost in spring and the first killing frost in fall have been kept in these localities for from four to sixteen years. The average length of the growing seasons in these localities, with the dates of the frosts, are as follows:

City	Avge. date of last killing frost in Spring	Avge. date of first killing frost in Fall	Length of growing season, days
Bakersfield	Feb. 27	Dec. 2	280
Brawley	Feb. 11	Dec. 4	296
Blythe	Mar. 10	Nov. 5	239
Corona	Mar. 16	Dec. 8	266
Elsinore	Mar. 9	Nov. 29	264
Fontana	Mar. 22	Dec. 14	266
Fresno	April 3	Nov. 1	232
Hemet	Mar. 20	Oct. 26	219
Indio	Feb. 16	Dec. 4	291
Pomona	Mar. 23	Nov. 20	241
Porterville	Mar. 10	Nov. 30	264
Riverside	Mar. 3	Nov. 21	262
San Jacinto	Mar. 9	Nov. 23	258

In order to obtain all the data available regarding both the experimental plantings and the commercial plots outside of the long since proven areas of Imperial, Palo Verde and Coachella valleys, representatives of the Farm and Tractor Section of The Times scoured the field covered by the experiments in the various counties, getting their information first hand from the growers where possible, and obtaining photographs of typical cotton plants and fields. In the case of the San Joaquin Valley counties, the crop though established on considerable areas, is yet new and was included in the investigations. Information secured is contained in the following reports from counties named:

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Experimental plots were planted by several farmers in the Antelope Valley and in the San Fernando Valley, at Chatsworth, Zelzah, San Fernando Mission Acres and Burbank. Three varieties, Pima Egyptian, Durango medium staple, and Mebane short staple were planted.

The Farm Advisors' office secured seed of several varieties free of charge from the

ORIENTAL BEAN AS BALLAST.

While the freight rates on beans were recently increased 33 per cent, the ocean freight rates on the same commodity from the Orient, South America, or Madagascar, have tended to grow less, and recently beans have been transported from Japan to this country for only about the handling cost, on the theory that they were needed as ballast, say officials of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association. California growers are finding it difficult to compete against both lower freight rates and the cheaper labor of foreign countries.

ELIMINATING SCRUBS.

"Breed, Feed, Weed, Read and Succeed." This is the slogan of the farmers who have enlisted in the pure-bred sire campaign which is sweeping the country and putting American live stock to the fore. It is believed that the value of live stock in the United States will be doubled within three or four years if farmers in every State take up the campaign."

DRAFT HORSES HIGHER.

The United States census for 1910 revealed 19,833,000 horses and 4,210,000 mules on farms; and the Department of Agriculture estimates for Jan. 1, 1920, show 21,109,000 horses and 4,995,000 mules on farms, or an increase of 1,276,000 horses and 785,000 mules in the last decade. Besides this we exported, during the nine years ending June 30,1919, 1,149,763 horses and 376,836 mules. The rise in prices for good draft horses and mules in spite of the existence of more than 21,000,000 horses and almost 5,000,000 mules on farms indicates how agricultural and transportation needs are growing.

SEEK BEST SORGHUM FOR SYRUP MAKING.

More interest in the growing of sorghums for syrup making is manifest in southern counties of California, following the establishment of a number of sorghum mills in producing centers. What varieties of sorghum to plant under various California conditions is a problem which the growers are pondering, following their experience this season.

The Sorghum Syrup Refining Company, which established a mill and cooker at Burbank, has had better results this year with Early Orange sorghum than with the commoner Silver Tip, which was a favorite last year. The Orange gives a brighter syrup and a better flavor, say the Watts brothers, who are running the mill. There were about 100 acres of sorghum planted in the vicinity of the mill this year, and the yield is said to have run between 175 and 200 gallons per acre on the best prices. The brothers have made the syrup for the farmers at 65 cents a gallon, and helped the growers sell the product, which has been retailed at from $1.50 to $1.75 per gallon. The residue left from the crushing of the cane is sold as fertilizer and hog feed, being cut to suitable lengths with an ensilage cutter.

J. A. Higgason & Son of Bell, Los Angeles county, operate a mill and cooker. About fifty acres of sweet sorghums were planted at Bell this season, Amber, Silver Tip and Orange being tried. The Higgasons have found Amber not as well suited for syrup making as the other two kinds, both of which make an excellent quality syrup. The capacity of the Higgason plant is 100 to 125 gallons per day. A little trouble with alkali, which causes the juice to boil up too quickly and necessitates extra pains in preparation, has caused the syrup makers to advise the planting of the sorghums only on light, well-drained soil, free from spots of alkali.

The long growing season in most Southern California districts is very favorable to the growing of sorghum, Mr. Higgason says. He made syrup in Southern Illinois for twenty years, and old Jack Frost always made an end to syrup-making operations there early in October. Here he expects to make syrup until January 1. He advises planters to delay seeding until about May 20, as warm weather is required for good germination of the seed. At the Higgason mill the juice is pumped from the mill to the cook-house, and the syrup is made in two large cooking pans, which have twenty-four compartments each. Before boiling, the juice is warmed up in a vat, to facilitate the operation.

COTTON CULTURE.

seventy to eighty days and each thirty days thereafter, with frequent cultivations. The plants are very well developed. Picking started November 8, and the yield is estimated by cotton authorities at nearly a bale to the acre.

R. E. Blair of Porterville, formerly of Bard, Cal., and who is conducting cotton seed tests at his place, doubts the statement, sometimes heard, that cotton will displace orchards in Tulare county. But growers, as a result of this year's tests, believe, first, that Pima is the one variety for Tulare county; second, that cotton will be grown there only as an intercrop.

KERN COUNNTY.

This is the third year of commercial cotton culture in Kern county. From 550 acres in 1918, the cotton area increased to 10,762 acres in 1920. Although the yield this year was better than the average throughout the United States, cotton farmers are generally of the opinion that if the price does not go above 30 cents per pound before next spring very little cotton will be planted in 1921.

As a result of the 1918 and 1919 plantings of Pima cotton the adaptability of certain sections of Kern county to the culture of the long staple was assured, and this year 7484 acres were planted to the Egyptian long staple, the largest acreage of the variety of any county in California with the exception of Imperial. There are 845 acres of Durango and 2433 acres of two kinds of short staple. Five gins are handling the crop this year. Leading cotton growing communities are Shafter, Wasco, Weed Patch and Arvin. Cotton is also grown at McFarland, Pond, Delano, Semitropic, Rio Bravo, Lerdo, Beardsley and Fairfax districts. The average yield this year is stated to be about the same as last year, when 900 bales were secured from 1100 acres of all varieties. Four hundred and twenty-two farmers planted cotton. Planting was between March 20 and April 15. Some growers started picking short staple about September 20 and long staple a month later.

FRESNO COUNTY.

Cotton growing and planting has been a success in Fresno county this year. About four years ago experiments were made on the Kearney Park University Farm, by Parker Frisselle, the manager, and last year cotton raising was started on a commercial basis. Last year thirty-three bales were secured from forty acres and this year 200 acres of Pima long staple were planted and is now being picked. It is expected about 175 bales will be secured. Perhaps the largest grower of cotton in the county is the Boston Land Company at Henrietta, in the western part of the county. About 3000 acres of Durango cotton is now being picked, with 300 pickers engaged. A large gin is in operation. A smaller gin will be started soon on the Kearney Park farm. Pima long staple and Durango are the varieties grown here. Out on the James ranch colony, west of the city, a fine crop of Pima has been grown with good success. The date of planting is April, and picking began the early part of October. Picking will probably be finished by the middle of December. The kind of soil in this section best suited is black, rich loam, while down at Henrietta a red loam such as is found in the arid places is used. The cotton necessitates several irrigations here, and when irrigated at least once a month or oftener it thrives best.

KINGS COUNTY.

The third crop of cotton to be produced in the Corcoran district is now being harvested, and the results obtained justify the prediction that cotton growing will become a permanent industry there, if the price goes higher. Some of the fields are being picked over the second time, and several growers report yields of one bale to the acre of the Durango and Mebane varieties.

Picking on the Los Posos ranch, which produced a little more than a bale per acre of Durango last year, has just begun and the present crop is estimated at a bale and a quarter per acre. This property is owned by Santa Barbara capitalists, the controlling interest being held by H. J. Doulton. The owners are so favorably impressed with the possibilities of the cotton industry that the dairy stock has been disposed of and a large portion of the acreage will be planted to cotton next year. There are about 200 acres of cotton on this ranch at present, all Durango.

G. F. Sloan of Los Angeles has about forty acres of Mebane cotton which will average a bale to the acre, and the lint is said to be of excellent quality. The crop was grown by Harry King, formerly of Marian.

A thirty-acre crop of Pima cotton, grown by L. B. Lapron on the Hall ranch, is nearly ready for picking, but no accurate estimate has been made as to the probable yield. This variety is not regarded as favorably as the Durango and Mebane in this vicinity. The total production in the Corcoran district is estimated at one thousand bales, including all varieties.

PARCEL POST LIMITED.

While it may be attractive to a city dweller to believe that he can have a vegetable garden grown for him 100 miles or 150 miles away, place his orders for the cost of a stamp, and have the produce delivered at his door, it should be remembered that not all farm products lend themselves to direct marketing by parcel post. Usually it is impracticable to market such heavy products as potatoes by parcel post, whereas eggs, butter, sausage, poultry, many vegetables, and nut meats may frequently be shipped with profit and at a saving to the purchaser

The use of lambing sheds greatly reduces infant mortality of lambs.

Most tractors are now fitted with spark arresters.

THINK THIS OVER

One pair of Lice on that bird, means one hundred thousand descendants in less than two months.
The Federal Bureau of Entomology states that 99 per cent of the flocks of the country are infested with both Mites and Lice.
The chicken infested with Lice and Mites is from one to two pounds under normal weight.
Mites and Lice cut egg production from twenty-five to fifty percent.

THE WEGNER MEDICATED POULTRY ROOST

is the greatest proposition ever offered to the Poultry Raisers of this country.
It means the complete and permanent eradication of Mites and Lice.
It means greater vitality of the flock; it means more weight per bird.
It means increased egg production.
It means the getting away from the disagreeable and continual job of spraying.
It is simple; it is sure; it will last a life time; it will pay for itself every six months.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

EAST HIGHLANDS.—The frost is not on the pumpkins in Southern California, but just the same there are many of them in the field and the fodder is in the shock. It is a fact that more pumpkins and corn are being grown in Southern California these days than the true Californian ever had thought possible. With corn at the price it is now, it is possible to make money on the grain even with high-priced land. And the pumpkins also. A drive through the upper end of the San Bernardino Valley, especially in the district devoted largely to hog raising and the dairy industry, shows many fields of corn and many acres devoted to pumpkins. And the pumpkin pie produced in California is as tempting as those of the East. Pumpkins are grown though not so much for the pumpkin pie as because the dairyman has found that they give a rich return when fed to the cows. Great pumpkins, and, of course, squashes, are piled high in the barns and during the winter months are hacked up with hatchets and fed to "Bossy." The return for this attention is an increased production of milk and a better flavored milk. More and more acres are devoted each year to the corn and to the pumpkins because it is quite the thing to plant the corn and grow the pumpkins between the rows. On the Base Line, between East Highlands and San Bernardino, there are any number of fields of corn and pumpkins.

MARIOUT MAKES GOOD.

TULARE.—Mariout barley was grown in field tests last season on five ranches in Tulare county and an average increase of 4.2 sacks per acre above common barley has been reported to the authorities at the University Farm. In these tests common and Mariout barley were planted side by side under as nearly similar conditions as possible and it was found at harvest time that Mariout had averaged fourteen and two-tenths sacks per acre as against ten sacks per acre for the common sort. In all instances it was found that Mariout ripened about two weeks earlier than common barley and this characteristic makes it especially valuable for the Tulare Lake bottom lands, where late maturing grain is frequently lost through flooding in the spring. As a result of these convincing tests a heavy planting of Mariout will be made in Tulare county this fall, and several large consignments of seed have left the Davis region for this locality.

WITHDRAWS GREAT AREA.

NILAND.—The Secretary of the Interior on November 3, issued an order withdrawing from entry about 200,000 acres of public land lying east, north and southeast of Niland, Imperial county, in the vicinity of the Salton Sea, and even including a part of the sea itself. Many "squatters" who have been holding lands not legally entered will probably have to give up their homesteads under the new order.

NAVELS GOING EAST.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The local crop of Washington navel oranges now is well under way to eastern markets, where it is commanding very high prices. Nearly all the picking will be done this month, being the earliest known for years. The grapefruit crop is ripening rapidly and is being shipped mainly to southwestern points. Turning from cotton, a large new acreage of citrus fruit would be planted in the valley this winter were it possible to get nursery stock. Little is to be had here and Arizona quarantine laws forbid importation of young trees from California. It is believed there will have to be modification of this rule, with provision for the quarantine and fumigation of all nursery stock brought from outside the State. An exceptionally early variety of the navel has been developed near Phoenix by F. W. Avery, from whom many Arizona growers are securing budding material.

FATTENING STEERS.

FONTANA.—In pursuance of its quest for animal fertilizer for is 5000-acre citrus grove, the Fontana Farms Company recently brought in 350 steers from the Mojave Desert to feed on ensilage and peanut hay. When this herd is fattened another herd will be brought in to take its place. To handle its large crop of peanuts the company is installing a complete mill, includ- a sheller, a specific gravity separator and a machine for taking out the sticks and stones before shelling. This will be the only mill of its kind and capacity on the Pacific Coast.

HUNDRED TONS SHIPPED.

CHINO.—According to the report of the Chino Walnut Association, over 100 tons of walnuts have been handled since the season opened. The nuts produced by members of this association are packed under the Diamond brand. This requires that 90 per cent of the meats of the budded varieties must be good and 92 per cent of the soft-shelled varieties. It is predicted that the entire output of the association will be at least 200 tons before the season ends.

LONG STAPLE QUOTATION.

EL CENTRO.—The first quotation for Imperial Valley Egyptian cotton this season was made by Daly Brothers of El Centro, who received a wire from their agents in New York, putting the price of Egyptian cotton at from 49 to 65 cents. "Pima, of No. 2 grade," the message stated, "of inch and five-eighths staple, is offered at 58 cents, and probably could be bought cheaper on a firm bid."

FLOCKS GOING SOUTH.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Early snowstorms in the plateau region have caused many sheep owners to start shipment of their flocks southward by rail, rather than by driving along the four lanes that have been established through the forest reserves. Each lane is a mile wide, running from the Holbrook, Winslow, Flagstaff and Williams sections. More than a half million ewes will be wintered on the plains north of Phoenix, for shearing and lambing. While the price of wool is hardly half that known during the last season and the demand for spring lambs does not promise well, there is consolation that early rains, with promise of more, will provide exceptionally good pasturage on the lower plains. Last season was dry and return to the north had to be made at an exceptionally early time.

NO RETAIL DECLINE.

SANTA BARBARA. — Eugene Kellogg, County Horticultural Commissioner, states that, although the cattlemen in the Santa Barbara range country are losing money every day delivering beef steers at 8 to 8½ cents on the hoof, about half what they were getting eighteen months ago, the retail price of meats continues to stay up in Santa Barbara. A movement is on foot to organize a selling association and to seek markets other than in Southern California cities if necessary to get better prices.

COTTON WITHOUT WATER.

INDIO. Unirrigated cotton on the desert is an anomaly, and a successful crop grown without the application of water in the Land of Little Rain is decidedly unusual. Yet J. L. Marshall did it. He planted six acres more than he had water for, after irrigating the ground well. He abandoned the six acres, except for cultivation, when his water ran shy. The heavy rains, coming in August, did the best, and the six acres show up about as well as the rest.

ELECTS OFFICERS.

RIALTO.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Rialto Heights Citrus Association, a member of the San Bernardino County Fruit Exchange, reports were read showing the business of the association to be in the best possible condition, fruit returns for the past season being among the highest in this locality. The election of officers and directors for the coming year resulted as follows: C. R. Hobbs, president; D. C. Huntington, vice-president; A. H. Morgan, secretary; L. E. Newcomb and H. R. Bonnert, additional directors.

TO HANDLE MISSIONS.

LINDSAY.—Reporting the sale of 400 tons of olives and the closing of "pool number one," at a very fair price, the Lindsay Olive Growers' Association is making arrangements to open a second pool. It is expected that plans will soon be consummated for the handling of the mission olives at a satisfactory price. Picking has already commenced. The old Mutual packing-house is being utilized as a place to receive the olives and all necessary details have been arranged.

LETTUCE AND MELON GROWERS ORGANIZE.

CALIPATRIA. — The Imperial Valley Vegetable and Melon Growers' Association came into being last week, when six directors of the new organization were named at a meeting presided over by James P. Britt, deputy State market inspector, and Ed Garthwaite, county farm adviser. The directors named are: J. E. O'Neill, William F. Wild, A. S. Farley, Thomas L. Jones, J. R. Griffith and William Hilliker. A seventh director, to be named later, will represent the State Market Commission.

While the association made its initial bow at Calipatria, it will be county-wide in scope. The southern end of the county will be gradually covered, until each producing center is represented. It is planned to market the lettuce and spinach crop during the next few months, and later include the melon and other crops as they come into the market.

In speaking of the objects of the association, Mr. Britt said:

"More than $60,000,000 worth of California products were marketed last year through co-operation. The association will have behind it, the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture, the county farm bureau and the State Market Commission. The association is regularly incorporated, and will work on a purely non-profit co-operative principle.

"Among the immediate benefits will be the inspection of vegetables when shipped. The deputy, when making the inspection, will issue a certificate to the grower. We are arranging with the United States Department of Agriculture to have a deputy inspect the produce when it reaches its destination. This will obviate all claims that goods were poor when shipped and in bad condition when reaching their destination. The immense advantage of this double inspection certainly must appeal to all, as it means honest prices for honest goods."

Other districts will be admitted as rapidly as they can be reached.

WILL TEST SULPHUR.

A project on the use of sulphur, lime, gypsum and superphosphates with various crops is now being prepared by the office of the farm adviser in Los Angeles county and will be launched within the near future.

COTTON CULTURE.

From May 1 to May 10 there were planted at Fontana three experimental plots of cotton, located at three widely separated points on the Fontana ranch. Each twenty-acre plot was planted half to Durango and half to Pima long staple. Owing to inexperience the crop was planted too deeply (three to four inches) and the stand obtained was not satisfactory. Accordingly, with the exception of ten acres of Pima on one plot and a few rows on each of the other plots, weed knives were run over the cotton, with the expectation of abandoning the experiment. However, about May 1 the Agricultural Department learned that cotton was still being planted in the Perris country, so fen acres were re-seeded on each plot of Durango and a very good stand resulted. The cotton was thinned to about eighteen inches apart to the row, and irrigation started around July 1, all plots being irrigated at intervals of from fourteen to twenty-one days thereafter up to the middle of October.

On one of the ten-acre plots 300 pounds of nitrate of soda was applied on five acres and balanced or complete fertilizer was used on two and one-half acres. On the plot fertilized with nitrate of soda much more rapid growth was shown than on the nonfertilized area or on those fertilized with complete fertilizer. The latter growth seemed to be stunted, although it did show signs of maturing a little early. The soil used is a light sandy loam, with a strong lime content. Cotton on old alfalfa ground has given a particularly good account of itself at Fontana, making perhaps a 50 per cent greater growth than on the nonfertilized plots and being proportionately well fruited.

Cotton men who have seen the planting on the Fontana ranch say that, if even the larger bolls mature, the yield will run over a bale to the acre on the Durango. The Pima is too scattered to estimate in this way, but in nearly all of the stands there are from 50 to 100 bolls on each plant, it is said. Those that have opened seem to have a very good staple. The ranch manager has no doubt but that cotton would be an entire success if it could be put out in March or April, which he thinks could be done by making a thick shallow planting during any warm spell in these two months.

Cotton in the Citrus Belt.

An Ontario orchardist planted short staple cotton as an experiment near his orange grove.

TULARE COUNTY.

Although a few acres of cotton were planted experimentally in Tulare county during 1919, the three chief varieties were not given a real try-out until this season, when about 3500 acres were planted, principally to Durango, although Pima was successfully tried. The long growing season and warm summer nights helped the Tulare cotton, and fields that were planted early enough matured good crops. However, the irrigated land in the county is in great demand for fruit growing is comparatively high-priced and is not therefore adapted ordinarily to cotton growing, except as an intercrop. The larger part of the cotton acreage, outside of the intercrop plantings, was in the Tipton, Pixley, Earlimart, Poplar anl Tulare districts. The largest planting was by the Globe Mills, at El Mirador, one of 320 acres of Durango.

D. E. McCorkle of Lindsay intercropped a twenty-acre young orchard with Durango, planting April 1. The spring was cool, but the summer a little warmer than usual, and picking began September 1. He irrigated five times and had a yield of 300 pounds per acre. C. O. Griffin, secretary of the Lindsay Cotton Growers' Association, with associates, planted Pima cotton as an intercrop to Emperor grapes, a total of twelve acres. They estimate a little over a bale to the acre. W. E. and C. O. Premc of Porterville have ventured farther in the experiment, having seventy acres in Pima, planted Apri 10, to May 1, first irrigation

SIMPLE MIXTURE MAKES HENS LAY

By W. S. Burgess

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A lifelong study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Comb's Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way, the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 107 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.

Recovering from the Moult

PCA

MOULT MASH & DRY MASH

Egg production regularly takes a drop during the moulting season. One of our own typical experiences with 500 hens (each a year old) showed a decline in production to 15 percent of normal during the moult. However, this figure was brought up to 40 percent within a period of sixty days by proper feeding, using

P. C. A. Moult Mash with Buttermilk and P. C. A. Dry Mash

Experienced poultrymen have demonstrated that these two celebrated feeds, not only tend to bolster up egg laying but are valuable as aids to the hen during the natural strain of moulting.

P. C. A. MOULT MASH is a specialty feed and must not be considered in any sense a substitute for P. C. A. DRY MASH.

P. C. A. Feeds are Packed in 100 lb. Sacks. Look for the Trademark.

DIRECTIONS FOR FEEDING: Keep both P.C.A. Moult Mash and P.C.A. Dry Mash before your hens continuously—or feed each hen one-half ounce of dampened P.C.A. Moult Mash per day in addition to the regular diet of P.C.A. Dry Mash.

Write to us for names of your nearest dealers and we will also send you free of charge a copy of "Feeding Dry Mash," by M. A. Schofield.

Help the Molters Hurry the Pullets

A little extra care now—a bit of attention to the molting hens and growing pullets—means a lot of extra high-priced eggs during the winter. It often means the difference between success and failure. Don't just hope for winter eggs—get them by giving your flock

Pratts Poultry Regulator

It does what its name implies—regulates and tones up the system. It helps overcome the bad effects of the late molt and hastens the growth of the pullets. Result—both old and young will begin laying sooner and keep steadily at it. To get lots of eggs, give "Pratts" a trial—at our risk.

HOGANIZED
WHITE LEGHORN BABY CHICKS
WALTER HOGAN STOCK

We procure all our hatching eggs from a flock of 1500 hens that were hatched and raised from eggs bought direct from Hogan. The owner of the flock is an expert at Hoganizing and a very successful poultryman. He will not keep a hen that will not lay over 190 eggs per year. We guarantee safe arrival by express of a full count live chicks anywhere within 48 hours of Los Angeles. Fall chicks do fine and will begin to lay when 5 months old and be laying when spring-hatched birds are moulting. The ancestors of our chicks have been Hoganized and bred for egg production by Mr. Hogan for over 15 years. There is nothing better.

RESULTS WITH SULPHUR ON BEANS AND WHEAT.

BY C. C. STAUNTON.
COUNTY AGENT, VENTURA COUNTY.

Recent investigations made by the Oregon Experiment Station in the use of powdered sulphur to increase crop yields have resulted in a general report favorable to that material on some certain crops, mainly alfalfa, the clovers and vetches.

Demonstrations made in various parts of California through the efforts of farm advisers have yielded many interesting results, some negative and some positive, according to certain local conditions. A few experimenters added materials in conjunction with the sulphur, such as gypsum and lime and phosphates.

The results obtained in Ventura county the past year have brought one or two factors to the fore which, though not considered definitely settled as to making them a regular farm practice, have stimulated an interest in the use of sulphur. The first application of sulphur was made on wheat land, and was at the rate of 220 pounds per acre, being applied to the ground immediately before sowing, on January 20, the soil being a rather heavy loam and having a good amount of humus. Early Baart was the variety grown and it was planted at the rate of eighty pounds per acre. During the growing season the plot was carefully watched and no smut made its appearance, although rust showed all over the fields, including the test plot.

The grain on the sulphured acre stooled out better than that on the untreated field, the germination seemed better and the crop matured a trifle later. A systematic examination of the heads of wheat in both plots showed that the sulphured one had longer, heavier filled out ones with the berries much more plump than was the case with the rest of the field.

At the time of harvesting this acre and another check acre were held separate, but owing to difficulties with the machine when threshing time came, these plots were overlooked and all run through without any track being kept of the yields. An estimate would put it at a 15 to 20 per cent increase in favor of the sulphur.

A half acre of alfalfa was treated at the same rate of 220 pounds per acre, but has given no returns all season. One possible reason for this is that the irrigating water comes from Sulphur Mountain and contains a relatively high per cent of soluble sulphates, so that the addition of sulphur had no effect.

On the lima bean land the application was made the last of March, the material being broadcasted by hand, irrigated twice and cultivated three or four times during the growing season and threshed on October 4.

Results With Sulphur.

Right—Eight hundred pounds of beans grown on half-acre of sulphured land. Left—Six hundred pounds from unsulphured half-acre adjoining. Photographed on test plot of J. P. Thille bean ranch in Ventura county.

The check plot beside it had absolutely the same treatment and was of the same soil type. The one-half acre gave 801 pounds of limas, the unsulphured 598 pounds, which was an increase of 203 pounds to the half acre, or over 400 pounds per acre.

The increase in crop yield, however, was not entirely due to whatever stimulating effect the sulphur may have made on the plants, for the stand was heavier than on the check or on the rest of the forty-acre field. This may have been due to the control or repelling of wireworm damage on this plot, for none were noticed working here, though many plants showed their work on the bordering rows and practically the whole field showed depredations to a greater or less extent.

A number of Ventura Farm Bureau members are to experiment with sulphur next year on a commercial scale to find if this material will be of real value in increasing the crop and in the reduction of the wireworm damage, or perhaps in its control.

DOUBLE CROPPING PLAN PAYS WELL.

COACHELLA.—There are around 3000 acres of cotton planted in the Coachella Valley this year, mostly Durango, with about 400 acres of Pima, which is producing a fine crop.

Volunteer cotton from last year's stubble, grown by William Lay, one mile west of Indio, yielded half a bale per acre in August, having still four months' growing season left to make cotton.

H. O. Todd, near Coachella, a new man from San Francisco, after harvesting a good onion crop between his date trees, planted cotton between the trees in June, and has a heavy crop of Durango, which will, it is expected, yield him a bale to the acre.

Dr. D. G. Sniff, recently from Newman, Cal., from his thirty-acre ranch, between Indio and Coachella, after harvesting an early onion crop that brought him a good return, leased the ranch to Pedro Diaz, recently from Mexico City, and J. A. McGregor, for a reported rental of $52 per acre cash rent, for a cotton crop for the rest of the year.

V. E. Metzler, a retired banker, thinks grapes and cotton will grow together, and that two blades should grow where one is usually grown, as shown by his fine Pima cotton planted between his young grape vines. Both have made a marvelous growth, the cotton protecting the young vines from the spring winds.

J. A. Harris, who has cotton gins at Imperial and Brawley, built a new four-stand gin at Coachella this year, and is running full shift.

The general feeling of the farmers here is that the price of cotton is bound to be much better and for that reason many are holding on. Some cotton has been sent to the warehouse at San Pedro for storage. Some farmers are hauling seed back from the gin to be used as fertilizer.

CALIFORNIANS WIN HEAVILY AT FAIR.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The poultry and pigeon display at the Arizona State Fair held here November 8 to 13 was declared the best ever seen at Phoenix. There were over 1000 entries. William Fetterly was in charge and the judges were N. E. Luce of the United States Poultry Experiment Station at Glendale, Ariz., and M. E. [illegible], White Leghorn breeder of Burbank, Cal. Over 100 single-comb Rhode Island Reds were in evidence, followed in number by Barred Rocks.

A large number of Californians were exhibitors. R. G. Baxter, Whittier, took all awards for rose-comb White Leghorns and had first cock and third hen in black-breasted Red Game bantams. A. G. Huskins, Glendale, took first cock, first hen, first cockerel and first pullet in White Wyandottes and first cockerel in black-breasted Red Game bantams and first cockerel in Light Brahmas, second cock Golden Seabright bantams. William Williams, Los Angeles, took second, third and fourth hens, first and third cockerels, the four awards in pullets and first and second pens in Buff Minorcas, as well as second and third hen, second and fourth cockerel, third and fourth pullet in Buff Cochin bantams. H. D. Keplinger, Los Angeles, took first cock, first hen, second cockerel and first pullet in Buff Cochin bantams. Dr. R. Irwin Royce, Glendale, took first cock Golden Seabright bantams, all awards for Partridge Plymouth Rock bantams, three prizes for Red Game bantams and second cock for single-comb White Leghorns. J. J. Dean, Moneta, took all awards in Silver Seabright bantams. Percival D. Edouart, Los Angeles, took first cock and first hen in Dark Cornish. H. E. Belcher, Los Angeles, took all awards in Blue Andalusians. W. Wesley Wilson, Guasti, took all awards except second cock in single-comb White Leghorns. Phil Lehrbach, Los Angeles, took first and second cock, second, third and fourth hens, first, second and fourth cockerels, third pullet in single-comb Rhode Island Whites, second cock, third hen, second pullet rose-comb Rhode Island Whites. J. L. Harrison, Pasadena, took second, third and fourth pullets Rhode Island Reds, first cock, first hen, first cockerel, first, third and fourth pullets silver-laced Wyandottes. Floyd R. Marvin, Burbank, took third cockerel in White Wyandottes.

TO USE FERTILIZERS.

A. E. Barnes, secretary of the Fruit Growers' Supply Company, at a meeting of fertilizer companies and fruit growers with G. H. Hecke, recently, predicted that there will be an increased consumption of commercial fertilizers in California amounting to 20 per cent per year, for several years, owing to the growing scarcity of animal manures.

A Land of Milk and Money

It takes more than honeyed language to put your dairy-farm on a moneyed basis. It takes know-how! Breeding, cow-testing, feeding—that is the trinity of success in the dairy business. And feeding should not come last in your reckoning, either!

For it's the feed that shows up in the flow. It's the feed that, in the end, makes your herd profitable or unprofitable.

Nature has provided alfalfa hay or pasturage for your cows—that's good! But it doesn't go far enough. Because alfalfa, although a cheap source of protein, contains only half the carbohydrates required. Hence the need of a concentrated grain feed.

It has been demonstrated time and time again that you can't put your dairy on a real profit-basis unless you feed, in addition to roughage, a grain concentrate. And just as alfalfa hay is the ideal roughage, so SUREMILK is the ideal grain concentrate. Together, they enable your cows to produce the greatest amount of milk at the lowest cost.

If you want to see how SUREMILK can help to make your dairy-farm a land of milk and money, send for our booklet, "Converting Feed into Money." It's free—mail the coupon now!

COTTON CULTURE.

alkali, and the water table lies about three to four feet from the surface.

As irrigation is necessary for the growing of cotton, this culture is not a success at every place on the desert. At Hesperia the weather conditions are not so favorable for the growing of the long staple variety, although the short staple may do fairly well, it is believed. Farther north, in the Apple Valley country, it may be possible to grow this variety, providing the weather permits early planting. W. A. Foster of Apple Valley tried out some of the new variety, Ascla, which has done very well and which may prove to be the best variety for that district and others not having a long growing period.

Experiments on a small scale have been carried on at Adelanto, situated six miles west of Victorville. The plants grown seem to do fairly well, but as no considerable large acreage was planted, it is hard to determine just what to expect from a commercial planting. A. J. Faults, who has a ranch between Daggett and Yermo, has demonstrated that cotton can be grown on the desert if given the correct care and proper soil. On Mr. Faults' ten-acre plot he has about two acres of Durango and some long staple Pima. The Pima is showing up so well, he says, that it will pick about two bales to the acre. This soil is of a virgin nature, having had nothing previous on it prior to this planting. A. D. Van Dyke, an old settler of Daggett, is convinced that Pima cotton is going to be a good rotating crop for his alfalfa. He states that it requires no more water than does corn and very little more attention. One row of Pima cotton was planted at the Indian school at Banning. Although it was not planted until early in June, the bolls matured rapidly, and when the killing frost came some of them had opened.

Mebane Cotton at Porterville.

R. E. Blair, formerly with the Federal Department of Agriculture, is shown examining bolls of medium staple, improved through selection over a period of three years.

J. R. Johnson, who on May 20 last planted seventeen acres at Euclid avenue and Dessau street, a mile south of Ontario, to Durango, Pima and Mebane cotton, declares himself so well pleased with the result of his experiment to date that he will plant a larger acreage next year. Mr. Johnson believes that his planting date was considerably too late to proeure the best results. He has twice irrigated his field, but gives it as his belief that but one watering would have been better.

J. W. Evans, who has had much experience with cotton raising in Texas, is experimenting extensively in the ranching section to the south of Ontario. From fifty acres of Durango cotton, which he has raised without any irrigation whatever, Mr. Evans expects to average better than a quarter of a bale to the acre. This crop was planted April 20, but Mr. Evans believes better results would have been obtained had the planting been done earlier in the month, or even late in March. From three acres of short staple cotton, which he has given four light irrigations, Mr. Evans expects to take better than a half-bale to the acre.

BEET GROWERS UNITE TO GET NEW CONTRACT.

SANTA ANA.—Beet growers of Orange and Los Angeles counties are in open revolt against the sliding-scale contract with the refiners now in effect. At a recent meeting held in Santa Ana 165 growers of the two counties, controlling nearly 50 per cent of the acreage set to beets, pledged themselves not to sign contracts offered by the factories for the coming season until a committee appointed at the meeting had reported on the proposed new beet growers' association. The committee was given three weeks to make its report.

The session of the beet men was notable in that discussion was confined to organization and marketing problems, and no "mud" was slung at the factories. D. Goodwin of Artesia, temporary chairman, first told of the purpose of the gathering, and J. A. Knapp of Garden Grove was selected temporary secretary. Mr. Goodwin struck the keynote of the meeting in his opening speech, when he said:

"Because of the experiences of the past two weeks, following payments for beets delivered, the growers feel the need of organization. They want to deal with the factories as a unit, instead of as individuals. I do not want to hear any 'mud slinging' here today. The factories are conducted by business men on a business basis. The growers should do the same, and should also act unitedly. If you or I go to them individually, they might tell us that they do not need our acreage. If we go to them as an organization, we will get more consideration. We should try to form an organization with sufficient funds back of it to maintain the membership."

C. L. McComber discussed organization; T. L. McFadden, attorney, of Placentia, dwelt upon the legal aspects of the organization, and suggested that the Orange County Produce Association, already formed, might enlarge its scope to take in the growers. H. E. Wahlberg, farm adviser, urged organization, and promised the help of the farm bureau. A. L. Darby, banker, of Compton, said that banks everywhere would look with favor upon such a movement. Others who expressed themselves as favorable to the proposed organization were Homer Clemens, Artesia; H. T. O'Connor, Los Alamitos; R. L. Draper, Smeltzer; Sam Giesler, Huntington Beach; R. B. Marshbanks, Artesia; Earl Gardner, Smeltzer, and Dean Johnson, Westminster.

COTTON CULTURE.

Edward M. Fowler Company, Southwest Cotton Company, California Products Company, Imperial Development Company and W. B. Camp, cotton expert in the employ of the United States Department of Agriculture, stationed at Bakersfield.

When this project was mentioned to farmers in the Antelope Valley there were many requests for seed and information on the growing of the crop. A circular was therefore prepared by the farm advisors for the help of those who were trying out cotton. The seed was distributed, but unfortunately, due to an unfavorable spring, the weather remaining cool quite late, and also due to the rush of other work, only eight plots were put in. One of these was not irrigated, and did not turn out at all successfully.

The seed was planted in these various plots from April 20 to June 1. The seed planted between the 20th and the latter part of April seemed to give the best results. The Pima, or long staple, cotton, although getting a good stand and growing well, did not have time to mature before frost. Some of the plants were still in blossom on November 1, and practically none of the bolls were matured. With Mebane short staple, many bolls were fully matured, although the percentage of the bolls on each plant was not very great. Plants that were somewhat stunted by lack of water early in the season were thrown into fruiting early. This resulted in a comparatively small number of bolls, most of which, however, were about to mature. The plants which were allowed to grow more vigorously by a greater amount of water being supplied, did not start fruiting early enough to mature all of the bolls, and when frost came many of them were still green.

The results obtained with this season's trials in Los Angeles county were not altogether satisfactory, although there was a sufficient degree of success obtained to warrant further trials in the future. This past season was an unfavorable one in the Antelope Valley, from the fact that frosts hung on late in the spring and came early in the fall, making a shorter season than the average one in the valley. The people who tried cotton were also inexperienced in the growing of that crop, and much was learned this year which will be of advantage another year. Antelope Valley growers experimenting with cotton included Mrs. Lydia G. Weld, Del Sur; C. H. Brooks, Roosevelt; J. W. Mays, Sierra Bonita; Mrs. Mary L. Barr, Rosamond; Fred Hamilton, Willow Springs.

In the San Fernando Valley the most pretentious planting was made by J. B. Myers of Chatsworth. H. C. McDaniel of that place had planned to give Pima cotton a thorough trial and had obtained, through Edward M. Fowler, sufficient seed for thirty acres. Due to delayed arrival of a new tractor, however, he failed to get his seed bed in shape for a sufficiently early planting and Mr. Myers undertook the planting of a four-acre piece with some of Mr. McDaniel's seed. This piece had been prepared early and the moisture was deep. The planting was made April 1 and several hot days following brought forth an excellent stand. The cotton made a thrifty and healthy growth and was pronounced by experts to be of very good quality. The north side of San Fernando Valley does not have the hot nights found in some sections where cotton has done well, but has a long growing season and is not much hit by frost. The lower bolls of Mr. Myers's cotton were opening by November 1 and were showing around 125 bolls to the stalk.

A small plot of Pima planted much later by J. B. Culbertson on the Cascade Ranch, northwest of San Fernando, also developed a thrifty stand, as did also a row of the same variety grown on the Denure Ranch at Zelzah. J. D. Radcliff grew several rows of Durango near Burbank, the growth being partially stopped by frost occurring in October. Other San Fernando Valley growers who tried out little plantings of cotton were C. R. Sneed, Mission Acres, and Mr. Reynolds of San Fernando.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

Several districts in Riverside county gave the best results of any of the Southern California districts outside the great valleys. Cotton was profitably matured in the Perris Valley, in the Armada-Moreno section, and near Corona. At this year's Riverside fair almost every agricultural district showed stalks of cotton with many matured bolls. There was renewed interest in cotton culture in the Coachella Valley, a proven cotton district, and 2000 acres of Durango, and 400 acres of Pima cotton were successfully planted there. A gin at Thermal is now turning out the season's crop. The average yield is reported to be at least three-fourths of a bale to the acre of Durango, and slightly less of long staple. In the Palo Verde section of Riverside county 23,000 acres were planted. Spring winds were severe, and cut down the yield, which may be 16,000 bales. In that valley 400 acres of Pima were planted, but owing to the growth of the plants, which were planted late, being stopped by frost, an average crop was not secured.

Cotton in Perris Valley seems now past the experimental stage, the crop which has just been produced demonstrating that an important new cotton section for the growth of this staple has been developed there. For a number of years, previous to 1919, small experimental plots of cotton had been planted in the valley by J. E. Lowery, Jonathan Nance, Arzina Reynolds and other experienced cotton growers from Texas and other Southern States. Almost without exception, these small plantings did well. In 1919 A. M. Ayers planted two acres, not getting the seed into the ground until late in June. This cotton was given almost no care, yet it produced at the rate of nearly a half bale to the acre.

Early in 1920, under the leadership of the Perris Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau, a general interest in cotton culture was aroused, and about 1400 acres were planted in the Perris and Nuevo sections. The variety chosen was Durango. The spring was late, and the warm weather came later than usual. Due to the fact that the majority of the growers had never

PEANUT HAY AND SILAGE FOR CATTLE.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Over at the 18,000-acre Fontana Ranch they are performing a new stunt. They are trying out peanut hay and silage on range cattle to fatten them for market. There are 300 of the cattle and they belong to C. J. and K. K. Langford, who recently brought them in from the range. The Langfords expect to feed them for ninety days to fit them for the Los Angeles market. They are largely grade Herefords and Durhams, mostly steers, and are in the well-built and arranged cattle pens at Fontana.

C. C. Langford, who is in active charge of the cattle, declares that the past summer season on the range was most satisfactory. These particular cattle have been pastured in the Mojave Valley. Mr. Langford and some helpers had a busy time of it dehorning the cows.

The Langfords are not in the least in doubt as to the fattening qualities of the peanut hay. "I feed it to all the ranch stock," said one of Mr. Langford's helpers, who is a part of the Fontána Ranch force. "It makes the horses very slick and fat."

In the office of the Fontana Farms Company they say they believe there is a wonderful work awaiting farmers in San Bernardino county in this very line of feeding the range cattle and fattening them for market. They point out the dependence of agriculture upon soil fertilization, and the necessity of having live stock for this purpose. Here, they say, is an opportunity to market farm products right on the farm and get a good price for them, since the usual plan is for the owner of the cattle to pay so much per day per head for the cattle, and the pay is sure when the cattle are ready for market. With Los Angeles getting to be such an important live-stock market, they argue, and the vast ranges of California and Arizona and Nevada shipping stock in there, what more natural than that this valley should be ready to form a half-way station and fatten the stock off feed grown in the valley and receive the enormous benefit from the vast amount of barnyard fertilizer that would make the permanent agricultural prosperity of the valley assured?

AGENCY BUYS BULL.

TULARE.—Holberk Pontiac Finale, young Holstein bull prize winner at the Tulare Live Stock Show of 1920, has been sold to the United States Indian Agency at Greenville, Cal., according to announcement made by T. J. Gist & Sons, the former owners. C. A. Peairs, county dairy inspector, made the selection for the agency. This bull was sired by Creamcup Pontiac Burke, III, and his dam had a seven-day record of 21.88 pounds of butter from 549.6 pounds of milk.

DURATION OF OESTRUM INTERESTS BREEDERS.

For the persons who are not familiar with the time elapsing from one oestrual period to the other in the various domestic animals, the following extracts from extensive observations are given by the California Department of Agriculture, with the hope that they will be of some aid to the breeders.

When a mare is not pregnant, each period of oestrum occurs every three or four weeks, but more often in three weeks.

Sometimes there is a period of three to four months before the mare comes in heat while in other cases the oestrual period may last for several weeks. After parturition the mare may come in heat in two or three days, however, most frequently this occurs on the eighth or ninth day and occasionally on the tenth or eleventh day. The duration of oestrum lasts on an average for nine days. The period in suckling mares usually is considerably shorter.

The periods of oestrum in a nonpregnant normal cow occur about every three weeks. Certain variations of this time may occur but as a rule the time intervening between each period is less than four weeks. The duration of each period lasts from one to one and a half days. Sometimes it is not longer than one-half day to eight hours. After calving, the oestrual period is observed in from three to seven weeks.

In sheep and goats the oestrual periods are repeated in about three weeks (sometimes two weeks) and each period lasts from twenty-four to thirty-six hours. The first heat occurs six to eight weeks after parturition.

In the sow heat returns on an average about every three weeks. Some authorities state the return of each period is considerably less. During the time the sow is suckling her offspring there is no oestrual period and as a rule the presence of the male does not induce a sexual stimulus until seven or eight weeks after parturition. The oestrual period lasts twenty-four to forty-eight hours in case of copulation, otherwise it may last five or six days.

The rabbit may become pregnant every month and is ready to receive the male immediately after parturition. When copulation does not take place the period of heat returns about every thirty-five days.

HORSE FLESH GOING UP.

At the national Belgian breeders' show, at Waterloo, Iowa, optimism regarding the future of the draft horse was shown by reports, and by the high prices prevailing for good horses. One breeder reported the sale of 114 pure-breds to farmers. The average for this lot was $835 each, all ages being represented, from suckling colts to mature stallions.

Smilo grass is both cold and drought resistent, and is a strong perennial.

Let's get away from raising calves on milk

It would be foolish to deny that good calves can be raised on milk They can. But in view of the fact that there is another method of raising them which is equally effective, and at the same time, far less expensive, the natural query is "Why feed milk to your calves"?

Blatchford's Calf Meal

Thousands of farmers on thousands of farms have entirely discontinued the practice of raising their calves on milk because they have found they can grow them as rapidly and develop them every bit as well on Blatchford's Calf Meal. Yet Blatchford's, which is a milk-substitute, can be used at less than half the cost of using milk.

You, Mr. Farmer are a business man. In the conduct of your business, economy of operation looms up with every bit as much importance as it does in any other industry. Therefore, the merits of Blatchford's Calf Meal should interest you. Providing as it does, the elements the calf requires for quick growth, thrift and health—and providing them in proper form—the opportunity its use presents to save milk and to save money, should engage your attention.

BULK HANDLING OF GRAIN IS INCREASING IN GOLDEN STATE.

BY ARTHUR L. DAHL.

CALIFORNIA is one of the few States that has clung to the system of handling grain in sacks, and the piles of sacked grain seen in our harvest season are as interesting to the Middle West farmer who visits us as are the numerous grain elevators that dot the landscape in the central grain belt, to a far westerner.

Unquestionably the matter of climate has a lot to do with our harvesting habits, for nowhere else than in California can the grain be sacked and piled in the open and left for many days without fear of damage by the elements. This favorable condition does not blind an increasing number of California grain growers to the advantages to be derived from bulk storage.

The great milling companies of the State have adopted the bulk system of handling grain, and even though it is received at the warehouse in sacks, the subsequent handling is in bulk. The railroads make provision for bulk shipments of grain, since proper cars are provided for the shipment of grain in bulk and tariff regulations are framed to meet these shipments.

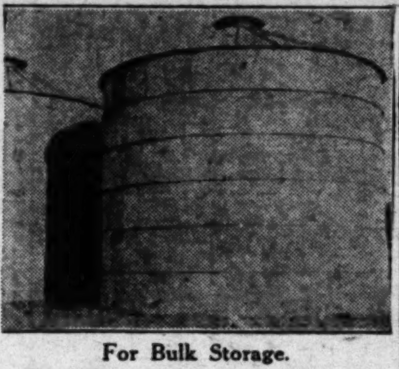
Manufacturers of combined harvesters have developed their machines to permit of the handling of bulk grain from the time it is cut until loaded on the wagons for hauling to the elevator, and the only thing neceshsary for the farmer to do is to provide the necessary storage facilities on the ranch to take care of the grain until it is sold and delivered to the purchaser.

SACKS ARE EXPENSIVE.

Sacks are expensive from several angles. Of late years the scarcity and high price of jute have made the cost of grain sacks unusually high, yet farmers who had no storage facilities for loose grain have had to buy them and pay the price. A hole in one of the bags means a constant loss in handling. Sacked grain when stored in the open, or even under incomplete shelter, is subject to many kinds of deterioration. Moisture is apt to be communicated to the contents in one way or another, and rats and mice inflict serious damage to sacks in very short order.

A practical solution of the storage problem is the maintenance of a metal storage bin on the grain farm. With such a place to keep grain stored, the producer can sell when and where he pleases. Farm wagons can be easily converted to carry bulk grain, and the purchase and handling of sacks can be avoided.

Metal grain bins are made in sizes to meet the needs of the most modest ranch, or by combining a number of units, the capacity of the largest grain field can be met. A metal bin six feet high, and twelve feet seven inches in diameter will store 600 bushels of grain, and by increasing the height and diameter the capacity is increased, so that one eighteen feet high and twenty-two feet in diameter will store about 60000 bushels of grain.



For Bulk Storage.
Metal grain bins on a California ranch.

UNIT SYSTEMS.

In some communities where farmers form co-operative elevator associations for the handling of their grain, metal bins are used to form units that can be expanded indefinitely to meet the increasing needs of the members. In one case a system has been worked out whereby a total storage capacity of 72,000 bushels can be obtained at one plant by the use of twelve bins, each of 6000 bushels capacity, and arranged in two parallel rows, with each bin mounted on a conical reinforced concrete base. Each of the bins is connected with a conveyor system for handling the bulk grain, and an operator stationed in the tower over the workhouse can regulate the delivery of the grain to any particular bin. Chutes lead from these bins to the workhouse, so that grain cars can be loaded directly from the workhouse, just as is done in the large commercial elevators. The grain hauled to the plant by farmers is delivered into a receiving pit below the level of the floor, from which it is conveyed to the bins by mechanical elevators.

A metal grain bin is excellent for storing seed corn or other seeds grown on the farm, and kept over from one season to another. The absence of moisture, freedom from rats, mice and birds will permit of the keeping of seeds so that their full germinating powers are not impaired. Where corn is kept for feeding to work animals, it has been the experience of farmers that the animals will eat more of the corn kept in metal bins than that kept in wooden corn cribs. Where the latter are used, it is practically impossible to keep rodents out, and their mere running back and forth through the corn imparts an odor and taste to the corn that is not liked by animals.

HEAVY COTTON YIELD IN THE PALO VERDE.

BLYTHE.—After several years of successful progress, the Palo Verde Valley may rightfully take its place among the California districts that have made good in agriculture. It is not so long since that section was almost unknown save to river trappers, watching their lines along the Colorado during the winter months, prospectors traveling in from the desert mountain ranges for supplies and a few homesteaders struggling to break through the heavy growth of mesquite that dotted the valley in close-grown patches.

The town of Blythe five years ago comprised a country store, postoffice and a few adobe houses. The stage came weekly from Blythe Junction on the railroad far across the desert. Then in 1916, in the face of the financial stringency brought about by the war, the California Southern Railroad was built to connect Blythe with the junction on the Sante Fe. Four years ago the first train pulled across the desert to Blythe and three years ago the farmers of the valley bonded their farms for $1,250,000 to construct a levee extending from the northern tip of the valley to the southern end where the bluffs join the river.

Inside the levee 23,000 acres of cotton are being picked this year. Seven cotton gins, three owned by the Cotton Growers' Association of the valley, are ginning. Estimates compiled by cotton authorities place the yield of the valley in cotton at approximately 22,000 bales. From 500 acres of cotton in 1915 to 23,000 in 1920 is the record of the Palo Verde, in addition to which 4000 acres of alfalfa are yielding their eight cuttings annually.

Short-staple and Durango cotton are the principal varieties grown in the valley, although there is about 500 acres of Pima this year. The Durango from the valley, according to authentic reports during a period of three years, has brought the highest premium paid on the cotton markets at Galveston. Short staple from the valley brings a regular premium over the prevailing market, according to high authority.

With the completion of the California Southern ten miles south of Blythe to the center of the valley, this year will witness the cultivation of over 5000 acres of new land in the section served by the new town of Ripley. Ripley was laid out early in 1920 as the terminal of the valley's railroad, terminal shops are under construction, two cotton gins are operating, a modern hotel will open in December. Over fifty miles of new ditches are under construction by the farmers' water company, which will serve the new tracts under preparation for crops in 1921. Across the Colorado River from Ripley, the Cibola Valley, recently purchased by the Southwest Cotton Company, is undergoing a change from a desert valley to a vast field of Pima long-staple cotton. Transportation will be carried on from the railroad through Ripley and a ferry to the Cibola.

In 1919 over $4,000,000 worth of cotton was shipped from the Palo Verde Valley to the cotton markets of the United States and England; in 1920, with a lower market and increased production, nearly the same amount will be realized.

HANDLING OF GREAT ORANGE CROP BEGUN.

REDLANDS.—The handling of the 1920-1921 crop of oranges in the south is well under way, according to C. P. Earley, manager for the Mutual Orange Distributors, with headquarters here. Mr. Earley says that the M. O. D., which ships about 98 per cent of the crop from the Salt River Valley of Arizona, has been rolling Arizona oranges East for some time. The first cars sold, being of navels, were for about $8 a box and it is believed that the whole crop, which will total 600 cars or more, will bring that price for an average. The Valencias which the company is shipping now are bringing a better price. The Mutual handles a large percentage of the Tulare and Porterville fruit, and A. M. Pratt, sales manager, has a big job ahead of him in that territory. The Arizona oranges come first. They are practically all out of the way when the Tulare district shipments begin.

There is to be a big crop in the north this year, but Mr. Pratt anticipates that the demand for California oranges will be keen enough to take care of heavy shipments so that practically all the northern navels can be out of the way when the southern crop begins to move toward the East. The local people will stay in the Tulare district altogether for about six weeks as the bulk of the crop is moved out in that time. Then they will return to the main offices in Redlands to begin the work of handling the Southern California navel crop shipped through the company. Picking of navels in some groves of the south has begun, but it will be some weeks before there is any movement of fruit. It is believed that California navels will command a good price at that time. There is every indication that the crop is to be one of the largest ever handled

LIVESTOCK BULLETIN.

BY R. T. LYANS.

Two shows of great interest to the breeder of pure-bred livestock have just come to a close. They were the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City, and the Pacific International Livestock Exposition at Portland. Several prominent Southern California breeders of Holstein cattle entered some of their choicest stock in one or both of these shows, and their winnings will be announced in the near future. The climax of all big shows, however, will take place during the week beginning November 27 and ending on December 4, when the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago will hold the boards. This is the show of shows, and a win there means much for the breeder. But the greatest feature of this show is the educational feature, for it is there that the standards are set for future breeding operations. Breeders from all parts of the world turn their attention to this event to get inspiration for further constructive breeding methods. Here is to be seen the finished product of breeding in the highest state of perfection. Were it not for this show, it would be impossible under present conditions to compare the different sections of our country from a pure-bred stock standpoint. Breeders generally are fully aware of this fact, and always manifest their approval by sending in their finest stock, and otherwise lending their hearty support.

We are often confronted with the question as to what breed of hogs or cattle or poultry to buy to make the most money. If this question could be answered with absolute and positive authority, it would be only a question of a short time when we would have only one breed of cattle, one of hogs and one of poultry. There is no best breed. With certain limitations, it might be said that such and such a breed is better in certain sections, under certain circumstances and environment, but a broad and sweeping statement which describes any breed as a best breed should be quickly cast aside or set down as coming from one who waxes over-enthusiastic at times. If a breeder is raising a certain breed of cattle and is making a good profit, and is perfectly satisfied with the particular breed he has chosen, then it can be said that that breed of cattle is the best breed for that man to raise. Another breeder has different ideas and he proceeds to develop those ideas by securing an entirely different breed and he, too, makes a profit and is satisfied with the breed chosen. Most assuredly that is the best breed for that man to raise. After all, it is not so much the breed as it is the man with the ideas who is trying to develop the breed to a higher state of perfection that really counts.

Miss Segis Pontiac Walker, the fine Holstein heifer which was purchased by Earl Graham of Compton at the Stalder dispersal sale on October 20 for $1700, has recently dropped a heifer calf for her new owner. We understand Mr. Graham's purchase is making a fine record as a junior 2-year-old. This wonderfully bred cow traces back to two noted sires, King of the Pontiacs, and Prince Bonnie Walker.

Time was when a stockman scoffed at the theorists as "tenderfeet" and theories as "tenderfoot ideas." Times have changed. Scratch your cow man of today (anywhere in California, at least,) and you will find a thinker; a man willing, even eager, to discuss theory or practice in the beef cattle industry. At the present moment one topic overshadows all others. It is the question of marketing. The war has left California and the other Western States with a serious problem—large stocks of cattle and no export market. Cattle brought to maturity through a period of high prices are now coming to market in a period of stagnation. This condition brought about the calling of the Salt Lake conference by the California Cattlemen's Association. This conference on December 6, 7 and 8 will endeavor to find an answer to the big question. The program of the State association for its annual convention on December 11 at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, has been shaped toward the same end. It will have the benefit of whatever is accomplished at Salt Lake City. Later the Salt Lake program will be submitted to the convention of the American National Livestock Association at El Paso for action by that body.

It has become a well-established fact that, when live stock is eliminated from the farm, the owner of that farm generally soon finds out that he is on the wrong track. Arizona farmers who sold out all their live stock and went into the raising of cotton exclusively had visions of great wealth in "dollar cotton," but it seems now that their hopes have been blasted, as cotton has become something of a drug on the market. If they had kept their live stock and planted only a portion of their holdings in cotton, they would now have something to fall back on, besides having maintained the fertility of their soil. If farmers could only be made to realize the importance of live stock raising, in connection with their general farming operations, it would not be long before such conditions as this would be eliminated. After all is said and done, it must be admitted that live stock is the real backbone of our agricultural wealth, and the sooner we come to this general conclusion, the better off will the country be.

The breeder of pure-bred hogs should not lose sight of the fact that the ultimate end of the offspring of even prize-winning sires and dams, or at least a large majority of these offspring, will go to the market for pork. With this end in view, the early maturing, economically produced and finished hog is the standard which should be used in swine-producing plants.

IMPERIAL COTTON SITUATION PUZZLING.

EL CENTRO—The cotton situation in Imperial Valley this year is uncertain. One of the largest acreages in the history of the valley was planted. Approximately 150,000 acres of which perhaps half is on this side of the international line, was seeded. This acreage was planted early, and bad weather compelled a large replanting. There was very little volunteer cotton this year.

The quality of this year's crop has been excellent, and the Imperial Valley Growers' Association arranged for the importation of 2000 Mexican cotton pickers to handle the picking. These pickers are now in the valley harvesting the crop.

Imperial Valley this year has tried, on a large scale, the growing of Pima Egyptian cotton. In the valley there have been 38,000 acres of Pima cotton planted. The larger portion of this acreage has been grown under contract with three concerns, all rubber companies manufacturing tires. Two of these entered the field on a major scale, the Goodyear Tire Company through its subsidiary, the Southwest Cotton Company, contracting for more than 15,000 acres, and the Fisk Rubber Company contracted for between 8000 and 10,000 acres. These contracts were all based on a guarantee of a minimum of 60 cents a pound for first grade Pima.

This cotton, as a whole, has not yielded as high as the average in the Nile Valley, but, considering that it is the first year that it has been grown in Imperial on an extensive scale, the results have been excellent. The growers have learned a lot through experience, and the yield in coming years should show a gratifying increase over that of this year.

The yield of short staple has been fully up to former Imperial Valley years, and valley yields are in excess of the average for the southern cotton States.

The thing which has depressed the cotton-growing industry has been the break in cotton prices. Imperial Valley ranchers this year grew their cotton from high-priced seed, with high-priced utensils and high-priced labor. Conservative growers in the valley estimate that it costs 28 cents per pound to raise cotton under present conditions. Every cent that cotton drops costs the Imperial Valley growers nearly half a million dollars.

During the fall, the banks have come to the aid of the growers, and large numbers of growers are now holding their cotton in the expectation that the market will take an upward trend.

This acute cotton situation has had the effect of turning some of the cotton growers to the old Imperial Valley standby, alfalfa, and Horticultural Commissioner F. W. Waite reports that there is a great increase in the alfalfa acreage being planted.

The temporary demoralization of the cotton market is expected in the long run to have a beneficial effect on cotton growing in the Southwest. Lower prices for cotton are expected to force cotton growers into more intensive growing, thus producing a larger yield. There will be a decided reaction from present methods.

There is no question of the future of cotton in the Imperial Valley. Cotton will be grown there continually, and eventually all varieties will give way to Pima cotton, it is believed, because of the higher price which it brings. A temporary setback cannot in the long run dim the cotton future which this agricultural hothouse of America possesses.

ASSOCIATION TO HIRE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY.

Members of the Tractor and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California, at their last meeting, decided to employ an executive secretary who shall devote his entire time to the job of attending to the various affairs of the association. H. W. Nerney of the W. L. Hughson Company, who recently represented the association at the annual convention of the National Implement and Vehicle Association at Atlantic City, was present at the meeting and gave an interesting account of that event.

Thomas F. Osborne of B. Hayman Company is now in Chicago, a representative of the local association at the business meeting of the tractor and thresher division of the National Implement and Vehicle Association asking that the Pacific Coast associations have more of a voice in the government of affairs affecting dealers of California, Washington and Oregon. The officers of the N.I.V.A. are inclined to grant the petition of the Pacific Coast men as regards tractor shows and demonstrations, and have invited the associations to name a vice-president of the N.I.V.A. for the Pacific Coast. W. H. Gardner of San Francisco is the man agreed upon for this office by the Pacific Coast dealers.

The End of a Long Trip to Market.

W. W. Washburn, Tulare county farmer, and load of Mebane cotton he hauled from Alpaugh over the Ridge Route to Los Angeles, seeking prices to justify his outlay of time, labor and money made in growing the crop.

COTTON IS TRUCKED OVER RIDGE ROUTE.

W. W. Washburn, a farmer of the Alpaugh district, in Tulare county, probably holds the record for a long-distance haul of cotton to market. The San Joaquin Valley grower cranked up his small truck just before noon one day late in October and started with 2500 pounds of the fleecy product on a long trip to Los Angeles. He was accompanied by his daughter, Edna, who attends school in the southern city. He drove through Tejon Pass and over the Ridge Route, entering the San Fernando Valley the next afternoon, having camped in the open during the night. He reached Los Angeles in the evening and sold his cargo before dark.

Mr. Washburn was one of the many San Joaquin farmers who became interesed in cotton this year. He made an extensive planting, putting out ninety acres of his 500-acre ranch to the crop. For the most part he planted Durango, although he put in several acres of Mebane. It was a load of the latter that he brought to Los Angeles.

He drove to the Pacific Coast metropolis with the cotton, he said, to get first-hand information on prices and prospects for marketing this side of the Tehachepi. He was offered $15 for seed at Bakersfield, he declared, as compared with the price of $29 prevailing in Los Angeles at the time he reached his destination. Ginners in his own home district were asking 60 cents a hundred pounds for ginning, he reported, as against 35 cents asked in Los Angeles. Sixteen to 18 cents was being offered for short staple cotton in Los Angeles at that date, more, he reported, than he could hope to get in his own immediate market zone. Furthermore, the Alpaugh man declared, truckers in his district were offering to bring cotton to Los Angeles $2.50 a ton cheaper than the rate quoted by the railroads.

COTTON CULTURE.

grown cotton before, there was a considerable amount of pessimism about the result of the venture, but that distrust has now disappeared, as the results of the picking are becoming known.

On October 13 occurred the first frost. This frost was just severe enough to stop further growth of the plants, while at the same time it hastened the opening of the bolls. Usually the first frost does not appear in Perris Valley much if any before November, but it has apparently been demonstrated that even a frost as early as this year's need not worry the planter.

The fields of cotton planted this year in the Perris Valley vary from one to as high as 167 acres. Adelbert Danner of Nuevo planted three acres. His return may be one and a quarter bales per acre, it is reported. His neighbor, Norman Walker, put in five acres, from which he is said to have obtained a bale and an eighth per acre.

North of Perris, Sam Johnson put in ten acres, which may go better than a bale to the acre. A. E. Kepner & Sons have fifteen acres, which, they expect to run better than a bale to the acre, in the parts in which the stand is good. The Sierra Vista Ranch, owned by Peter B. Kyne and O. H. Cash, has thirty acres which, it is reported, will go a bale to the acre, beside ten acres, on sandy soil, on which the yield will be lighter. J. C. Phillips has forty acres, the larger part of which will show a good crop.

East of Perris, toward Coyote Pass, on old barley land, owned by Harford and Greenleaf, has been grown thirty acres of excellent cotton. Here, in spite of difficulties incident to starting a new pumping plant, the yield will run fully three-quarters of a bale to the acre, it is believed. She largest planting in the valley is that of the Midvale Farms Corporation, which has 167 acres in several different fields. Averaging their best fields with their worst, the yield for the entire planting will run better than three-quarters of a bale per acre, the growers state.

Taking the 1400 acres in the valley as a whole, and counting the failures as well as the successes, the average yield per acre this year will probably be one-half bale to the acre, reports indicate. Next year, with the increased experience of the various farmers, a yield far above the average for California is looked for by enthusiastic Perris people.

The cotton is being ginned and handled by the new gin of the Perris Valley Co-operative Cotton Growers' Association, at Perris. The association also has charge of picking excepting cases where the work is being done by the growers' own families.

A long period of warm nights in July and August matured a large proportion of bolls on ten acres of Durango cotton planted in the Corona section by Mann Brothers of La Sierra Heights. Four acres of Pima planted by the same growers about May 1 did not have time to fully mature. The Manns estimate they will have close to 1500 pounds of seed cotton to the acre. Ray Haddock of Orchard Heights planted Mebane, Durango and Pima on May 28. The Mebane and Durango made good headway, but would have done better if they had been planted earlier. Glen B. Watkins of Corona, with a small plot of the same three varieties, did not irrigate his cotton, but still believes he will have 1200 pounds of seed cotton to the acre. A well-cared for plt put of by John Grant, set a good crop, especially of Durango. Other Corona growers planting small cotton test plots included Phillips & Koons, and G. W. Williams. W. T. Eldridge of Wineville had a plot of Durango and Pima. J. B. Maxwell, Moreno, planted Pima and Durango, and W. L. Helwig of San Jacinto, the same varieties.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY.

Plantings at Fontana, Redlands, Ontario and Patton, and in the Mojave Desert, in Apple Valley, at Daggett and Adelanto comprise the experiments in San Bernardino county. Some of these were carried out by the farmers under the direction of the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau and others by individuals working alone.

The Fairbanks ranch, four miles west of Redlands, had approximately one-fourth of an acre planted to Pima, which has made an excellent growth. The plants are seven to eight feet high and with as many as 250 bolls per plant. This was planted May 25, and while it could have been put out earlier by a month, the plants are opening well. Four rows were pinched back after getting about four feet high, and it is interesting to note the large amount of wood growth as the result. While the crop has not produced the most favorable result possible, Mr. Harvey, the manager, is by no means discouraged, and next year may see some considerable acreage planted in his district.

It is interesting to compare the results obtained by the State Hospital plot, located three miles east of San Bernardino, where Mebane was grown, with that of the Pima on the Fairbanks ranch. Having the same care and being under practically the same weather conditions, this short staple variety, planted the same time, has been very much of a success. Three pickings have been made and with future pickings will run about one bale to the acre, it is expected. On this plot the soil carries some

FINE SEEDBED BEFORE HEAVIER RAINS MEANS MOISTURE SAVING.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

THERE is no question in the minds of thinking farmers but that a thoroughly prepared seedbed for row crops should be made before the coming of the heavy rains in order to conserve every drop of moisture in these days of moisture deficiency in the soil. But unless the farmer is equipped with mechanical power he is often unable to get his fields prepared before the "soakers" come. There is greater need for tractor power at this time for the row crop farmer than at any time of the year. The tractor-made seedbed is always earliest and best.

Most farmers understimate the existing moisture deficiency. It is a fact that in the soil below the first foot there is less than 60 per cent of the normal moisture in many fields, and only in sections favored by heavy rains last season is the moisture content of soils near normal. If there ever was a time when farmers were called upon to pray for rain it is now. But they should defer their supplications until they get in their seedbed, to check evaporation of the moisture as it falls.

It is a fact that summer work generally piles up onto fall work, so that there is increased demand for power at this time on farms where diversified farming is practiced. The farmer who has an orchard or an alfalfa field in addition to his grain, beet or bean crops has use for his teams in the orchard, dragging out brush and plowing, and in the alfalfa field, getting in the last cutting of hay. Thus we cannot well spare the horses for early plowing and pulverizing. Here is where the reserve power of the tractor is a valuable asset. While the horses are busy elsewhere, the tractor quickly prepares the seedbed for the row crops.

Rainfall is irregular and generally unexpected during the California winter. The early winter rains may be the heaviest of the season, or heavy precipitation may be deferred until March. It is better to be prepared and have the seedbed ready for the moisture. Plowed ground provides a deep container for the rain. If the farmer allows the rain to run off his unplowed ground, he is losing the most valuable thing he has in his soil. He will have a late crop, or will be unable to put in as much ground as he intended, because he defers this plowing. He suffers inconvenience and loss.

TRACTOR POINTS WAY.

It is only since the tractor has been perfected that farmers have fully appreciated this importance of early plowing. Now row crop farmers have learned that early preparation of the seedbed means money to them.

Within the last year observation and experiment have shown throughout the country that faster plowing speeds means a better seedbed. Hence tractors that were rated to plow two and one-fourth miles per hour in 1919, now are geared to do efficient plowing at three and one-fourth miles per hour. Thus the number of acres plowed in a day by the tractor has been moved up the column and a better seedbed the result of pulverization of the furrow-slice by the speed attained by the tractor is secured.

The number of acres plowed per day by one plow drawn by a tractor is thus much greater than the work done by the same plow drawn by horses. When the tractor draws two, three or four plows, the work done by horses is thus multiplied by the number of plows, when getting at the number of acres plowed by machines. One fourteen-inch plow drawn by a tractor should cover three and one-half acres in an ordinary working day of ten hours, where the average working speed is two and one-fourth miles per hour. Where the maximum plowing speed is used, as advocated this year by mechanical engineers, the number of acres plowed per ten hours with a fourteen-inch plow is about five acres. Then a two-plow machine should plow between seven and ten acres per day, and a ten-plow gang outfit from thirty-five to forty-five acres per day. However, where cotton stalks, bean straw and trash clog the gang plows, each plow drawn by the tractor will cover much less ground than that drawn by a smaller outfit, since the delays will naturally be in proportion to the number of plows pulled. A delay on account of one plow on a two-plow outfit stops only one other plow, while on a ten-plow rig, for example, it stops nine other plows. However, one accomplishes much more work with the gang outfits, even under such conditions.

DON'T OVERLOAD.

According to figures furnished by tractor owners in Central California, the area covered per working day of nine hours in plowing with tractors most commonly used is six acres for the two-plow outfit, eight acres for the three-plow equipment and nine and three-fourths acres for tractors drawing four plows. In this connection it should be mentioned that many tractor owners require their machines to pull one more plow than they are rated to pull, and as a result the outfit does not cover as much ground as would be covered by a machine built to handle a certain number of plows. Three plows behind a two-plow tractor will cover only a little more ground, as a rule, than will the two plows, because the tractor usually will travel a little slower, partly because the motor is overloaded and does not maintain its proper speed, and partly because the drive wheels will slip more than usual with a load heavier than the machine was designed to pull. As a consequence delays on account of small holes or slight grades will be more common, as will also mechanical difficulties.

If the barley or alfalfa planter can get in seven acres per day of seedbed with a tractor, instead of two or three acres with a horse team, he is not only getting his work done quicker · thus saving valuable time for other work, but is going to conserve moisture that cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents, and, in the case of alfalfa planting, will get in his seed while the sun is still in summer solstice, and will germinate his seed more rapidly. If he is going to raise beets or beans next year, and has no outfit that will plow eight acres per day, instead of two, he will be able to prepare a fine seedbed in advance of the soaking rains which may come at any time, where the slow-going horse team would be caught by the rains long before they had finished the plowing operation.

Many factors influence the draft of plows, whether the power is flesh and blood or steel and oil products. Among these are the [illegible]f plowing, the width of the plow, the character and moisture content of the soil, the obstructions encountered, the sharpness of the plowshare, the hitch and the speed. Few plows run at the same depth constantly. There is a continual variation of an inch or so. Often furrows side by side will show considerable difference in resistance, due to the natural difference of soil texture or to previous mechanical treatment of the soil. For instance, the furrow, including the wheel track of the tractor may show considerable difference in draft from that of a parallel furrow. Or more straw or other organic matter in the next furrow may make the plowing easier. Moisture has a decided influence upon draft. Farmers should realize that sharp shares have a great influence on the draft of the plow, as the velocity with which the furrow slice leaves the moldboard varies with the sharpness of the share. And high speeds are impracticable with abrupt moldboards. It has been generally suggested that with extremely high speeds special shapes would be required.

ALFALFA WEEVIL NEAR BY.

Live-stock growers, as well as alfalfa producers, are considerably exercised over the fact that the alfalfa weevil has been found in our bordering States, Nevada and Oregon. Not only does this pest inflict serious damage to growing alfalfa, but the quarantine incident to finding it in any locality often causes material losses. It develops that the inspectors who are guarding California from this and other pests are paid a maximum of $3.50 per day, which farmers declare is not sufficient to maintain the proper men on this important work.

California will soon be the largest lemon producing area in the world.

NOT many years ago, strawberries were selling for 5 cents a box on the Los Angeles market. The other day they brought 24 cents a box. The reason—strawberry growing as a back-yard pastime has become almost obsolete, and the industry has fallen into the hands of the little brown men, who are charging all the traffic will possibly bear. The remedy—plant a strawberry patch, whether it be but five by ten feet, or five acres. Let's get the strawberry-growing business back into the hands of Americans and Southern California!

This is the most opportune time of the year to plant strawberries. If the plants are set now, and well cared for until spring, the planter will be rewarded with a crop in early summer, or, if he has the early varieties, in March or April. Nurserymen are offering a great variety of berries.

For the back yard, unless the family or the guest list is a large one, a patch twelve by twenty-four feet is enough. But the industry offers great promise to the commercial gardener. The farmer who has the available ground and water, and who can count on picking help from the members of his family, will find that there is plenty of profit in the culture of an acre of strawberries. But the planter must keep in mind that berries are a soft, perishable product, and must be handled gently and quickly on their way to market; they are shallow rooted, and easily injured by drought. But if it is properly managed, the small fruit garden can be made to yield large profits, often as soon as one year after planting. It is a crop which requires the personal attention of the planter, whether he be a back-yard gardener or a commercial grower.

Strawberry plants are bought by the hundred at the seed stores and plant nurseries, and the roots should be kept moist until they are in the ground. They may be planted at any time between November 15 and January 15, or even later, but best results are secured by planting them at this time, or in December. Plant the berries in a warm exposure if possible, as fruits which are set in this location usually ripen much earlier than those which are partially shaded during the day.

The strawberry seldom sends its roots to a depth greater than fourteen inches. The roots, on the contrary, are near the surface. Hence, the available moisture in the soil must be carefully investigated before planting unless the planter has irrigation water available at all times. At no time should the plant be allowed to wilt or show signs of drought. Lack of moisture is shown immediately by weakness of the new growth from the center of the plant. In sections where irrigation cannot be given every few days, the soil moisture must be conserved by frequent shallow cultivations. The plants are small, and set close together, and horse cultivation is almost impossible.

Strawberries do best on the clay loams, but are found growing with a large degree of success on the sandy loams. The berries are, as a rule, somewhat larger when grown on the heavier types of soils, provided the plants are not put out in adobe or soil of such a heavy character that it cannot be worked readily. Let not the gardener who has a sandy loam be deterred from planting, for he has ideal soil for working and conserving the moisture.

It is necessary to supply humus in the soil, if that desirable element is lacking. Therefore, spread stable or poultry manure over your patch, and work it in thoroughly before making your ridges. Make the ridges three feet apart, and plant the berries eighteen inches apart in the row. Some people practice level planting, setting the strawberry plants in a furrow, covering them, and irrigating them from another furrow. But the plants are better cared for when set on a ridge about fourteen inches across at the top, leaving a space for irrigating and for the picker to walk in, between the plants. Do not sprinkle the strawberries. They are best grown when the plants are kept altogether dry, and the moisture reaches them from the furrow by sub-irrigation.

The planter will find, by January, when he has set strawberries the last of November or the first of December, that the plants shoot forth nodes, which take root, and form new plants. When the roots become established in the ground, they can be separated from the parent plant and allowed to grow where they are, or they can be set in another furrow, where they will continue to send out nodes. Thus one plant is multiplied many times by spring.

When the ridges, or long beds, are narrow, that is, about a foot wide, plants are set in a single row in the center of the bed, from ten to twenty inches apart, depending on the rate with which new run[illegible] allowed to take root in the row itself, and not to spread laterally, the aim being to maintain the width of the row at ten to twelve inches. Runners spreading laterally are either cut off, or are moved to the center of the row. Where the beds are wider, and the "matted row" is desired, the plants are set out in a double row, as above described, eighteen inches apart. The latter system is the one generally followed by home gardeners. The plants are then allowed to spread to the edge of the ridge, forming a mass in the center at the end of the first year.

Strawberries are set eighteen inches apart, on ridges, as shown in the picture. These are Lady Cornell berries, and show growth in Spring when planted in December.

Carolina strawberries, showing habit of bunching during the latter part of first year. Smaller plants show growth in Spring when planted in late fall.

Klondyke strawberries, probably the most popular market variety.

Strawberries require greater care in planting than most plants. Accept only young plants, with light-colored roots, as the older plants, having dark brown roots, do not take hold readily, and often these plants die despite careful irrigation and cultivation. The plants must not be allowed to dry out during the planting operation, but should be wrapped in wet burlap or kept in pails of water while the planting operation is going on. The outside whorl of leaves should be removed when the plant is set out, leaving only two of the small center leaves. The plant must be set firmly at the same depth at which it had been growing. If it is planted too high, or the soil is not sufficiently firmed about the roots, the young plants will dry out and die. If they are set too low, and the crown of the plant is covered with moist soil, the plant quickly rots.

Shallow cultivation should always be practiced with strawberries, preferably with a hand tool, for the roots are very near the surface. Cultivation should be continued throughout the season to keep the plants thrifty.

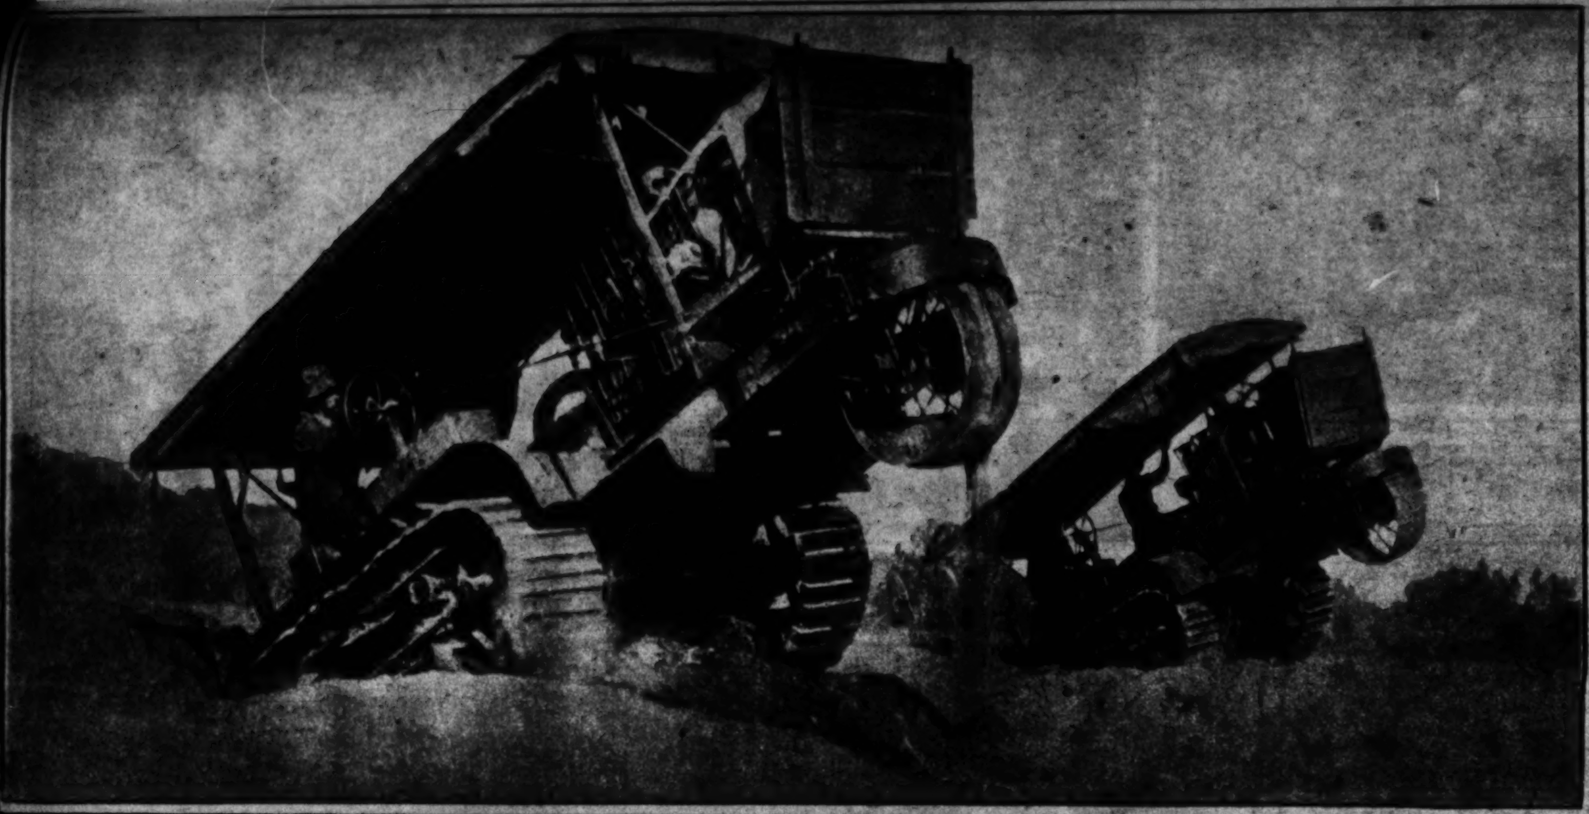
Now as to varieties: The Klondyke and the Brandywine have always vied with one another for first place in the hearts of the growers, but now come two new varieties, the Carolina and Arizona Everbearing to compete with these two old favorites. The latter strawberry has not seemed to come up to expectations during the past two seasons. Though it thrives well in Arizona and in other desert sections, it does not seem to be so well adapted to the more humid regions near the Coast. The Klondyke is a vigorous grower, a fairly good plant maker, and ships well. It is the favorite with the market gardeners near Los Angeles. The Brandywine is not so large, but seems to be more prolific, and a little earlier than the Klondyke. The Carolina, introduced into Southern California by a Los Angeles seedsman, was tried out last year for the first time commercially, and has made a hit with the growers, as it is prolific, a good shipper and a good plant maker. Other varieties that have proven to be good in this section are the Oregon, the Marshall, the Jessie, the Malinda and the Gold Dollar.

HEAVY RETURNS TO APPLE ORCHARDISTS.

YUCAIPA.—The returns to the growers of Yucaipa apples for this season will be the heaviest in the history of the valley. The crop has been light, but the growers have been receiving from 4 to 5 cents a pound for their fruit at the orchards. The picking is now practically all done. The crop has been light, but the fruit has been of good quality. The market has been so keen and the fruit in such good shape that it was possible to sell a good big portion of the crop loose, thus saving the cost of packing. A large quantity of apples has recently been placed in cold storage, due largely to the influx of Idaho apples, which caused a slight break in the demand and the market of the local product. The keeping qualities of the Yucaipa apples are so good, however, that it was found possible to place as much of the crop in cold storage as was desired.

The growers are anticipating as large a net return, and possibly larger, from their crop this year than from the heavy crop of last year. The smaller crop means less cost in handling and a better price. Practically all the fruit has been sold with one handling, for there has been but a small amount of it used for cider and for apple butter and canning. There has been a short crop in all apple-producing sections of the Coast and the market has stood at top notch all the season. Within another month the apple associations will be able to make complete reports to the growers.

The University of Arizona, College of Agriculture advises the planting of fruit trees in the southern half of the State during early winter, instead of in February and March, as they start growth better. Strawberry plants are being set out, with the winter root and leaf vegetables, the varieties of berries favored being the Arizona Everbearing, the Klondyke, Gandy and Early Ozark.



A little thing like an irrigation ditch does not bother the big crawlers on this Imperial Valley ranch. Great areas are being prepared for alfalfa and barley planting in the Valley by power machinery.

The Effort to Determine the Limits of the Cotton Growing Zone in California: Results of This Year's Experiments.

Short staple cotton on the Fontana Ranch, San Bernardino county, photographed October 5. Pima and Durango were planted in test plots totalling 60 acres. Although none of the cotton was planted early enough, the short staple proved itself adapted to the section.

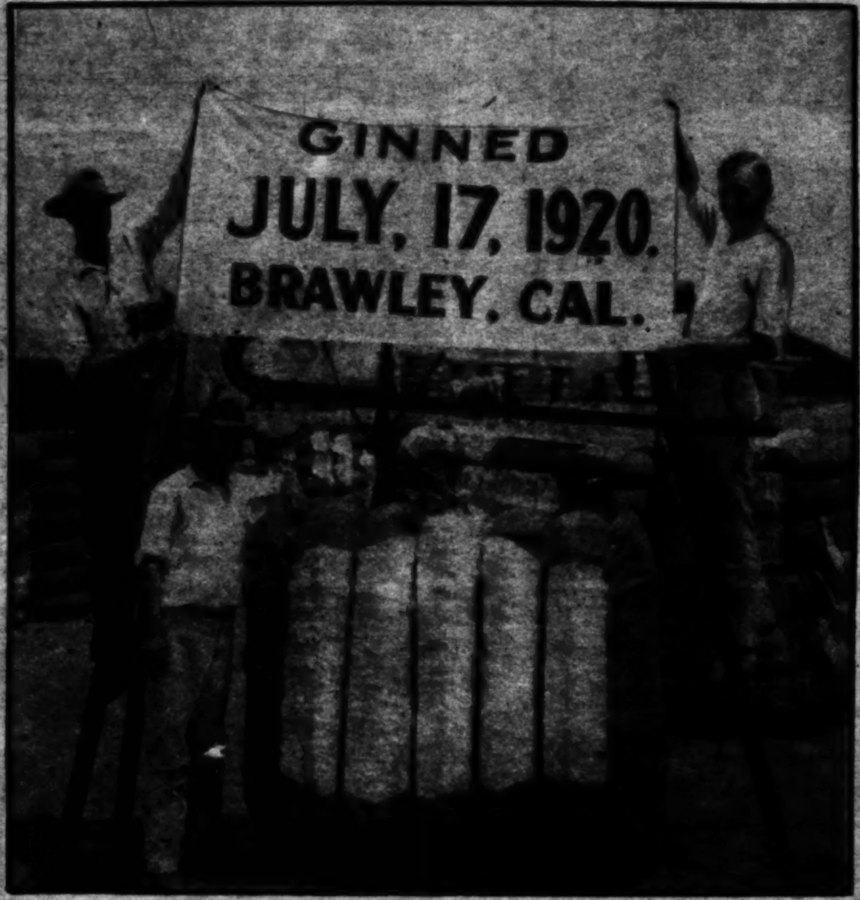
A stalk of Mebane cotton grown in the Perris district, photographed at picking time, early in October. Seventy-five open bolls on one plant. Frost came earlier than usual in Perris Valley this year, but the yield will run over half a bale to the acre.

A luxuriant row of Pima Egyptian cotton on the Denure Ranch, Zelzah, San Fernando Valley. Owing to lateness of planting, this cotton did not have time to mature and make a real test. At Chatsworth, near by, Pima, planted earlier, produced a fair crop.

Durango cotton near McFarland, Kern county. One of the test plots set out by interested growers. Pima cotton is a favorite with Kern county growers, 7459 acres being in this year.

Mebane cotton planted early in April at the State Hospital, Paton, San Bernardino county, photographed in midsummer. This patch has now been picked three times, and may run 400 pounds to the acre.

An early fall frost cut down this excellent row of Pima cotton planted by D. Van Dyke, the man in the picture, at Daggett, in the Mojave Desert.

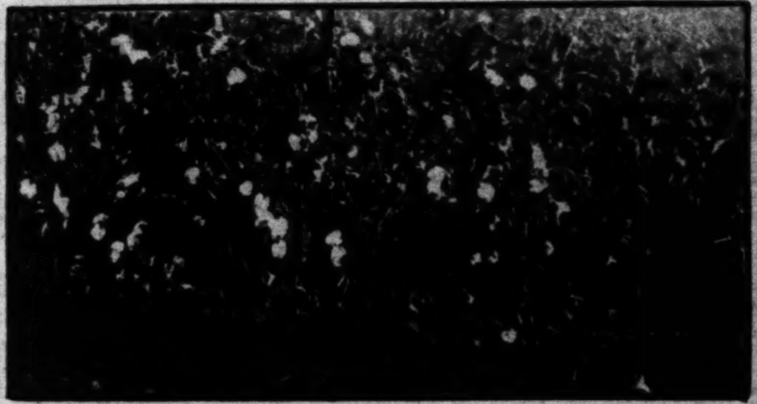


GINNED
JULY, 17, 1920.
BRAWLEY, CAL.

The first bale of cotton ginned in the Imperial Valley this year, turned out at a Brawley gin. This cotton was ready for spinning at a time when cotton, planted late in some of the test plots outside the valley, was just getting a good start. It is possible to raise two crops of cotton in some years from the same stalk in Imperial county.

A field of Pima cotton grown at Waco, Kern county, by Ben Jones, agricultural club member. Photographed in late summer. Some of the bolls are opening.

Pima cotton field in the Porterville district, Tulare county. Although about 2500 acres of cotton was planted this year, cool summer nights prevented full development of long staple.



Pima cotton stunted through lack of irrigation near Kearne Park, Fresno county. Other Egyptian stands show good crops. This is Fresno county's second year as a cotton growing district, with 3200 acres in crop.

Pima Egyptian cotton stalk grown in the Antelope Valley. The growing season proved too short for profitable production of any variety of cotton. Another trial will be made next year.

J. D. Radcliff and Durango cotton grown at Burbank; growth partially stopped by frost occurring on October 7.

Picking Pima cotton in the Coachella Valley. Growers are quite enthusiastic over the showing made by 400 acres of Egyptian cotton. There were 3000 acres of cotton grown in the valley in 1920.

A field of Mebane cotton in Perris Valley in midsummer. Good results from this year's planting on 1400 acres may mean that, with a rise in the present price of the staple, 5000 acres will be planted in 1921.

Cotton experimental plot of J. R. Johnson south of Ontario. Mr. Johnson planted 17 acres, trying all three staples. He believes that if cotton is planted early enough near Ontario it will produce a good crop.

Durango cotton grown near Ripley, Palo Verde Valley. About 400 acres of Pima cotton were planted in this Valley in 1920, with entire success. There are 10,000 acres of Durango and 12,500 acres of short staple

Well developed Pima plant, grown by C. O. Griffin of Lindsay, Tulare county. Most of the bolls opened before frost came.

Pima cotton on the Fairbanks Ranch near Redlands. Planted a month too late, and bolls did not open before frost put an end to growth. Mr. Fairbanks believes that, properly grown, cotton may be profitably produced in this district.
